—FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—The disorders peculiar to woman are the most delicate and difficult to be conducted to favourable terminations. Upon their early and judicious treatment hangs the momentous question, whether women enjoy strength, soundness, and cheerfulness, or pine away in weakness, disease, and misery. Holloway's inestimable preparations are the most reliable remedies for restoring weakened or suspended functions. The Ointment should be rubbed on the back and stomach for at least ten minutes every night and morning till restoration takes place, and perfect functional regularity be induced. While thus using the Ointment, Holloway's Pills should be freely taken, in order to purify the blood and cleanse the system, by which natural process all obstructions will be readily removed.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

giving an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that groomers only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success—in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact; but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England."—National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed—to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions, written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

POSTAGE.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of news from India, by way of Bombay, to the 27th of October. The Wagheers again furnish the only eventful item of intelligence. Baffling the vigilance, and overcoming the somewhat feeble resistance, of the Guicowar's troops they suddenly dashed out from the Gheer, and surprised the town of Korinar, thus getting possession of some hundreds of Enfield rifles and several pieces of artillery. As the treasury happened to be unusually well supplied, a large sum of money also fell into their hands, to which they inconspicuously added whatever valuable plunder they were able to discover in the shops. Their position is admitted to be a formidable one, and there is no doubt of their making a desperate defence. They are favoured, too, by the unhealthiness of the climate, and it is therefore to be feared that both loss of life and waste of public money will be the result of another miserable campaign against a small body of resolute marauders.

In all other parts of India profound tranquillity appears to prevail. The Nizam, indeed, is not so grateful as it was expected he would have been for the cession of certain districts lately made by the Supreme Government. His Highness is said to be dissatisfied with the retention of Berar by the British authorities, and its transference to the Nagpore Commission. Mr. Saunders, however, is reported to be on his way from Mominabad to Hyderabad, with a view to arrange matters in a personal conference with the Resident, but it is not very likely that any important addition will be made to the grants already conferred.

There has been much rejoicing in Calcutta, to celebrate the opening of the railway to Rajmahal, a distance of 202 miles, in consequence of which the circuitous route by the Sunderbuns may henceforth be avoided. In eight months' time a further section of sixty-two miles will be completed, and Bhaugulpore brought within a ten hours' journey from the Presidency. A grand ball was given at the Town-hall on the 17th October, at which 1,200 persons were present, including the Governor-general, the Commander-in-Chief, and all the élite of Calcutta society.

Sir Hugh Rose has won golden opinions by an admirable General Order, relating to the recreation, instruction, and employment in useful trades of the European soldiers. His Excellency proposes to encourage every means that will tend to prevent the moral and physical deterioration of that costly article, a British soldier in India. The order will be found elsewhere, and will be read with great satisfaction by all who take a genuine interest in the welfare of our brave, but somewhat imprudent countrymen.

The volunteer movement makes steady progress in Bombay. Upwards of fifty Europeans have already enrolled themselves, and it is expected that separate corps of Parsees and Eurasians will likewise be formed.

If the Hurkaru be correctly informed, the duty on cotton piece goods and on yarns and twist will be immediately reduced to five per cent. It is also in contemplation to simplify the system under which duties are levied. The agitation against the Income-tax seems to have died away for the present, and arrangements are said to be completed in each Presidency for the collection of the first half-year's impost.

THE BOMBAY MAIL.

The Delta, with the heavy portion of the above mail, left Malta on the morning of the 15th, and may be expected at Southampton on the 24th.

THE OUTWARD MAILS.

The Ripon (from Southampton, 4th November) reached Malta on the 14th, at five P.M., and left at eleven P.M., for Alexandria.

The Valetta (from Marseilles, 12th November) arrived at Malta on the 15th, at two P.M., and left at six P.M., for Alexandria.

The Bengal (with the London mail of 20-26th September) left Madras for Calcutta on the 25th October (one day early).

The Orissa (with the London mail of the 27th September) arrived at Bombay on the 26th October (correct day).

HOPE FOR THE EUROPEAN SOLDIER.

The discussion regarding soldiers' pets has produced the action for which we called. In a henceforth memorable order, the Commander-in-Chief has fully committed himself to the cause of the moral and social elevation of the European soldier in India. We accept it as a manifesto of a policy to be adhered to throughout Sir Hugh Rose's career at the head of the armies of India. We consider it a pledge that he will make the cause of the European private as emphatically his own, as Sir Henry Lawrence and Sir James Outram did in their more limited spheres. Should there be any tendency to forget or overlook the principles which for the first time are thus authoritatively enunciated, should the practical effects which ought in a few months to be visible, be obstructed by the indifference of subordinates, or the pressing claims of more attractive but not more important political questions, the army may rest assured that the press will not forget a document which is emphatically the charter of their social rights. Once let its provisions be carried out, once let the State, as an imperial duty, provide and maintain means of recreation, instruction, and employment for the soldier, and the next great step of marriage will follow. To that the order makes no allusion. It is a question to be decided by the home authorities, and for the whole British Army. But a reform must follow when the conversion of a regiment into a working as well as fighting colony has removed the only difficulty—expense. Meanwhile the first step has been taken. Officers commanding divisions are required to send in reports on the means of recreation and useful employment already in existence at each military station, and on the capabilities of each district for supplying them. The pledge is given that all such means will be placed on "a regular and permanent footing," and that workshops as a system will be introduced into the army, and "will be developed to the greatest possible extent." So far as a promise is concerned, nothing more full or frank could be desired. The order is wanting in but one point,—no date is fixed before which the returns must be sent in. There is here a loophole for delay or indifference which should be removed.

Fortunately for the soldier there is now a question before the Supreme Government which will at once test the spirit that has dictated the order. Are regiments henceforth to make up their own clothing, or are they not? The committee appointed by the War Office in England to inquire into the supply and payment of stores for India, recommended that from 1st April, 1862, the clothing for her Majesty's regiments in India should be made upon the spot, the materials being sent out from England. At present the grossest abuses prevail. Stores are sent which are not wanted, or they are not sent at the proper time, or they are of an inferior character. The Indian Government pays at a fixed rate per man, besides for additional articles of light clothing, and loses largely by the transaction, while the men are badly fitted or inadequately supplied. The order for reform has gone forth, and it is requisite that the indents for the materials required should be sent to England not later than this month. Even if it be ultimately decided, as suggested by the Indian Stores Committee, that all cloth, except woollens, should be purchased on the spot, tenders for the necessary quantity must be immediately called for. However the stores may be procured, India is henceforth to clothe 80,000 British soldiers, and to decide how this may be done most economically for the state and efficiently for the army. Sir Hugh Rose "can speak from his own experience as to the advantage of soldiers knowing trades;" he wishes to introduce workshops into every regiment; he is anxious to raise the moral condition of the men by useful occupation; and to enable them to gain a competency while in the service and a livelihood when they leave it. Here is an opportunity for making the experiment on a large scale, to the advantage of the soldier and the saving of the State. It rests with him to say whether these 80,000 shall by clothing themselves gain all the blessing which he describes, or whether the army is to be annoyed and the State defrauded as hitherto by clothing agencies innocent of all knowledge of book-keeping, presided over by officer-tailors ignorant of their business, and the nurseries of dishonesty among their native subordinates.

There are old officers in the Royal Army who will not recognise the fact that English soldiers have ceased to be nothing more than fighting machines; there are old colonels who would be horrified to command tailors and shoemakers, carpenters and artisans. They have no objection to the drunken animal of the old armies, who was ignorant if he had a soul and could handle only the musket. Now even if within the last forty years the English soldier had not been effected by the same revolution which has elevated the English artisan and peasant, yet he is placed in a different position in India. The society of his own class, the influences of English life, the climate which admits of repeated duty, all fill up the void which is left aching in this country. The absence of companionship, that heat unrelieved by any appliances, the discomforts of the best barracks, and above all the horrible idleness for eight long hours every day, tend to make the intelligent man mad, the ignorant man a beast. Yet to this, for the first time in our history, 80,000 men are to be exposed for many long years at a time. The small local army has hitherto borne these evils but badly; the comparatively few Queen's regiments have often sunk before them, as the records of mortality show, and that when war and its attendant excitement have been the normal condition of our Indian Empire. Now we import a large army, unacclimatised, that peace may be permanent. Who will answer for the health, the contentment, the esprit, the fighting power, of such a force, if the old system is to continue? We know what has been too often the result with the regiments of the Russian army placed in similar circumstances, and in a far better climate, at the outposts of civilisation.

Let Sir Hugh Rose begin at once to give the European regiments work in making up their own clothing. The plan succeeds in France, Belgium, and Piedmont, and in the English cavalry; it was a great success when allowed in Bengal twelve years ago. At first it might be optional, but gradually it should be the rule throughout the army, so that all clothing agencies might for ever be extinguished, and only a small establishment be maintained to receive or purchase the material, and to provide for recruits. Let the French rules also be adopted, so as to teach the men carefulness in keeping their clothes. The tunic which the British soldier wears out in a year lasts the Frenchman three and a-half, because he has a daily allowance of 10 centimes for repairing it, all of which he may save if he is careful. Labour is available in every station, the private's family will find employment, and machines may be made use of to supplement it. From tailoring, the system might easily spread to printing, and all the mechanical arts. We know one case where a private makes on an average 20s. a week by work in the regiment as a watchmaker; and of another where a man with a mathematical turn has invented an elaborate machine in which he believes he has secured perpetual motion. The skill and energy now lying dormant or wasted on debauchery in the British army need but to be evoked, to elevate its morale, improve its physique, diminish its hospital returns, and lessen its cost. Men who make double their pay by work need not be debarr'd from marriage, when their wives and children will not be a burden on the State. Nor need the extra income derived from his labour tempt the soldier to excess. A little healthy despotism in the case of the improvident would place their gains in the Savings Bank, ready for them when they take their discharge, to set them up in business, or provide comforts for their old age. Thus the army which now drains England of so large a number of her population only in most cases to demoralise them or make them useless idlers, would restore them to society as energetic and educated citizens.—Friend of India.

AMALGAMATION—THE PERSONAL QUESTION.

Those who take an interest in military statistics have not failed to remark the stagnation in promotion in all ranks of the Indian army, especially during the last few months. Since June but one officer has obtained his lieutenant colonelcy, and movements in the lower grades have been in the same proportion. It would not be difficult to account for a state of affairs not only unprecedented, but unnatural. It is simply attributable to the fact, that just now there are no voluntary retirements. Death vacancies alone hold out a prospect of promotion. Those who live in India, even though they may be without a chance of employment, prefer to retain their position in the army in the hope that even amalgamation may open out better prospects. It is natural they should argue that, thanks to the resolution of the House of Commons, they can in no case be in a worse position than they are at present. It will be at any moment in their power to claim their pensions. To claim them now, in the face of the difficulties which their continuance in the army presents to amalgamation, and within full hearing of the rumours of an increased retiring pension, would, it is asserted, be a simple act of folly. To hold on until the new scheme is announced, and then to accept it and remain, or to reject it and retire, would appear to be the policy upon which the greater portion of the older officers of the army are acting at the present moment.

If we have correctly stated the prevailing feeling of the army in this matter, the stagnation to which we have referred must be traced to the dilatory conduct of the Home authorities. How long, we may inquire, is the committee to hold secret conclave over the amalgamation scheme? Are the authorities determined to maintain a solemn silence as to their proceedings? Are officers to be compelled much longer to debate the chances of their future on the strength of rumours which are generally fallacious and of reports sometimes intended to deceive? These are questions to which it behoves a great Government dealing with a deserving body of their own servants to give a practical reply. In such a case as this, silence is torture. The army has a right to expect that within four-and-twenty hours of the receipt by the Government of the amalgamation scheme, its details should be published for general information. It is for this scheme that promotion waits, for this that deserving old officers, eager to retire, encounter the perils of another hot season, for this that an aspiring subaltern is compelled to chain his hopes and content himself with the most spirit-levelling of routine duties, for this that every ear is bent with earnest expectation of good tidings. We do not doubt the difficulties attendant upon a vast scheme of amalgamation, but what we wonder at is that the authorities do not see that those difficulties are immeasurably increased by delay. That which would appear the most insurmountable of all is the condition and disposal of the old officers. But let the Home Government only decide upon a liberal measure in this respect, and they may be very sure that a liberal measure would be in its results an economical measure, and that difficulty would vanish. An increased retiring pension would offer temptations which few could withstand. We believe that not only would the Government gain by such an arrangement, but they would by it be enabled to settle the whole question of amalgamation on terms at which no man could cavil. As the army is now constituted such an arrangement would be next to impossible. There may be a minority that have been lucky, but certainly a large majority of Indian officers have been far less fortunate in their promotion than their comrades in the Royal army. To bring about an amalgamation on anything like equal terms, it is necessary that the present race of field officers should be liberally provided for. Their retirement would make the labours of the Amalgamation Committee more an exercise of ingenious and skilful calculation than, as now, an encounter with a difficulty which presents so many obstacles at the very outset,

The plan, then, which we hope will be recommended to Sir Charles Wood by the committee would consist of the division of the amalgamation scheme into two parts. By the first, to be promulgated at once, a pension considerably higher than that of their rank should be offered to all officers who had served a certain number of years in India, or who were even entitled to a retiring allowance. This portion of the plan if conceived in a liberal spirit would, we are certain, at once relieve the army from the reproach of stagnation. Unless the accounts which we receive from all parts of India are merely wordy ebullitions not intended to be carried into practice, an announcement of this nature would cause retirements on a scale certainly unprecedented, though not larger than the exigencies of the epoch require. Officers would perceive that in reality but little option was left them in the matter. To retire or to remain unemployed would be the questions to which they would be called to reply, and with retirement gilded by a pension increased to an extent greater than that to which an officer before the mutiny would have aspired, few can doubt the alternative at which the greater number would grasp.

We have no positive information before us that such a plan as we have here sketched will be adopted. We know, however, that it has been talked about. We know that it would smooth away difficulties now almost insurmountable. We know that it would reconcile to their new position a body of men whose interests have been somewhat carelessly considered in the late arrangements. We know that if properly followed up it would tend to an amalgamation of interest as well as of armies, and knowing this, we must express our emphatic hope that it may be adopted. In any case it is desirable that the caution conveyed in the maiden speech of Lord Clyde should not be lost sight of. Whatever is to be, should be done at once. One result of delay we have alluded to in these remarks, but this is not its only or most mischievous offspring. To calm the minds of all, to induce a conviction that the promises of the Government are really to be depended upon to remove the prevalent feeling of doubt and of mistrust, it is necessary that the action of the Government should be speedy. The emphatic declaration of Sir James Elphinstone in the House of Commons has not yet been forgotten. Some demonstration of the actual policy of the Home Government is necessary in the face of this assertion, made by a gentleman of honour and of reputation, that the first act of the ministry after his service had been brought under the direct authority of the Crown, was to confiscate a fund to which he had paid £3,000. Assertions of this nature are not lightly made, nor are they lightly regarded. If it were only, then, to counterbalance the effect which so portentous a revelation must create, we earnestly hope that the Government of Lord Canning will, at the earliest moment, communicate its knowledge of the coming scheme to the public at large.—Friend of India.

THE VALUE OF LIFE IN THE THREE CAPITALS.

Silently and since 1833, with almost colonial rapidity, have the cities of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras grown up into their present magnitude, and accumulated their present wealth. In the tropics everything is rapid, progress and decay are alike speedy. While London is the result of centuries of accretion, Calcutta is the fruit of fifty years' development. But while London or Liverpool, if abandoned to-morrow, would take centuries to be obliterated, Calcutta and Bombay would be hidden under dense jungle in a few years. Vast as is the wealth and mighty the population stored up in the presidency cities, they have attained only the beginning of a career in the course of which they must double themselves in a decade. Of the two northern capitals it may be said that, peace being granted, there is no limit to the progress which they will make when the railways pour down the wealth of the Ganges valley and the cotton of Berar and Ahmedabad into their storehouses. As yet India is a sealed treasury, of which they are the doors. We boast of the seventy millions of trade which pass through the three cities, but we know nothing of the various steps of their growth, or of the details of their present condition. No proper census has ever been taken of their inhabitants, no registry formed of the births and deaths within them. Their inhabitants live in ignorance of everything regarding themselves as citizens except that their number is increasing, that the graveyards are becoming full, that house-rents are inordinate, and the price of the necessities of life unprecedently high. None of the usual civilised precautions to save life by attention to physiological laws, or to prevent its secret destruction by a system of responsible registration, are adopted. Children are born, men and women die, and the dead are put quickly out of sight; the native sick are carried to the banks of sacred streams and are speedily suffocated with mud and reduced to ashes without any of the safeguards which the law of England and of every civilised country imposes and enforces. Commissioners of police exercise only an imperfect supervision, commissioners of the municipality content themselves with writing an annual remonstrance, and the Legislature, which by a word might remove the difficulty, looks on with easy indifference.

We wish to know how many deaths took place in 1859 in the three capitals, in what classes, during what months, from what causes; and what was the percentage to the whole population. To find anything but an imperfect approach to this is impossible. In the first place no one knows what the population of the cities is. That of Madras was "assumed" at 720,000, while a so-called census of Bombay in 1849 placed the numbers at 566,119, and of Calcutta in 1850 at 413,182. That is, the smaller the city and the less its trade and political importance, the greater was its population. Our own belief is that in 1860 the fixed population of Calcutta and its suburbs is not under one million; in the native bazaars and streets the people are packed. If we place Bombay as of nearly the same wealth and of considerably less political importance at 800,000, and Madras at half a million, we may have approximate numbers. For the mortality in 1859 we turn to confessedly imperfect returns by the Commissioners of Police in Calcutta and Madras, and to much more accurate lists by Dr. Leith in Bombay. Those of Madras, with an admirable contempt for details, do not distinguish between classes, but merely give the total number of deaths in each month.

I.—CALCUTTA.

Europeans, East Indians, and Armenians...
Europeans, East Indians, and Armenians...	935
Chinese and Malays	23
Hindoos	9,796
Mahomedans	4,146

Of the 958 there were 257 sailors and soldiers not belonging to the fixed population; 280 were females, and 678 males. The causes of death of the Christians are badly classified, 347 being set down as "various." Of the three principal diseases defined, cholera carried off 183; dysentery 163; and fever 136. In the fixed Christian population in 1858, the number of deaths was 672 against 701 in 1859; while, owing to the naval brigades and the number of troops, the deaths among sailors and soldiers were 1,029 in 1858 against 257 in 1859. We have records of the mortality of Christians in Calcutta from 1759 to 1800, during which period the average of deaths was 164 annually. In half a century the mortality has thus risen from 164 to 935, but these figures lose their value from our ignorance of the number of the Christian population at any period. The deaths are probably fewer now than they were last century proportionally. In 1859 the most deadly months among the Europeans were May and July, though a long average would, we believe, give September and October. Among pure Europeans there were 118 deaths but 182 births. Of the natives 4,676 were carried off by cholera, against 3,835 the previous year, and only 54 by small-pox against 3,177 the previous year.

II.—BOMBAY.

Europeans	333
Indo ditto	46
Native Christians	504
Jews	883
Parsees	59
Hindoos	710
Mahomedans	9,328
Negroes and caste unknown	3,099
Stillborn	130

Of these fever carried off 7,010; cholera, 1,955; dysentery and bowel complaints generally, 1,499; cachexy and debility, 1,031; and small-pox, 371. The greatest mortality was in June, and the least in October. We have no means of further distinguishing between natives and Europeans in the case of Bombay.

III.—MADRAS.

Males	3,299
Females	3,183
Children under twelve	3,784
				10,266

Cholera carried off 1,061 of these. The most deadly months were January, February, and March; the number of deaths in the others did not vary much. As the general result of these statistics we find the mortality of the three cities in 1859 to have been—

	Christians.	Total.
Calcutta	935	14,900
Bombay	883	14,540
Madras	not given	10,266

As the Bombay figures may be really trusted, and the Calcutta figures can err only by being too small from omissions, we may arrive at the proportionate populations of the three towns, assuming that of Calcutta as 800,000—certainly not above the mark—

	Population.
Calcutta	800,000
Madras	551,194

As this gives a percentage of mortality of only 1-8635, which, though higher than the London rate, is somewhat lower than the rate of subscribers to the covenanted and uncovenanted funds, we believe all the returns are below the actual facts.

The statistics are drawn up on no uniform principle, and give no uniform details. They are so defective that for either scientific or practical purposes they are useless. Henceforth they should be made out on the same plan. They show us the necessity for a legal registration of births and deaths, and for an accurate census. Even with natives neither would be impossible in the presidency towns. The income and license-tax schedules will soon give us an idea of their income and trades; the value of the landed property we know already. We again urge the Government to order a census; we would again point out the necessity for uniform and detailed statistics of the whole empire.—Friend of India.

CULTIVATION OF FLAX.—The Belfast Committee of Commerce have sent out to the Punjab a Mr. Whiting for the purpose of cultivating flax, and Government has been requested to afford him any assistance that he may require. Mr. Whiting intends making Sealkote the scene of his operations, which for the first year will be restricted to practical experiments and instructing the natives in the English style of growing flax, &c. Mr. Whiting has had great experience, and will no doubt succeed in his attempt to cultivate flax, in which case friends across the channel will have reason to be grateful for the important service he will have rendered them.

TAX ON SALARIES.—About one lakh and ten thousand rupees were realised by Government in all August, on account of the Income-tax deducted from salaries of the officers who are paid by the Calcutta Treasury, and also from interest on the loans that fell due on the 31st July and 30th August last respectively.

INCOME-TAX FOR THE PUNJAB, it is stated, is intended to come into operation from the 1st of November next, and the Lieut. governor calls upon all classes of the community to acquaint themselves with the new laws by which the taxes will be imposed, and to aid in their equitable assessment and collection; and warns those who may be found guilty of misrepresenting the designs of Government with severe punishment.

SIMILIA SIMILIBUS.—An Uncovenanted Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab having applied for an increase to his salary, so that it may equal the allowance drawn by Covenanted Officers of the same class, has had his application sanctioned. Lord Canning has agreed in opinion with the Lieut. Governor of the Punjab, that it is an undue discouragement to Officers of the Uncovenanted Service, who, after serving with credit for some years, having passed the necessary examinations, and being actually appointed to the duties of Assistant Commissioner, to find that the additional allowance of Rs. 100 per month given to Covenanted Officers is withheld from them, and they are left as regards emoluments just where they were, though new and onerous duties are imposed on them. He has therefore been pleased, notwithstanding the present depressed condition of the finances, to remove a distinction the more odious because in a limited service it is more prominent.

DEATH OF MR. R. H. RATTRAY.—Another of the civilians of the old régime who made India their home has just passed away, and we must devote a few lines to his memory. Mr. Robert Haldane Rattray was born in November, 1781, and though at first intended for the naval service, the offer of a writership tempted him to India. He arrived in Calcutta in the end of 1800, since which, with the exception of a short visit to the Cape, he has never left it, being constant in his attendance to the duties of the various offices he held until 1849, when he retired on his annuity, age and infirmities compelling him to resign, as he could no longer return the same number of cases as his juniors, though the heaviest records fell to his lot. On this occasion Lord Dalhousie addressed a most complimentary letter to him, on the candid and honourable part he had acted. Mr. Rattray served through the various grades of the service at Sarun, Tirhoot, Mirzapore, Benares, and Bareilly, until he reached the Sudder of Calcutta, evincing in all superior qualifications and zeal in the public service. At Mirzapore he suppressed one of those extraordinary displays of passive resistance which can make the Hindoo so successful over his conqueror or oppressor, pacifying the people, and preventing all violence. "He was a public functionary of ability and talent," says the India Review, "holding clear and just views of his responsible situation, and of an independent and manly character." To an affability of deportment he added a benevolence which ensured him the esteem of all who knew him, while as a Government servant we have always understood he was an ornament to the Civil Service.—Englishman.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—The Englishman announces the death of Mr. R. F. Waller, of the P. and O. Company's service, by drowning. Mr. Waller was bathing in a tank at Entally, which he had swam across; on his return, in the middle of the tank, he suddenly exclaimed "save me!" and sank. A gentleman passing called on some natives to aid him, and offered Rs. 100, as he could not swim himself, but the only answer was a general flight, and poor Mr. Waller, after coming once more to the surface, sank to rise no more. His body was found the following evening.

GENERAL HEARSEY, after 51 years' service, retires to England very shortly, to seek that rest which an actively spent life naturally requires and deserves.

RAJA TEJ SING.—The Governor general has presented to Raja Tej Sing the gardens at Chilianwala, for his services in protecting Europeans at Sealkote during the mutiny of the regiments in the Punjab.

MR. BRUNTON, C.E.—The decision of the Directors of the Punjab Railway Company has been adverse to Mr. Brunton, the late Chief Engineer of the line, and that gentleman has been deprived of his appointment and subjected to confiscation of salary during the period of his suspension from office. This decision, however, has been come to prematurely, and before the report of the Governor-general had been received; and it is by no means improbable that the next mail may bring out an order to reinstate Mr. Brunton.—Mofussilite.

AN INDIAN BELLE.—"Look at a lady in full dress. Her face is painted with saffron. Perhaps a wreath of pale flowers encircles her head. For both show and service she has hair fastenings, pins or circles of precious metal; and behind and below them is the substantial tuft, or other ornament, including a brave coronal. A piece of stick having, as a locum tenens is made to give place to his better, been taken out of an orifice in the right side of the nose, a jewel is now suspended from that useful member. The ear, pierced in several places, is richly laden; in its upper edge are little rings, and minute representations of cocoa nuts and buds and flowers, and the inferior lobe, distended by hard service, holds rings of various sizes. Round the neck is a flat collar set with stones; and beneath this are bead-necklaces of glass and coral, and golden or silver chains of divers patterns, forming a rich succession of circles upon the neck and shoulders and bosom. About the waist is a girdle of precious metal, having bells or tassels of the same, which sometimes serves to fasten as well as set off the dress. Upon her wrists and arms the lady wears bracelets and bangles of gold or silver, or glass or shell; and her feet are adorned with toe-rings, and with anklets that glitter and tinkle."—The Rev. E. J. Robinson in the "Englishman".

THE CAMP OF HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR, North-West Provinces, will be at the following stations on the dates indicated:—Moradabad, October 27th; Allypore, November 10th; Muttra, November 15th; Bhurtpore, November 23rd; Agra, December 4th; Mynpoory, November 19th, and Etawah, November 25th.

SEETAPORE, Oct. 7.—The fine weather may now be said to have fairly set in; during the last ten days we have had no rain. The arrival at this station of Brig.-general R. Walpole, K.C.B., was announced on Friday morning by a salute of 11 guns being fired, and his departure, yesterday afternoon, by a similar salute. During the two days the Brig.-general was here he inspected the troops, barracks, hospitals, &c. Some good horse racing came off each afternoon, none but gentleman riders being allowed. Another treat is to be given to-morrow evening at the Regimental Theatre of Her Majesty's 90th Light Infantry. The bill of fare is a good one; viz., commencing with "Used Up," followed by "The Ethiopian Serenaders," and concluding with "My Wife's Second Floor." A bumping house is expected. It is reported that no change will take place in troops at the station this season, but it is probable that a portion of them will go to Lucknow shortly, for three or four months, for the purpose of forming a part of the "Camp of Instruction." The pleasure grounds, which already have a beautiful appearance, will soon be completed. The station continues very healthy, and the European portion of the troops look remarkably well.—Delhi Gazette.

"DR. WALKER," says the Delhi Gazette, "has been appointed to succeed Dr. Buist. The Gazette notification is not out yet, but the thing is settled. He is said to be possessed of all the requisite qualifications necessary for a superintendent of a press, and of a happy knack of being able to make one man do the work of two or three. Under his guidance, therefore, the Government may hope to attain to some perfection in their printing arrangements, which have hitherto proved so unsuccessful."

ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL.—At a meeting of the society held on the 3rd October, A. Grote, Esq., President, in the chair, presentations were received. The council report the following nominations to fill the six vacancies on the list of honorary members:—1. Dr. Weber is one of the most eminent Sanskrit scholars of Germany. He has particularly devoted himself to the study of the White Yujur Veda, and he has the enviable distinction of having edited an entire series, comprising, "The Sanhitta of the Hymns, the accompanying Satupatta, Brahmana, and the Ritual Sutras of Katyayana." Besides, the great work, his four volumes of Indische Studien abound with new and valuable information in reference to the Vedic period of Hindu literature. 2. E. Thomas, Esq., as the author of valuable papers in our journal, and in those of the Bengal Asiatic Numismatic Societies, on several series of Asiatic medals, and more especially on those series which contribute to the early history of India; and as the editor of "Prinsep's Indian Antiquities." 3. Mr. Stanislaus Julien, whose researches in the history and antiquities of China have raised him among the most distinguished Orientalists of the present day. His contributions to the "Journal Asiatique" are numerous and of great interest. Among his separate publications may be noticed his travels and life of Kienun Thsang—"Philosophos; L'Histoire du Cercle de Craie," and "Le Livre des Recompasses et des Peines." They are works of consummate erudition, and any one of them is sufficient to establish the character of a scholar. 4. Dr. Aloys Sprenger, as an Arabic scholar of celebrity, and as a valuable contributor in that capacity to early Mohammedan history, and as now engaged on what promises to be the best extant biography of Mohammed. 5. Dr. White, as a valuable contributor to our knowledge of Indian Botany, and more especially of that of the Peninsula and the Neigherries. 6. Colonel George Everest, Fellow of the Royal Society, formerly of the Bengal Artillery, Surveyor-General of India, and Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India from 1823 to 1843, and Surveyor-General from 1830 to 1843. Of the many important works executed under Col. Everest's direction, the most important, and that by which he will be best known to posterity, is the northern portion of the Great Meridional Arc of India comprised between the Damasgida and Dehra Dhoon base lines, 11½ degrees in length, the account of the measurement of which was published by himself in 1847. The whole Indian Arc is equal to 21 deg., 21 min., 18 sec., or about 1,400 miles. No Geodetic measure in any part of the world surpasses or perhaps equals, in accuracy, this splendid achievement. By the light it throws on researches into the figure and dimensions of the earth, it forms one of the most valuable contributions to that branch of science which we possess, whilst at the same time it constitutes a foundation for the geography of Northern India, the integrity of which must for ever stand unquestioned. Colonel Everest reduced the whole system of the great national survey of India to order, and established the fixed basis on which the geography of India now rests. His determination of amplitudes of the two northern sections of the great Meridional Arc by means of simultaneous observations taken to the same stars with counterpart circular instruments, and his method of determining the celestial azimuth, still practised, may be considered the most perfect modes of obtaining an astronomical element known to science.—Englishman.

A "DELHI INSTITUTE."—A public meeting has been held at Delhi, for the purpose of getting up a "Delhi Institute," or a Society for establishing lecture rooms, museum, library, &c. It is expected that Government will assist in providing a suitable building. Nearly Rs. 1,000 in donations, and Rs. 150 in monthly subscriptions were promised. The chair was taken by the Brigadier. At a subsequent meeting of the committee it was resolved to get up a series of winter lectures, and to subscribe for several reviews, periodicals, &c.

RAWUL PINDEE, Oct. 13.—The khurreef crops have completely failed, and unless we have rain soon, so as to ensure a good rubbee harvest, the Government will, I think, have to make large remissions of the revenue demand. The authorities at last are bestirring themselves for the immediate construction of a bridge over the Leb. The loss of the poor Parsee merchant has no doubt a good deal to do with the present active measures, but had the bridge been built six years ago it would have saved the lives of at least twenty men and women, for there is not a year when half a dozen or more individuals are not lost in trying to cross the stream after heavy rain. A man has just been apprehended at Murree for using highly inflammatory and seditious language against the Government. He is a native of Gwalior, and has been sent down from this place to Delhi, to be forwarded thence to his home. He has been to Mecca, for he is a Hajee, and I am informed that he was for a long time a resident of Cashmere. He came to Murree a few years ago, where he first set himself up as a great saint or peer, and was ostensibly very zealous in the performance of his religious duties, so much so that he was highly respected for a time by all the Mahomedans of the place, until they found him out to be an abandoned wretch and addicted to most horrible practices. He was by profession a cloth merchant, but occasionally practised as a hukeem, and some say as an alchemist! He said that our dispensaries are places where sick people receive food forbidden by the Koran to be eaten, just with a view to undermine their religion. He gave out as a prophecy that India was to be invaded in six months. He also asserted that railroads and paper currency were being introduced with the object of enabling the Government to abstract all the wealth and grain of the country, after which the people would be given the choice of becoming Christians or starving. To crown all, the fellow declared that the ground had opened in the temple at Mecca, and a voice proceeding from the Kaaba had proclaimed that in six months the Mahomedans would prevail.—Delhi Gazette.

LOSS OF THE "OLIVER PUTMAN."—Accounts have reach us (Hurkaru) regarding the abandonment at sea of the American ship Oliver Putman, Captain Smith, on the 27th July last, in lat. 32-40 S., long. 49-0 E. The vessel was bound to Calcutta from Liverpool, laden with a cargo of salt. On the 11th day of July she commenced to leak, and on the day she was abandoned she became quite unmanageable, the salt having dissolved in the hold, that in the 'tween decks being as solid as a rock. The vessel having become very crank in consequence, a portion of the salt was hove down into the hold, without removing the effect; the leak gaining on the vessel, and the ship's company being exhausted from constant work at the pumps, she had to be abandoned as stated above. The carpenter and six of the crew in the long boat were picked up by a French barque seven days after they quitted the vessel, and taken to the Mauritius, from whence they have been brought round here. Nothing is known of the master, the officers, and the remainder of the crew—the seven men picked up having been ordered into the long-boat at 5 P.M. of the 27th to keep her clear of the ship. A heavy sea running at the time, the boat drifted away some four miles to windward. At 8 P.M. she ran down and hailed the ship; no answer having been returned, and no boats being alongside, they took it for granted that the rest of the hands had quitted her.

FYZABAD, Oct. 15.—The rains are now completely over, and the weather has become delightfully cool, which indicates the approach of an early winter. The fear that has been entertained of late of there being a low crop this year is now all gone, and everything bids fair to the hopes of the cultivator. The panic that prevailed here for some time among the poorer classes of the natives from the rumours of large numbers of starved men coming into Oude from the dearth-stricken provinces has now perfectly subsided, and hence the corn-dealers no more manifest any disposition to cheat the public.

THE 6TH DRAGOON GUARDS are to go to England this cold season, on being relieved by the 3rd Dragoon Guards.

"UP AT THE HILLS."—A sad case of elopement in the hills of Mussoorie will probably afford work to the gentlemen of the long robe.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE PERGUNNAH OF BIROWLEE (Cis Sutlej) has been given to the Raja of Kemthul as a reward for the protection he extended to some ladies in the rebellion.

RELIGIOUS MANIA.—An officer of the Royal Artillery who served in General Whitlock's campaign, and was present at one of the most conspicuous successes of that gallant force, the storming of the Punwaree Heights, has become violently insane. This unfortunate gentleman had taken up extreme religious views for some time past, and latterly had dwelt, as we are informed, to a morbid extent on the statements of prophecy, and the condition of the native population. And in conjunction with other views—personal and general—he had latterly manifested a desire to provoke a collision with the ministers of the Church of England—to one of whom he sent an anonymous letter of a wild tenor, which, however, only elicited a kind reply the day before his insanity was ascertained. An accession of delirious violence then came on, and it was necessary to engage five attendants to restrain the patient. After the lapse of some days the afflicted gentleman, who was greatly esteemed by many as a kind and amiable comrade, was removed to the most suitable accommodation which could be procured at Trimulgherry—where every possible want for any ordinary disease has been provided for in the magnificent building assigned for the new European hospital. The attack which we have noticed, is said to be of too pronounced a character to admit of any hope of recovery without early change of scene and association, and a prompt recourse to an European climate. —Poona Observer.

SPORT.—The lovers of sporting on the hills will be glad to hear that the shooting season has commenced. We understand that the first woodcock was shot on the 11th October, by Mr. G. Dawson at Holicul, and the second by Colonel Freeman on the 13th, in the neighbourhood of Dodabet. Snipe also appears plentiful, the first having been shot on the 31st August, since which date one gentleman has bagged six and a half brace. The fact of the first woodcock having been shot so far to the east of Ootacamund, has caused some surprise to the old guns, as hitherto they have enjoyed unrivalled the honour of killing the first in the immediate vicinity of this station.

THE ALLEGED MURDER IN THE NEILOHERIES.—The body of Captain Green was disinterred on the morning of Thursday, the 11th October, and conveyed from the churchyard of St. Stephen's to the Dispensary. The authorities and medical men of the station were assembled at an early hour on the morning of that day on Framjees' Hill, and public expectation was rife as to the cause of the singular occurrence. Rumour with its many tongues has ever since been busy, and of course a hundred versions of the object involved in the strange incident has got abroad. That however the affair was improvised, and the ashes of the dead rooted up "Pro re nata," cannot be gainsayed. We will, as in duty bound, endeavour to unravel the mystery as far as we have been able to do so, from the conflicting statements which have reached us. It would appear that the exhumation of the body of Captain Green (which had been interred since the 12th of September), was for the avowed purpose of making another examination of the wounds. A difference of opinion, it would appear, was expressed as to the particular locality of the wounds inflicted on the body, some declaring that the wounds were situated on the front part of the chest, towards the left shoulder, while others described them as having been observed on the left side of the chest, extending from the left armpit downwards. One or two individuals even went so far as to declare that there was an appearance of a wound on deceased's throat, which latter had not been noticed on the previous professional examination the body had twice undergone. We may also observe, that opinions as varied and conflicting were held as to the nature of the wounds inflicted, some maintaining that they were gunshot, while others asserted they were produced both by gunshot and a sharp-cutting instrument. This suggested to the police an experiment which it was supposed would throw considerable light on the subject. It would appear that one of the barrels of the gun discovered near Captain Green's corpse, was found to be loaded with an Eley's cartridge, together with a large quantity of snipe shot placed above it, leading to the probable inference that the empty barrel was likewise thus charged. A gun was accordingly similarly loaded, placed in close contact with a leg of mutton, and discharged; the result was, a round or rather oval opening was formed at that part of the meat in immediate contact with the muzzle of the gun, and more than one vertical gaping wound from three to four inches wide at the points where the shot passed out; these last named wounds were found to be perfectly regular as if produced by a knife, and unlike the passage of shot or ball. This would appear to have altered that opinion hitherto held of a murder having been committed, and it was to elucidate this point by further investigation that the body of Captain Green was exhumed. We believe, however, that Drs. Lowe and Graskie are satisfied that a murder was perpetrated, and that Captain Green did not take his own life. Of course all this is but hearsay evidence, which will either be confirmed or refuted by more authentic information; meanwhile the reticence of the authorities and those best informed, necessitates our present recital of the statements we have been able to gather on the subject. We have no doubt, however, that the authorities have good reasons for their present silence; time will tell.—Eclectic.

LAND IN THE NEILGHERRIES.—The Board of Revenue recently submitted to Government an application from Colonel Godfrey for 200 acres of land in the Neilgherries for a timber and fuel plantation. The collector suggested a grant of 100 acres with exemption from taxation for three years, and thereafter a quit rent of eight annas per acre if the land be used solely for planting or pasturage, but the Board of Revenue recommended the grant of the whole extent applied for without any reduction of the established rate of one rupee an acre, at the same time proposing exemption for the first four years. In their order the Government authorise and direct the collector to put up the whole 200 acres on the terms fixed in the Order of the 4th April, 1860, for land for farms and plantation on the Neilgherries, viz., to be sold by auction without any upset price, subject to a tax of one rupee an acre. The terms are moderate, and the Government see no cause whatever for relaxing them. Government note that a very few months ago the Board refused to recommend relaxation in a similar case where the terms were more stringent than they are at present.—Madras Times.

CINCHONA PLANTS.—The Secretary of State informed the Madras Government on the 17th of August, that Mr. Markham, who was sent to South America last December to procure a supply of the quinine-yielding Cinchona plants for introduction into India, had arrived in England with a supply of both varieties of the C. Calisaya, and also a few plants of the C. Crata, and C. Micrantha. Of these plants 216 were already throwing out shoots and fifty-three more still retained life, being sixty per cent. of the number originally planted in the Warden cases in the Peruvian port of Islay. Sir C. Wood added that Mr. Markham was to sail for Calicut on the 27th of August, and requested that preparations for the reception of the plants on the Neilgherries might at once be made, and that funds for Mr. Markham's expenses might be provided. Before the receipt of this despatch Mr. Melvor, the Superintendent of the Ootacamund garden, and Dr. Cleghorn, with reference to an order of Government on the subject, had suggested that fifty acres should be set apart for the plants, that ten acres should be prepared immediately, and that Rs. 2,000 should be granted on account. These suggestions were approved by Government on the 28th September.—Athenæum.

HYDERABAD, Sept. 30.—An answer from the Government of India to the modified proposals of the Nizam's Government in regard to the terms of the restitution of a portion of the assigned districts has been received. The Government of India will not admit of any modification of the terms offered by it, and considering that a great benefit is conferred on the Nizam's Government, the rejection of the proposed modification can scarcely be deemed a hardship, especially as in the proposal the Nizam's Government seeks for nothing essential, and loses sight of the substance to grasp at a shadow. That which seems to excite the greatest dissatisfaction (none in the Minister, probably, inasmuch as he had rather that the Nizam and his court had been gratified) is, that the English Government will not accede to the proposal of placing the districts which it retains for the pay of the contingent, under the management of the Resident of Hyderabad for the time being, instead of the Commissioner of Nagpore. You ask, not the common people, but the learned, the great, and the sahookars, "Of what public consequence can this be to the Nizam's Government?" You are told that "in this arrangement they understand a great severance of the districts from the Nizam's, and the transfer of the proprietary right in them to the English Government." You tell them that "the British Government has explicitly told the Nizam that the treaty of 1853 will remain untouched; the prominent condition in it is that the sovereignty of the assigned district is vested in the Nizam. What in the new arrangement, regarding the transfer of its management, can possibly be considered as superseding that compact? Besides, the question has been put to the English Government, as to whether the Nizam's sovereignty will be affected by the new arrangement, and a direct and distinct answer has been given by that Government in the negative." They reply "the new arrangement will afford you the means of usurping the country." I asked them "what obstruction, if the management of the revenues of the districts were placed under the Resident, could that afford against treacherous or forcible usurpation?" Their reply is, Khooda jané. (God knows.) The next objection is that the Hyderabad contingent, deriving its pay from the Commissioner of Nagpore, will not be subordinate to the Resident, and render no service to the Nizam's government. This observation will be incomprehensible to those not acquainted with the system and practices prevailing in Native Governments. The obedience of the troops is given not so immediately to the Government which pays them as to the person from whom they receive their pay. You meet this by informing them that neither Nagpore, nor Hyderabad, nor the revenues of any other special locality will be employed to pay these troops, but the aggregate funds of the English Government, and that the troops of that Government pay obedience to none but such as are placed in command over them. Besides, the treaty of 1853 provides that not only the Hyderabad contingent shall serve the Nizam, but any and every part of the British forces, whose services it may be expedient to use. You do not satisfy them, and their never-ending remark is, "You are all powerful and do as you please; it would have been easy for you to have gratified the Nizam." The reply is, "We have endeavoured to do so essentially, and we are sorry we are unsuccessful." The offer to restore the districts was received at first by all with a delight not to be mistaken. This feeling was soon changed. I am talking of the community, and not of the parties constituting the Executive Government, nor of the Nizam, whose opinions are not known, and the grievance was got out of the agitation of the question: "The British Government gives nothing to the Nizam but what is his own, and by what right does it retain any portion of the districts? we will pay our own contingent." The obvious reply to this is, "You did not do so; from the moment that the arrangements for their regular payment with William Palmer and Co. ceased, they never were paid." Here a clamour is raised, "Will you not trust the Nizam's Government, which has rendered you great services and protected your lives? You shall have the security of sahookars." The prop of a broken reed, unless, as it is to be hoped, that these sahookars, who have manfully maintained this Government to the impairing of their credit in the hope of being repaid by the revenues of the assigned districts, will not now be disappointed by their appropriation to any other purpose than that of the general government of the Nizam. I do not know what answer the British Government has given to any other of the propositions submitted by the Nizam's. I conclude there were other propositions, but as nothing is heard of them, I infer they are comprehended within the pale of the proposals of the English Government; for its reply, I understand, is, that it will alter nothing in the conditions proposed to the Nizam for the restitution of a portion of the assigned districts.—Calcutta Englishman.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. EDWARD IRONSIDE GRANT has been appointed acting superintendent of police at Nasick. Mr. Grant has considerable knowledge of the country and its people, and will, we have no doubt, reflect credit upon his nomination.

INCOME-TAX ASSESSORS.—We understand that the following division of labour among the Income-tax assessors of the island has been made by the Commissioners. Mr. Dossabhoj Framjee will assess all persons resident in the Fort; Mr. Moosa Khan the districts of Mazagon and Omercarry; and Mr. Faulkner the Mandavee district, the Esplanade, and Colaba. The speciality of each assessor has, we believe, been wisely consulted in this arrangement. The most troublesome part of the island has fallen to Mr. Faulkner's lot, upon whom will devolve the assessment of the great body of native merchants and bankers. His long experience at the Mandavee Bunder, personal knowledge of most of our native merchants, and perfect familiarity with the native languages, mark him out as specially fitted for the task assigned him. To Mr. Dossabhoj Framjee is assigned the work of assessing the wealthy Parsee families of the Fort, and we have equal trust in the fidelity and discretion of this gentleman in his invidious difficult task. Nineteenth of our European merchants and lawyers will probably prefer to compound for their liability under the Act, or to be assessed by the special commissioner, Mr. Gibbs, than whom no servant of Government better fitted for the work could, we believe, have been selected. The Mahomedan quarters of the island fall to the lot of Mr. Mosso Khan. In addition to the above-named gentlemen we understand that Mr. Gungadass Keshowdass, late schoolmaster in Goculdass Tejpal's school, and Mr. Dadabhoj Bazejee, 3rd assistant in the Civil Audit-office, have been appointed assessors; but their districts are not yet fixed.—Times and Standard.

VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—The committee of the volunteer rifle corps have given notice that the corps will, as at first proposed, consist of Europeans only. This warning was necessary, for both Eurasians and Parsees have applied for enrolment in the corps. There can be no good reason why loyal natives and Eurasians should not form one or two separate corps of their own; but, unless the distinction at first suggested were made, it is exceedingly probable that the attempt to form any corps would altogether fail.

A MILITARY AFFRAY.—We (Sindian) regret much to learn that some disagreement between the English and German soldiers has broke out in the 3rd Bombay Light Infantry. From what we hear matters proceeded to extremities, bayonets were drawn, and the personal interference of the officers alone prevented a serious affray. Eighteen of the ringleaders are in confinement, one of whom, a drummer, we believe, drew his sword on an officer whilst in the execution of his duty, but he was immediately seized by his companions. This would show that no intention existed generally to resist lawful authority.

THE STEAMERS "PUNJAB" AND "ASSAYE" are to be sent home shortly to be converted into screws. It is believed they will take home the invalids.

THE SUNGUM CEMETERY.—On the road from Poona to Kirkee is a small walled enclosure situated on the banks of the Moola, and immediately on the right of the road after leaving Mr. Otto's coach factory, near the Sungum. This small enclosure is a cemetery, in which lie the mouldering remains of many of our brave countrymen who, in November, 1817, on the plains of Kirkee and Poona, fought the Mahrattas, and made the Peishwa ignobly fly. After many years of neglect this cemetery has come under the notice of his Excellency Sir George Clerk, who has directed the executive engineer of the brigade without delay to put and keep it in repair at the public cost, as also the tombs, twenty-five in number, all of which, with the exception of one erected to the memory of the wife of an officer (Gen. Lodwick) have been robbed of their marble inscription slabs. There is another graveyard, which is not generally known, immediately behind the post-office, in the civil lines, close to the road leading on to the Bombay road in front of the Civil Hospital, the walls of which are in a tolerable state of repair; but the tombs, as usual, have been robbed of their iron railings and slabs, with the exception of a few from which we glean the following names of those interred therein:—Captain John Lewis, of the Bombay army, and attached to the Poona Auxiliary Horse, died 10th August, 1819, aged thirty-five years. Captain Samuel Hallifax, of the Bombay European Regiment, and deputy adjutant-general, died 20th January, 1820, aged thirty-two years. Captain John Shirreff, of the Poona Auxiliary Horse, died 20th February, 1820, aged thirty-two years. Joseph Cunningham, son of Joseph and Ann Cunningham, died 24th February, 1821, aged four years and six months. Elizabeth, daughter of Major John Mayne, died 22nd April, 1821. Henry Forbes, the younger twin-son of Charles and Eliza Shubric, died 15th October, 1822, aged eleven months and two days. There are also a number of tombs of French officers close by the officers' mess-house at Gorpoorie which should also be taken care of. If we mistake not they were a few years since repaired at the private expense of the officers of the 1st Bombay European Fusiliers.—Poona Observer.

MR. H. L. ANDERSON, Chief Secretary to Government will, it is said, succeed the Hon. H. W. Reeves as Member of Council, on that gentleman's retirement from the service, which is shortly to take place.

CAPTAIN E. S. SCOTT, 30th Regiment N.I., has been appointed Brigade-major at Kurrachee in room of Major Alexander Carnegie, who has been transferred to Belgaum.

MR. JAMES HUNT.—The Right Honourable the Governor has, on presentation of the petition from the inhabitants of Bombay and Poona, and on the favourable recommendation of the Chief Justice, ordered that Mr. James Hunt (who is now in jail) should not undergo solitary confinement in the jail, as he has been sentenced to undergo once every three months, for seven days. It is a matter of regret to the numerous friends of Mr. Hunt that the petition was not forwarded earlier. Mr. Hunt has just undergone solitary confinement, and he has only five months more to remain, when he will be released from confinement.

THE INCOME-TAX AT POONA.—Several appointments have recently been made at Poona, for the purpose of carrying out the measure for imposing the Income-tax upon the inhabitants of the Zillah city and cantonment of Poona. Amongst these we notice that of Mr. E. H. Larpent, C.S., as a special Income-tax officer, on a salary of Rs. 800 per mensem, with a deputation allowance of Rs. 300. Mr. Kessow Ramchunder Joge, a pensioned dufferdar, is to be an assessor on Rs. 300 a month, in addition to his pension; and Mr. Kristnarow Nursing, the Havaillee Mamlutdar, an assessor on a consolidated salary of Rs. 300 a month: these two latter are for the city of Poona. Then we have Mr. Richard Fell, the station clerk and a pensioned sub-conductor, who is to have Rs. 200 a month for the easy task of assessing the residents in Camp.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.—Colonel Sir P. Melville, the military secretary to Government, who is now employed in England as a member of the commission appointed by the Home Government to arrange the details of the amalgamation scheme, will not, it is believed, return to India, in which case the appointment of military secretary will probably be conferred on Lieutenant-colonel Marriott, of the Engineers. The Governor-general in Council has been pleased to appoint Lieut. John Jacob, of the 22nd Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, to do duty with the 2nd corps, Central India Horse. On account of his promotion to the rank of Colonel, Colonel Jamieson, the military Auditor-general, now on sick certificate in England, cannot rejoin his appointment, so that there appears to be a chance of his being succeeded by Lieutenant-colonel Barr, the military paymaster, who has just returned from England. It is, however, just possible, that among the contemplated changes, Lieutenant-colonel Barr will be compelled either to retain his present appointment, or to relinquish the staff, and retire; and in that case, Lieutenant-colonel Marriott would most probably be appointed Auditor-general.

AURUNGABAD A BOMBAY STATION.—It is stated by the Bombay Times that the Government of India has sanctioned the abandonment of Jaulnah "as a subsidiary force station and the establishment of a new station, either at Aurungabad or Roza, to be occupied by Bombay troops, as soon as the site has been selected and suitable buildings erected." The Times adds:—"The Bombay army will furnish the garrison, viz.:—2 European Batteries of Artillery, and a Mountain Train; 2 Regiments of Native Infantry; 1 Cavalry; 1 European Infantry (probably). The above force will form a part of the Hyderabad subsidiary force, and will be placed under the orders of the Brigadier commanding at Secunderbad. Jaulnah will be occupied by the Hyderabad Contingent troops. The Madras troops, European Artillery; 9th Native Infantry; 2nd Light Cavalry; 3rd European Infantry, at present occupying the station, will be placed at the disposal of their Government. Brigadier Hill has been directed to detach from Bolarum the following:—Wing 1st N.I., H. C.; Squadron 1st Cavalry, H. C.; 2 Guns Artillery H. C., from Aurungabad, to garrison Jaulnah, so as to reach their destination by 1st December next. The Hyderabad Contingent troops at Aurungabad are to form a new cantonment at Mulcapoor. Brigadier Hill, who will be President, has been ordered to assemble a mixed committee of medical and military officers to be associated with certain civil officers to be appointed by the Resident, to report upon a healthy site for the occupation of a new cantonment there, which will be occupied by the troops abandoning Aurungabad."

COMMERCIAL BANK.—A number of shareholders of the Commercial Bank have called upon the Directors to convene a special meeting of the proprietors, for the purpose of considering the proposition as to the advisability of registering the Bank as a Company under Act VII. of 1860 of the Legislative Council of India.

THE INDIAN NAVY.—The Civil Branch of the Indian Navy will be glad to hear that in future pursers and captains' clerks will be entitled to a passage home, when going on sick leave, at the public expense. This boon has just been conceded to the Navy by the Home Government. Up to the present time, those who will be benefited by it have been compelled to pay the money for the voyage out of their own pockets, a drawback which has rendered a sick certificate to them almost useless.

A MELANCHOLY CIRCUMSTANCE happened on board the B.S.N. Company's steamer Tilly, on her late passage to Kurrachee. It appears that Mr. Thompson, the 2nd engineer, was suddenly missed. He was last seen going to the round-house on deck, and it is supposed that in a fit of temporary insanity he threw himself into the sea and was lost.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR arrived in Bombay from Dapoorie on the 17th October.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, COLABA.—The parishioners of this church will be glad to learn that a very handsome and elaborately worked carpet for the chancel steps has just arrived by the Wings of the Wind. What ought to make it more valuable is, that it is the handi-work of Miss Anderson, sister of their late deeply lamented pastor. We understand that Miss Anderson has also sent out, by a lady friend, collars and other articles of embroidery worked by herself, to be distributed as mementos among the poor members of the congregation whom she used to visit.

THE REV. MR. MATCHETT, of the Church Society's Sind Mission, has been obliged, by ill health, to leave India for England. He proceeded by the last steamer, in company with the Rev. Mr. Fitzpatrick, of the same Society's Punjab mission.

Court Martial.

CAPT. R. C. STEVENSON, 3RD BENGAL EUROPEAN INFANTRY.

Adjt. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Oct. 9.—At a general court martial reassembled at Agra on the 20th Aug.,

Capt. Robert Charles Stevenson, of H.M.'s 3rd regt. of Bengal Eur. inf., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With disgraceful conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Futtchgurh, some time between the 1st July, 1859, and the 1st June, 1860, fraudulently misapplied to his own use the sum of Rs. 767-14-1, public money entrusted to him for the payment of men of his company.

Finding.—The court is of opinion that the prisoner, Capt. R. C. Stevenson, of H.M.'s 3rd regt. of Bengal Eur. inf., is Not Guilty of the charge preferred against him, and does accordingly acquit him thereof.

Approved and confirmed,

(Signed) HUGH ROSE, General,
C. in C. in India.

Barrackpore, 17th Sept., 1860.

Amusements for the Soldiery.

Head Qrs., Calcutta, Oct. 6.—The C. in C. wishes to place on a regular and permanent footing, and to render general the means of recreation, instruction, and employment in useful trades, of the soldiery of the army.

In this sense H.E. calls on officers commanding divisions to transmit to the adj.-gen. of the army reports carefully drawn up, on the means in question, which are actually in existence at the stations under their command, specifying their description, and capability of improvement.

For example: Whether there are barrack accommodations for schools, soldiers' reading and coffee rooms, workshops for instruction and practice in trades, gardens for the growth of vegetables, gymnasia, single stick practice and cricket grounds, skittle and ball alleys.

The reports should also specify the capabilities which each station, and the country around it, afford for the practice of the various trades, which in the soldiers' hands may be a source of pastime and profit to themselves, and of essential use to troops in the field.

Workshops, as a system, may be said to be unknown in this army. The C. in C. is most anxious that they should be introduced into it, and developed to the greatest possible extent, that not only soldiers, but their children also should learn trades.

Sir Hugh Rose can speak from his own experience as to the advantage of soldiers knowing trades. It would have been a material advantage to the force under his orders in the late campaign, as well as to the service, if there had been soldiers in its ranks who worked in iron and wood; who could have repaired damaged rifles, saddlery, tents, &c., made shoes and summer clothing. There was plenty of material, wood, iron, khakee cloth, leather, &c., but unfortunately next to no workmen.

General officers are invited to offer any suggestions which may occur to them, and to elicit information from officers commanding regiments on the important subject of this G.O., which has for its object the useful occupation of the soldier's long leisure during an Indian hot season, as well as his comfort and welfare whilst in the service, and after he has left it.

Useful occupation must be the means of raising the moral condition of the soldier; it causes habits of order and industry to take the place of idleness and intemperance, which enervate the best health, the noblest energies, the ablest intellects.

Useful occupation has further advantages. It enables the soldier to gain a competency whilst in the service, and a livelihood when he returns to his home. It enables him to bring up well his family, to assist aged parents, and to settle down into a good and useful member of the State.

Test Books for Certificates of High Proficiency.

Military Dept., Fort William, Oct. 13th.—No. 1,021 of 1860.—The following revised List of Test Books for Certificates of High Proficiency and Degrees of Honour in the Oriental languages, sanctioned by H.E. the Gov.-gen. in Council, in the Home Dept., is published for general information:—

HIGH PROFICIENCY.

6. Bengalee.—1 Kadambari, 2 Dasa Kumar Charita, 3 Mahabharata, and 4 Probodh Chundrika.

The standard which entitles military officers to a reward of Rs. 1,000 being, as regards the test-books, the same as that for high proficiency, the list of books, as now revised for that standard, will take the place of that published in G. O. No. 190 of the 19th March, 1852.

All officers now in the service will have the option of being examined for any of these standards in the books previously laid down up to the 1st of August, 1862.

At the recommendation of the board of examiners H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that, from and after the 11th Jan., 1862, for the military interpreters' standard the test-book in Hindoostan shall be the "Ikhwanossafa," and not the "Bagh-o-Bahar," as laid down in G. O. by the C. in C. dated the 27th May, 1823, and 7th June, 1815.

Timber and Fuel Plantation.

Oct. 4.—1. The Board of Revenue submit an application from Captain Godfrey, for 200 acres of land in the Neilgherries for a timber and fuel plantation. Mr. Thomas suggests a grant of 100 acres with exemption from taxation for three years, and thereafter a quit-rent of 8 annas per acre if the land be used solely for planting or pasturage. The Board of Revenue would give the whole extent applied for without any reduction of the established rate of one rupee an acre, but they propose exemption for the first four years.

2. The Government authorise and direct the collector to put up the whole 200 acres on the terms fixed in the order of April 4, 1860, No. 517, paragraph 7, for land for farms and plantation on the Neilgherries, viz., to be sold by auction, without any upset price, subject to a tax of one rupee an acre. The terms are moderate, and the Government see no cause whatever for relaxing them. It is observed that a very few months ago the Board refused to recommend relaxation in a similar case, when the terms were more stringent than they are at present.

INDIAN IMPORT DUTIES.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, held on Thursday, the 15th of November, Mr. Edmund Potter, president, in the chair, it was unanimously resolved,—“1. That this Chamber is of opinion that the Indian duties, so far as regards yarns and manufactured goods, ought to be simply ad valorem at the port of entry; ample security against and punishment for fraud being afforded. They base this opinion on the fact that the very large proportion of such imports must of necessity be for low-class consumption; upon such specific duties press heavily; and, being fixed, though only for a period, they do not yield to variations in cost, and therefore prevent a healthy and natural cheapness. 2. That this Chamber protests against the present duty on yarns and manufactured goods, as creating a protection to native spinning and manufacturing, as an oppressive tax on the consumption of the masses, as inoperative for permanently increasing revenue, as well as pernicious and inconsistent on the part of a nation pledged to the maintenance of free-trade principles. 3. This Chamber resolves to press these views on the Home and Indian Governments, and to solicit the aid of the Chambers of Commerce in both countries to enforce them, so as to obtain the adoption of a sound system of levying duties, and a reduction of such duties to a point that will foster the operations of commerce, without even the appearance of protection. —EDMUND POTTER, President.—Extracted from the minutes, HUGH FLEMING, Secretary.”

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, November 21, 1860.

THE GOVERNING CLASSES OF INDIA.

No. III.—THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

SIR HUGH ROSE, the present Commander-in-Chief in India, is a man of sterling ability, marred by a kind of Irish impetuosity. He is always making blunders which he has the skill and energy promptly to retrieve. His blunder at Constantinople exposed England to the risk of a Russian descent. His blunder at Culpee caused the revolt of a kingdom, a brief campaign, a long and weary hunt of ten months after Tantia Topce. Sir Hugh Rose, the moment his mistake was seen, threw off a severe attack of illness, and dashed upon an impregnable fortress as if it had been an un-walled village. A Napier turned up, as usual, at the moment when an act of military insanity was required, attacked ten thousand men with five hundred, and like all the Napiers under those circumstances, gained a triumphant victory. It is only when their means are adequate to the end desired that Napiers hesitate and fail. A political catastrophe—the entrance of an unbroken army into the Bombay Presidency—was prevented, and Sir Hugh Rose's reputation remained untouched. The army, always on the side of dash, pronounced the march from Bombay to Culpee an unmatched exploit, and the public voice pointed at once to Sir Hugh Rose as the fitting successor to Lord Clyde. The Horse-Guards was probably more influenced by the fact that Sir Hugh Rose is one of the very few successful generals of the bureau. He understands how to organise, and can write, if we may be permitted a paradox, a little too well. He comprehends our military policy as well as our military system, will obey civil orders, and is personally the most popular Commander-in-Chief yet seen in India. He is therefore precisely the man fitted to undertake the difficult and dangerous task of making the amalgamation work so as to carry out the real policy of the Premier, without utterly alienating the Indian army.

That amalgamation will modify most essentially his own position, hitherto an almost ludicrous anomaly. Perhaps no servant of the British Crown possesses so tremendous a power for evil, and so insignificant a power for good as the Indian Commander-in-Chief. He is really, as well as practically, responsible for the discipline of an army of three hundred thousand men. If he neglects his duty, lives in the Hills, or reduces inspection to a formality, the permanent Indian tendency to laxity is felt throughout the empire. Ancient imbeciles hush up regimental ementes. Drill is reduced to a minimum. Officers take leave till regiments are left to the adjutant and Providence. Everybody begins intriguing for staff employ. The men get first bitter, and then excitable; court-martial follows court-martial, and the first call for service is met by a sullen disinclination to volunteer. On the other hand, if the Commander-in-Chief is efficient, what is he to do? He cannot promote an officer out of his turn. He cannot punish an officer unless a court-martial happens to agree with him. He cannot alter the smallest detail of regimental organisation without the consent of the Governor-general. He does not select officers for civil employ, the Indian officer's reward. He cannot call them back, be they wanted to any such an extent. He cannot reward gallantry, or punish imbecility, or do any one act which involves a shilling of expense without the written consent of the Governor-general. An army may be destroyed by the withdrawal of all its picked officers, non-commissioned as well as commissioned, and the Commander-in-Chief can only remonstrate. It may be ruined by the reduction of a small extra allowance; but the Commander-in-Chief cannot prevent it. It may be rendered savagely discontented by a new system of audit; but the Commander-in-Chief has no voice in the matter. As if to complete the humiliation, the Governor-general in Council, in March, 1857, actually changed the drill of the whole local army, ordering all soldiers to break off instead of biting their cartridges of his own sole authority. In fact, throughout the local army the Commander-in-Chief is simply powerless. Lord Gough, Sir C. Napier, and Gen. Anson are all abused for not tightening the reins of sepoy discipline—reins relaxed wholly by orders in modification of the Articles of War issued by the Supreme Government. Of course, with a Governor-general who understood military affairs the system tottered along. Lord Ellenborough, soldier by instinct, or Lord Dalhousie, always and in all positions a ruler, governed the army well enough without military training. But no reform was possible, for the Commander-in-Chief alone had time to reorganise, and the Governor-general alone authority for reorganisation. Lord Dalhousie knew when he left the work was still undone. Lord Canning knew when he began he should never have leisure for the task.

This dangerous separation of responsibility and power is remedied by the amalgamation. Sir Hugh Rose must, of course, on all broad questions be subject to the Civil power. That is the condition of his position as a British soldier. But with a single Queen's army in India, he will on all matters of internal discipline be almost absolute. The Governor-general in Council is prohibited by Act from issuing an order affecting the discipline of Queen's troops. Lord Canning tried to make the Queen's soldiers break the cartridge, to maintain their uniformity with natives (vide Mutiny Blue Book, No. I.), but the Horse-Guards quietly shelved his recommendation. He cannot stop Sir H. Rose from giving an imbecile a hint to retire, or placing an accomplished officer at the head of a regiment. Officers off the Staff will be compelled to look for promotion to their regimental efficiency. Non-commissioned officers will strive for the Victoria Cross, instead of the right to plunder the State as "conductors" and officials on public works. The private soldiers will be unable to quote circulars from civil rulers overriding the Articles of War, or to claim promotion as an individual right. The Commander-in-Chief, in fact, will be the General-in-Chief of the army, an authority he has never yet possessed. That authority, moreover, instead of being confined to Bengal, will be extended throughout India, to the marvellous relief of services who believe themselves always set aside in favour of the Bengal section of their comrades.

Sir Hugh Rose, strategist or none, is precisely the man to inaugurate a change in this direction. A determined, hot-tempered, frank man, he will let none of his authority slip by. Trained for a generation in the bureaux, he will not strive for that independence of the civil power which it is the blunder of mere fighting generals to assert. He can work with officials, knows the exact formula which will make an absurd order innocuous, is neither puzzled nor wearied by red tape, and has a positive pleasure in clever writing. The value of the last qualification is in India almost inestimable. Reform as we may, the Supreme Government over an empire of a million square miles must still instruct, argue, and decree on paper, and the ability to write means the ability to carry a resolve into speedy action.

THE RULE OF THUMB.

It is the peculiar boast of the non-regulation provinces that justice is administered promptly and without expense, but there is good reason to suspect that injustice is sometimes administered therein with equal promptitude and on equally moderate terms. In the first place, there is apparently no very definite code of laws, which leaves a very indefinite margin for the play of passion and caprice. Then, as a natural consequence, it follows that the magistrates are practically irresponsible. In fact, the only error they can commit is a display of indecision. Provided they are abrupt and energetic, everything else is overlooked and allowed for. But there must be no faltering, no hesitation, no pottering about law. Judgments must be given off-hand and peremptorily. Whatever doubts may secretly be entertained, no suspicion of fallibility must ever be betrayed. The head may be troubled, but the heart must be steeled, and the arm held ready to strike. Force must be venerated at the expense of justice, and before the image of power all peoples and tongues must bow down and worship. Now, this system may be sublime, but if it fall short of that by a single line it is certain to be ridiculous—even worse, it is certain to be tyrannical and unjust. The recent trials at Lucknow are a proof of this. The authorities of Oude, relying on their "heavy battalions" and confounding might with right, took upon themselves to levy an Income-tax upon the inhabitants without troubling themselves to inquire whether or not the imposition of taxes was one of their functions. It was enough for them that they could enforce its collection.

They knew that the Government was sorely pressed for want of money, and they rightly conjectured that no disagreeable questions would be asked so long as the revenue exceeded the estimates. They might even reckon upon warm commendation from the Dispenser of Patronage, and upon being held up as a great example to the more timid and scrupulous governors of regulation provinces and minor presidencies. What a crushing answer to the earnest, if courteous, remonstrances of an Elphinstone, or the impetuous expostulations of a Trevelyan:—"Behold the people of the Punjab and of Oude, they are paying the tax without a murmur!" As a fact their conduct was illegal. They usurped powers which belong only to the British Parliament, and which can otherwise be exercised only by delegation. The Viceroy himself cannot create a new impost, far less any of his subordinates. It is reserved exclusively to the Governor-general in Council to tax the industry of the people, and the Legislative Council had not yet passed the Act. Nevertheless, the Income-tax was imposed, assessed and collected. Without a murmur? That's the question—but of the true answer no reasonable man now entertains a doubt. The assessment, we are told, was effected by native committees, or juries,—in one case, at least, not chosen by the inhabitants, but appointed by a native official. These assessors seem, however, to have been "men of straw," and it requires little knowledge of human, and especially of native character, to be convinced that under such circumstances the most lightly assessed would be the most wealthy and powerful. On the other hand, to make up a respectable total, poor and unprotected individuals would be called upon to supply the deficiency. Accordingly, we hear of working tailors, gardeners, humble artisans, and even domestic servants being plundered—for that is the only word which is applicable—in order to screen the influential and the opulent. It is alleged that recourse was had to torture to compel payment from those who were either too needy or too obstinate to contribute their quota. This charge, it must be confessed, has not been legally proved, but it is impossible to efface the unpleasant suspicion that will force itself upon the mind, that duress, if not "duress vile," had something to do with the ingathering of this illegal impost. It is certainly rather significant that immediately after Ramdial's acquittal on the accusation of having distracted on ornaments worn by females, a special order should be issued prohibiting such acts of violence, so peculiarly abhorrent to the feelings of Hindoos. However, Mr. E. G. Fraser—whom nature intended for a Sunday-school teacher in some remote village of Scotland, but whom the law of unfitness, which acts so large a part in the affairs of the world, turned into a Civil Judge in a non-regulation province—this Presbyterian Elder and Sabbatarian, as he was pleased to style himself, has declared Ramdial to be guiltless, and his accusers alone criminal. The law—where there is a law—enjoins that witnesses who are guilty of perjury in giving their evidence should at once be committed by the Judge, but it is the peculiar privilege of Oude to be exempt from all legal trammels, and to be governed only by "the rule of thumb." So Mr. Fraser took his time, and abstained for many days from disquieting the discomfited witnesses. At length, however, the three principal deponents were arrested and placed in confinement on the charge of perjury and subornation of perjury. This is usually, we believe, aailable offence, but not so in Oude, and at first application to that effect was sternly rejected, though finally acquiesced in. The three prisoners were Unjore Tewarry, Juggernath Sing, and Mowla Bux, the last of whom disturbed his guard one night by loud moans and ejaculations, as if in great mental or bodily pain. The native officer immediately looked into the cell and found Mowla Bux rolling about upon the ground, and crying out, "Allah! Allah!" According to the prosecutor this agony was the effect of remorse,—according to Mowla Bux himself "his body had swollen from want of a smoke." But whether moved by conscience or indigestion, he went on to say that he had been prompted by the two others to give false evidence against Ramdial. This confession formed the basis of the conviction that was obtained before Mr. Pearson, specially deputed to try this new case,—a regulation magistrate being thus selected by Government to administer non-regulation law, with which he admitted he was not familiar. As we have already alluded to some of the most glaring absurdities that marked the preliminary examinations, we shall now confine ourselves to a brief review of the salient features of the trial itself, which commenced on the 14th September and terminated on the 22nd.

On the first day Mowla Bux was placed in the dock—figuratively speaking, for the Court appears to have been a mere room, in which, to use the Judge's elegant expression, all parties were "muddled together round one table." Indeed, the absence not only of dignity but of all decency is plainly observable. The Government prosecutor whispers with one of the witnesses—of course, on irrelevant matters; another witness, Mr. Carnegie, while under examination, turns his back to the bench, and reads a private letter, with such forgetfulness of his position that the Judge has to put a question to him twice before he condescends to turn partly round to answer it; and the Judge himself has a private discussion with the prosecutor touching a service message just received from Calcutta. And what does the reader imagine was the purport of this service message? Mr. Pearson having contrived to give the impression that the prisoners would not be allowed the benefit of counsel, an appeal was made by telegraph to the Governor-general, who at once signified that it was the wish of the Government that the prisoners should have every possible advantage for establishing their innocence. This reply was no other than might be fairly expected from an English nobleman; but how clearly does the fact of such an application being made illustrate the absolutism of the Indian Government. To a second application, however, on the part of Juggernath Sing's attorney for leave to reopen his client's trial, on the ground that he had been prevented by the judge from cross-examining some of the witnesses, and also because new and important evidence had come to hand, the Governor-general very properly refused to interfere—the only legitimate course being evidently to appeal to a higher Court. But to return to Mowla Bux. One of the witnesses against him was Moonshee Farreed-ood-deen, who deposed to Ramdial's innocence of the charges brought against him. Now this Moonshee was Ramdial's own counsel and legal adviser. Then the Deputy-Commissioner, Mr. P. Carnegie, could only swear to his belief that Ramdial had never been guilty of the acts of oppression imputed to him; but he had no other reason for this belief than the fact that none of his own subordinates had ever spoken to him on the subject, and that, although he daily passed the spot where the torture was alleged to have been applied, he had never heard or seen anything amiss. It is true he passed that way between ten and twelve, and the acts spoken of are said to have occurred at two,—but what of that? Has a Deputy-Commissioner no prescience? At this stage of the proceedings a technical objection was raised by Mr. Spiers, the prisoner's attorney. It was that "it had not been shown that the water upon which the witnesses were alleged to have been sworn was really Ganges water. Hindoos would perhaps not think the oath binding if it were not, and it was distinctly laid down that the oath must be proved: Lord Kenyon had ruled this." Upon inquiry it was found that it was not Ganges water but well water that had been used, which, Mr. Spiers submitted, vitiated the whole proceedings, and he quoted a case in point where, through inadvertence, the witnesses were sworn upon a copy of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" instead of upon the New Testament. Mr. Pearson, however, took a philosophical view of the matter, and thought that the peculiarity of the water could not make much difference. In one sense he was quite right. Water is water, and a book is a book, as mere matter of fact, but when they stand as symbols of a truth and a doctrine it is surely a very different matter. We are almost inclined to suspect that Mr. Pearson must have acquired his legal experience in the Judge and Jury Court presided over by Baron Nicholson, in which the witnesses used to be sworn upon a bound volume of the Town—a long since defunct periodical of doubtful reputation. It must have been some such reminiscence that induced him to speak so lightly of the symbol of a religious faith, and caused him to forget an incident that occurred at the trial of Warren Hastings. When Lord Stormont was about to be sworn, he claimed as his right as a Peer of England to be sworn only upon the Prayer Book that belonged to the House of Peers. His claim was admitted, and the trial was suspended for a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes, until that particular copy could be obtained. Thus, though a rose by any other name may smell as sweet, the "Comedy of Errors" cannot be received as a substitute for the Gospel—each, we suppose, only a book in Mr. Pearson's eyes—nor can the water from a well signify to a Hindoo that which is meant by water taken from the holy Ganges. But we will not exhaust our readers' patience by pursuing this unhappy case any further, although there still remain several points to which we had intended to direct their notice. Throughout these Lucknow trials the requirements of justice have been set aside quite as much as the forms of law. The only difference between the Uncovenanted Judge, Mr. E. G. Fraser, and the Covenanted Judge, Mr. Pearson, is that the former was discursive, and the latter concise. They have displayed, however, an equal inaptitude for the discharge of judicial duties, an equal determination to uphold the infallibility of the official world, an equal incompetence to read the handwriting on the wall. And yet, clear as the sun at noontide, the sentence stands out, sharp and distinct. The whole Civil Service of India is doomed. It has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. A fair trial has been allowed it—which it so often denies to individuals—and it is convicted of favouritism, of oppressiveness, of magisterial and judicial incapacity. Ere many months are completed, it will have ceased to "strut upon the stage."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE INDIAN FUNDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

[We insert the following letter at the request of "A Retired Madras Officer," but without subscribing to his views. Not a few persons are of opinion that the Funds are prejudicial to, at least, young officers, who are liable to be entrapped by designing manmas for the sake of the provision thus secured to the widow and orphans. Dead or alive, every man in the service was known to be good for so much a year:—]

LETTER TO AN EMINENT INDIAN FUNCTIONARY FROM A RETIRED MADRAS OFFICER.

Nov. 10, 1860.

MY DEAR * * *,—It is generally believed that the Home Government of India intend to abolish the Funds of all branches of the service—civil, medical, and military. That some change may be required in some of them, consequent on the amalgamation of the Indian with the Imperial army may, perhaps, be admitted; but to materially interfere with their constitution and objects would prove to be an act most injurious to the interests of all concerned in them and to the high reputation of our Indian service, as may be shown by reverting to the causes which originated the institution of these Funds. I will speak only of the Madras Military Fund, to which I have been a subscriber ever since the first day of its establishment in March, 1808.

For many years before that time, marriages were comparatively rare amongst the officers of the army; nevertheless it happened, from unhealthiness of climate and other causes, that mortality ranged high. The consequence was that the local government was often importuned in behalf of helpless widows and their children, and a single battalion would sometimes have one or more families of deceased officers in it, wholly dependent on its charitable aid for support. This state of things was deeply and benevolently considered by our best men (and we had good men in those days) at Madras to be a crying and growing evil, loudly calling for a remedy permanent and effective. The Madras Military Fund was accordingly established in 1808, since which time its affairs have been conducted by directors chosen by the army, subject in important questions to the votes of the whole body of subscribers. The Government of Madras cordially supported the scheme, subscribing a fixed sum annually and granting a high rate of interest for the moneys of the Fund. These considerate acts of the Government saved it from further charitable demands for the support of officers' widows and orphans, and may be viewed as taking the place of those pensions which are granted by her Majesty's Government to families of deceased officers of the Imperial service. Nor ought those contributions to be grudged, now especially that the fate of Lord Clive's Fund is believed to be in doubt, owing to the late transfer of the Government of India from the East India Company to the Crown.

The Madras Military Fund has highly raised the social condition of the officers of that army, by maintaining their widows and orphans in a state of respectability and comfort; and any change that should materially detract from this admirable result of so comprehensive a scheme of benevolence and charity would be productive of much future misery; and, by greatly discouraging marriages, have a very deteriorating moral effect.

These are powerful considerations offered against touching the present system, beyond what may prove to be unavoidable in the case of officers not serving their whole time in India; but if any greater change than this is to be risked, I trust that Government will not attempt to do more than withhold their pecuniary aid and render subscriptions to the Fund optional, instead of being obligatory. The authorities surely will not think of attempting to prohibit our officers from insuring their lives for the benefit of their families in the way they deem best; and this, doubtless, they will prefer doing by continuing their subscriptions to a Fund (I speak of that of Madras) now amounting to £9,30,000 sterling—their own property. Let them be left to themselves to manage it in their own way, and I believe they will not complain. Indeed, no more unsatisfactory result than this ought to arise from any change; for, let it be borne in mind, that the Fund in question is not one formed for distribution "from hand to mouth," but an endowment (aided by donations and monthly subscriptions and the Government assistance before mentioned) for a permanent provision for their families, raised by a large body of officers in succession in the course of fifty-two years, from zero to nearly a million sterling.

I can hardly allow myself to partake of the alarm, which certainly exists, that the Home Government of India will assume the management of funds which do not belong to them, but to corporate bodies of subscribers, who have, each and all, a vested interest in them; and upon which, if broken up to-morrow, and diverted from their avowed purposes, many of the legal representatives of deceased officers might be found to have a claim in law. I am decidedly of opinion, therefore, that, without the consent of the subscribing officers of the army, the Government could not legally make any new arrangement for the actual disposal of the moneys in question for the purpose even of providing for their widows and orphans after another fashion.

With these views of this very important question I must say that I think it cruel to allow such rumours as have found their way into the public prints to be circulated without some assurance on the part of the authorities that no attempt will be made to trespass upon the vested rights of their officers—civil, military, and medical—in respect to their funds, which have long done such extensive good, sweetened the cup of banishment, and tended to raise the character of all our Indian services to the height it has attained.

I am sure you will use what influence you possess, in the best way you can, in endeavouring to stave off any blow, should such be aimed at a system which has proved so essential to the comfort and moral condition of all departments of our European Indian service; and in conclusion, have to express a hope that the measures in progress for arranging the details for completing the amalgamation may be such as to reassure all who take a deep interest in the services and welfare of India.—Yours very sincerely,

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The Madras Irrigation and Canal Company,
27, Cannon-street, E.C.,
14th Nov., 1860.

SIR,—An article, extracted from the Madras Athenæum, and headed with the name of this Company, appeared in your issue of the 13th instant, which I feel myself bound to notice as promptly as possible, because, if treated with silence, it is calculated to create unnecessary alarm and anxiety.

The letter upon which the article in question was founded was addressed to the editors of several of the Madras papers, under the assumed signature of "A Daily Reader;" and the writer, ashamed of his own production, and knowing its falsity, refused, I am credibly informed, to reveal his real name and calling. The whole of his statements are either based upon gross error, or have no foundation whatever; and they have evidently been made with the view of damaging the Chief Engineer and the undertaking. For instance, it has not been discovered, as he asserts, that the levels are all wrong, and they are not so; the agent has not issued an order to stop all or any of the works; on the contrary, the surveys of the project to be carried out by the Company are progressing so satisfactorily that the plans and estimates are all but completed. The dam across the Toombuddra, which the writer [for want of knowledge of the nature of such works, and the Indian mode of dealing with them styles a "paltry dam dignified with the name of anicut" has never been put forward as any other than a temporary dam, erected for the purpose of raising the water above, to afford a supply to our channels, whilst the anicut itself is in course of construction. It was never intended to resist the floods for a longer period than this; and according to information received by the last mail, it has hitherto answered its purpose admirably. It was constructed by an engineer of considerable experience in the execution of such works, who is well known to, and very highly appreciated by, the engineer officers in the Madras Presidency, and who was, with the permission of Government, transferred for a time from the public works on the Godavery to our service. As proof of its efficiency and usefulness, I may add that, so great has been the afflux in the river caused by its erection, that it has been found necessary to remove for the present, and until the channel intended to be led off from the river above is perfected, a portion of the centre, in order to reduce the accumulation of water found to be inconvenient to the town of Kurnool. The channel operations connected with this temporary dam, and ultimately to lead off from the anicut, being, I presume, the two miles referred to by the individual, who, without a local habitation or a name, has attempted to create alarm by his ignorant and unfounded assertions, are likewise progressing satisfactorily, and they are the only works yet entered upon. Those who are acquainted with the various and important works of irrigation formerly constructed in India by Colonel H. C. Cotton, our chief engineer, and also know his sound professional qualifications, and the high regard in which he has always been deservedly held by the Government and his brother officers, both professionally and on account of his most estimable character, feel the greatest confidence in his proceedings, and that whilst our works are under his superintendence, no serious mishap need be apprehended; to them therefore this explanation will be unnecessary; but there are many of your readers who have not this foundation of confidence, and it is for their satisfaction that I venture to ask you to give a place in your columns to this communication.

* A perpetual endowment, in short, for the officers' families of that army.

The Directors' Third Report will be issued to the shareholders in a few days, and will, I hope, be found perfectly satisfactory, and remove all cause for fear. In the meantime I assert without hesitation, and with the utmost confidence, that no circumstance has yet occurred tending to decrease in any degree the promise and value of our first work—the Toombuddra project,—and if those shareholders who feel at all doubtful upon the matter will do me the favour of applying at this office, either personally or by letter, I will readily afford them the fullest information, and such as I am convinced will effectually reassure them.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN WESTWOOD, Secretary.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUT.-COL. NORMAN.—H.R.H. the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to appoint Brevet Lieutenant-Col. H. W. Norman, C.B., Bengal army, to be his assistant military secretary.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The half-yearly report states that during the past half-year the operations had been vigorously pursued on the several lines in course of construction. Several additional sections of the main line had been opened, and the remainder brought near completion. The works on the Bangalore line had gone actively forward, considerable progress had been made on the Bellary line, and its first section of 17 miles was now about to be opened for traffic. On the main line the section from Goriatum to Amboor, 17 miles, was opened on the 16th of January last, to Vanimbady, 10 miles more, on the 1st of February, and to Tripatore, 14 miles, on the 23rd of May; making 41 miles of new line, and completing 137 miles from Madras. The terminal buildings at Beypoor were sufficiently advanced to cause no delay in opening the line when ready. By the end of this year very little would remain to be done for the completion of the railway between Madras and Beypoor—a distance of 400 miles from coast to coast. The first section of the Bellary branch from Arconum to Naggery, 17 miles, would be opened this month, giving a continuous railway communication of nearly 60 miles from Madras towards Cuddapa, and upon which a considerable traffic was expected. The total number of passengers carried in the six months was 450,224, being nearly three times the number carried in the corresponding half of 1859. The receipts exceeded by 63½ per cent. those of the corresponding period of last year. The amount of goods traffic carried exceeded that of the corresponding period by 62½ per cent., and the receipts by 5½ per cent. those of that period, the quantity carried being 34,461 tons, against 21,168 tons, and the receipts £10,564 against £6,823 for the corresponding half of 1859. The gross traffic for the half-year ending the 30th of June last amounted to £35,508, against £23,783 for the corresponding period, and the expenses to £17,551, or 49·30 per cent., against £9,208, or 38·71 per cent. The receipts for carriage of permanent way materials amounted to 11 per cent. of the gross receipts.

CHAPLAINS IN 1793.—“When the resolutions were passing in the House on the subject of the East India Chaplains, one of the directors whispered another, who told me of it; ‘I think a chaplain no bad thing; I shan’t oppose it. He may serve to make the grog, and will always be ready for a fourth at whist.’”—Hannah More.

The objects of this Company are to purchase cotton direct from the grower in India, Australia, and other countries, and to afford encouragement to the general cultivation of cotton. The first operations of the Company will be directed to the district of Dharwar, in India. The Government is now constructing a road to connect the cotton districts of Dharwar with the new port of Sedshewaghar, at which port a cotton pier will be erected, which the Company will have the advantage of using. The Directors are in possession of the fullest information derived from merchants, as well as from Government officers on the spot, proving that there is a wide and exceedingly profitable field open for the action of this Company. Abundance of good and cheap cotton may be obtained, capital chiefly being wanted for its purchase, and to extend production.

The formation of this Company has grown out of the active exertions of the Cotton Supply Association, and the provisional directors confidently appeal to the spinners and manufacturers for co-operation in carrying out the important object they have in view; and before subscriptions can be received from the general public it is intended that the first half of the proposed capital shall be subscribed by the cotton trade.

Clean cotton can be purchased in many parts of India at prices ranging from 1d. to 2½d. per lb., and with economical management the Company has the prospect, in a reasonable time, of declaring the most satisfactory dividends.

Further information, prospectuses, &c., may be obtained on application to G. R. HAYWOOD, Sec. 1, Newall's-buildings, Market-street, Manchester.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNESIA has been, during twenty-five years, sanctioned by the medical profession and universally accepted by the public as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion. As a mild aperient it is admirably adapted for ladies and children, and it is invaluable in warm climates. Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable chemists throughout the Empire.

MUMFORD'S CONCENTRATED ARECA-CORDIAL ESSENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER.

The Cordial Essence, which is now taken in preference to all other preparations of Ginger, not only from its agreeable flavour, but from the value and certainty of its effects, will be found most useful in all cases of indigestion, spasms, heartburn, diarrhoea, irritability of the bowels, and in most nervous affections. To invalids suffering with impaired digestion from long residence in warm climates, and to those who are proceeding to India, this preparation cannot be too strongly recommended.

Prepared only by GEORGE MUMFORD, Chemist, 5, Bathurst-street, Hyde-park-gardens, and sold by all Chemists, in bottles at 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each; also in large stoppered bottles, for foreign use, at 21s.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."
"Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 10d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

VIGILANCE REWARDED.—With the damp, foggy, cold mornings and evenings, the weak in constitution find out their feeble points, and well were it for them if they applied early treatment for invigorating them. Is the chest affected? Rub Holloway's Ointment well twice a-day upon that organ, take his Pills in conformity with their accompanying "rules," the disease disappears, and with it future danger flies. Is the Liver sluggish? The Pills unaided will rouse it to its healthful activity; or, if long inactive, use the Ointment. Is irregularity of any particular function the disorder? Consult Holloway's instructions for using his medicaments and regulating by their timely application. They will benefit, and can do harm in no case.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

POSTAGE.

Via Southampton (pre-payment compulsory), letters under
 1 oz. 0s. 6d. | 2 oz. 2s. 0d. | 4 oz. 4s. 0d.
 1 oz. 1s. 0d. | 3 oz. 3s. 0d. | 5 oz. 5s. 0d.

Books, with the ends of the covers open (not exceeding 3 lbs. in weight), if sent via Southampton, under 1 lb. 4d.; under 1 lb. 8d.; under 1 lb. 1s. 4d.; under 1 lb. 2s.; under 2 lbs. 2s. 8d.; under 2 lbs. 3s. 4d.; and under 3 lbs. 4s. Postage-stamps must be affixed.

Newspapers for the East Indies, when not exceeding 4 oz. 2d. each; when above 4 oz. and not exceeding 8 oz., 3d. each—an additional penny being charged for every additional 4 oz. or fraction thereof. For all countries or places eastward of Suez, the charge is 2d., whatever the weight of the newspaper.

Via Marseilles (pre-payment compulsory), letters under Books under 1 lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional 1 lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

BY the overland route from Marseilles we are in receipt of news from Calcutta to the 22nd, and from Hong Kong to the 13th October. The intelligence from China can hardly be characterised as satisfactory, although for the first time in the history of that empire a European army is encamped within eight miles of its capital city. It was on the 8th September that the Allied forces commenced their march from Tien-tsin, and on the 13th arrived at the considerable town of Hoo-si-woo. As the promised supplies were not forthcoming, the troops naturally helped themselves to whatever came to hand, and in a few hours the place was completely plundered. Here the army halted three days, and on the 17th reached Mat-tau. At this point the narrative becomes somewhat obscure, but we gather from the correspondents of the China Mail that Mr. Parkes pushed forward to a village called Tung-chau, some ten miles in advance, in the hope of prevailing upon the inhabitants to furnish regular supplies of food and forage. He was accompanied by Lord Elgin's private secretary, Mr. Loch, Mr. Bruce's attaché, Mr. De Norman, the Times' Correspondent, Mr. Bowlby, Captain Brabazon, R.A., Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General—whose duty it was to select the camping grounds—and Lieutenant Anderson, in command of the escort of twenty troopers of the 1st Sikh Irregular Cavalry. This party slept that night at Tung-chau, but on the morning of the 18th they were surrounded by the enemy and made prisoners. Colonel Walker, of the Bays, and Mr. Thompson, of the Commissariat, narrowly escaped the same fate. Seeing a French officer attacked by a body of Chinese, Colonel Walker spurred on to the rescue, but received a cut across the right arm, which compelled him to drop his sword, and left him no alternative but to test the speed of his horse. Mr. Thompson was also wounded in the back by a spear, and the unfortunate Frenchman was cut to pieces. An action speedily ensued. The Tartars, extending in a semi-circle so as to threaten the allied flanks, took up a position in front of Ma-ton, and made a very fair resistance, notwithstanding the terrible havoc caused by the British artillery. The Sikh horse also closed with a large body of Tartar cavalry, and routed them with considerable slaughter. On the 21st the enemy again appeared in sight, and advanced, as before, in the form of a crescent. This time the King's Dragoon Guards, as well as the Sikhs, and also the French infantry, came to close quarters with the Tartar horse, and strewed the ground with killed and wounded. The loss of the allies was only twenty-five, while that of the enemy is roughly estimated at two thousand, besides fifty pieces of artillery, mostly brass nine-pounders. The French then encamped at the stone bridge, and the English at the wooden bridge, about seven miles from Peking. By the latest accounts it appears that the Emperor had sent his brother to negotiate a peace; but Lord Elgin, it is stated, had refused to treat until the prisoners were given up. They are said, however, to be well treated.

In consequence of the Doorga Poojah holidays business was stagnant at Calcutta, the English "amusing themselves sadly after the manner of their nation," and the natives indulging in wild saturnalia, after the manner of their nation.

The Income-tax is likely to be a success after all, at least in the great towns. Now that the native merchants and bankers really understand that the Government has no desire to pry into their accounts they are making a fair return of their incomes, but it does not follow that this will equally be the case in the agricultural districts; on the other hand, it will there be comparatively easy to detect any attempts at fraud.

The condition of the indigo concerns is still very unsettled, and even threatening. Peace is maintained only by the presence of troops and large bodies of military police, and many of the wealthiest planters are preparing to withdraw from industrial pursuits that can no longer be conducted with either profit, honour, or personal safety.

The reduction of the Madras army has commenced in good earnest. Not only are the regiments of native infantry to be limited to a strength of 600 each, but three entire regiments of light cavalry, the 5th, 6th, and 7th, are to be immediately disbanded. It is even rumoured that the entire reduction will be carried to the extent of twelve regiments, and that Pegu will be annexed to the Bengal Presidency.

The installation of His Highness Shri Palmanabha Dasa Vanji Bala Ramah Vurmah Kula Shekura Kirida Padi Maharaj Raje Manei Sultau Ramraja Bahader Shanshir Jang, as Maharajah of Travancore, took place at Trevandrum on the 19th October, in the presence of Mr. Maltby, the Resident, the officers of H.M.'s 45th regiment, and a large number of native and European guests. His Highness is the second nephew of the deceased sovereign Shri Palmanabha Dasa Vanji Bala Ramah Vurmah Kula Shekura Kirida Padi Maharaj Raje Manei Sultau Ramraja Bahader Shanshir Jang.

Ramraja Bahader Manei Sultan Maharaj Raje Shamshir Jang,—his elder brother being "mentally incapacitated for the functions of state."

In our editorial columns we have stated that Addiscombe is about to descend from its pride of place, and we may now mention that the present term concludes on the 19th of next month. Henceforth it will be merely a training school for Woolwich, to which successful competitors at subsequent examinations will be transferred for the completion of their professional education for the scientific branches of the army. It is announced that the next examination for admission will take place on the 7th of January, and that there will be as many as seventy vacancies to be competed for. As there will no longer be an exclusive regiment of artillery or engineers for service in India, the donation of £100 hitherto given to successful competitors for the Royal Military College at Addiscombe will now be withdrawn; and such cadets as may obtain a commission in either of the scientific branches and subsequently be sent out to India will merely be entitled to a free passage, like any other officers of the British service.

The Society of Arts, we are happy to observe, have voted a silver medal to Dr. J. Forbes Watson for his admirable paper on "The Chief fibre-yielding plants of India."

We observe it stated in a provincial paper that a Brahmin convert to Christianity, of the name of Gangooly, has married an American lady at Bristol. It is this gentleman's intention, we hear, to return to India very shortly as a missionary, and we trust that his labours may prove not unfruitful. In one of Ben Jonson's plays it is suggested that a colony of good cooks should be sent out to the Cannibal Islands, to teach the savages the blessings of good living, and so wean them from their anthropophagical propensities. Adopting, or rather adapting, this hint, we are inclined to think that if some of our fair countrywomen who so zealously support the missionary movement would offer their hand as one of the rewards of conversion, much greater progress might be made than has hitherto been the case. There is no reason why such an argument should not be as efficacious as those put forth many a century ago by the eloquent saint who converted the barbarous Germans by preaching to them in Latin.

Lieut.-col. H. B. Henderson's resignation of the post he has so ably filled as Home Agent for the Bengal Military Fund makes a vacancy for which there are at present only two candidates—Col. J. A. Weller and Col. J. H. Campbell, both of the Bengal army. For further particulars we refer our readers to the Special Notice in our advertising columns.

THE FAMINE.

It is now certain, and only now, that the whole of Northern India has been spared the horrors of a famine worse than that of 1838. Up to the middle of July the fall of rain in the Doab amounted to only two instead of the average twenty inches. The local authorities at once took alarm and made preparations to mitigate the approaching evil. On the 18th July the first heavy fall of the year occurred, and for some days there was a general burst, such as often inaugurates the advance of the monsoon. Prices at once fell, and our North-West correspondents led us to the belief that the danger was at an end. But in a few days the heavens were again as brass and the earth as iron. Prices again rose, and suicide, the sale of children, and frequent deaths among the aged, were general; crime, the invariable attendant of famine, became vigorous, when the starving began to plunder. August was a terrible month for the poor. By the 6th of September the clouds again gathered, and from that date the fall of rain throughout Northern and Central India has been such as to guarantee a fair but late autumn crop.

Goruckpore was the only district in which there was no fear of dearth. A famine would have been a boon to the agriculturists and traders there. In 1838 Goruckpore was the Egypt of its neighbours. It takes two years to exhaust the moisture of its soil. If it had a cheap mode of reaching the Gangetic provinces its prosperity would be doubled. The danger was greatest in Rohilcund, in parts of which not a drop of rain fell till the middle of September. The rubbee or spring crop had been bad. As the people depend chiefly on their corn crop, which is sown in October, the lateness of the rain will not permanently affect them. In the Agra and Meerut Divisions also the crops were in great peril. Now the harvest will be decidedly good in the eastern, central, and southern districts. The high prices, which created, and still to some degree create, distress, were independent of the want of rain in July and August, however, though they were aggravated by it. Nor does strict inquiry show that they were owing to loss of grain by fire and short cultivation during the rebellion. The reports of the Revenue Board prove that 1857-58 was a most favourable agricultural year. But 1858-59 was a bad season throughout the Upper Doab, and the out-turn was very short. Then Rohilcund, which always exports grain, imported it in barter for its sugar. The native States of Gwalior and Bhurtpore stopped their usual exports altogether. Now, except in Rohilcund, Agra, and Meerut, the harvest will be fair, if not abundant. In a few cases there may be remissions of revenue, but these we should not estimate at more than a quarter of a million sterling. No doubt comparatively high prices will continue, but they will remunerate the agricultural population for what is produced. Both the ryot and the trader will benefit, but the artisan class will to a certain extent suffer. With this difficulty in the North-West, and with the still existing excitement in the indigo districts, we would recommend Government to give up all idea of the License tax in its present shape. While we believe the Stamp duties will yield more than is supposed, and the Income-tax will give the million expected of it up to 1st May, and the three and a-half millions in 1861-2 at least, we are convinced there will still be a deficit. By January next we shall have a fair idea as to whether further taxation is necessary. If it is, either the limit of the Income-tax should be fixed below 200 rupees a-year, so as to catch all traders; or, as in England, special trades and professions should require a licence irrespective of the Income-tax.—Friend of India.

THE FUTURE OF INDIAN HEROES.

In the discussions which have hitherto taken place on the subject of the amalgamation of the British and Indian Armies too much stress has been laid upon one view of the question. The sacrifices which will be entailed upon Indian officers have constituted the burden of every leading article and the theme of every remonstrance. But little reference, if any, has been made to the prospect of those countervailing advantages which yet, existing as they do upon paper, have certainly been thought of by the real soldiers of the Indian Army. The subject has been taken up in a spirit of doubt and distrust, and has been considered almost entirely in a pounds, shillings, and pence point of view. We have heard nothing of the great advantages which, if impartially carried out, amalgamation must present to the soldier thirsting for distinction. For such a man we cannot fancy a nobler or a grander opening than that which the union of the two armies seems to offer. The prospect of a European reputation, the chance of being pitted against the first generals of the first military nation in the world, the recognition of his merits by the great mass of his countrymen instead of merely by a colonial section—these surely are visions, not impossible in themselves, and which must tend to make the hidden dangers of amalgamation appear light indeed in the eyes of those who feel a consciousness of the possession of great powers. When, therefore, we hear amalgamation spoken of as an unmixed evil, as a scheme which does not possess a single redeeming point, we cannot but feel satisfied that those who so describe it know little of the real feelings that animate the soldier, and are still less capable of comprehending the reasons by which those in whose breasts chivalry has found her last refuge alone care to be actuated.

When we cast our eyes down the long roll of those gallant spirits, who, trained under an Indian sun, have accomplished great things; when we see that those who proved themselves great soldiers in India invariably maintained their reputation in other hemispheres, it is not too much to suppose that the living warriors around whose names have rallied all the glories of the past and all the sympathies of the present, will be able to show on European ground that the reputation of India has not in that respect paled. The career of Wellington showed that to be a conqueror of sepoys was no hindrance to becoming the victor over French Marshals. The fact is, as Napoleon has told us in his Memoirs, that the principles of war are alike in all ages and under all circumstances. The method on which those principles may be put in practice must of course be modified by the calibre and capacity of the enemy, but the principles themselves are unalterable. To imbibe those principles in India opposed to Asiatic troops may certainly be considered an advantage. Campaigning against an enemy with respect to whom a General feels conscious of superiority gives a dash, an elan, a quickness to his movements, which officers trained in England are slow to attain. Few Generals previously unacquainted with Indian warfare would have, like Wellington, attempted in their first European campaign such a feat as the passage of the Douro in the face of a French army. No one, who had not been trained in the same school, would have had the hardihood, like Havelock, to maintain the open position at Cawnpoor, and making it the base of his operations to throw himself with a handful of men into a hostile country. The fact is an Indian military training is invaluable. As such it has been recognised repeatedly by the greatest authorities in England; and to a man of ability, who has had experience in the movement of masses, it must prove, in the event of a European war, a certain passport to high command.

Such men as Neville Chamberlain, Lumsden, and others, whose names are "household words" upon our frontier, must look upon amalgamation with a far different aspect from that with which it is regarded in the demi-civil offices of Calcutta. The union of the two armies opens out to such men a long vista of new glories to be acquired, of enemies of a new stamp to be conquered. Could the operations conducted with such success by General Chamberlain in the hilly country on the frontier have been transferred to any portion of Europe—had the same opportunities been vouchsafed to him there as those by which he has known so well how to profit here—his reputation as a great general would have been firmly established all over the world. Has such a man—a man to whom the close-boroughship of his service is a positive disadvantage—anything to fear from amalgamation? To him, and such as he, the scheme holds out the prospect for which Alexander sighed in vain. The soldier who preferred the rough service of border campaigning to the influential position of adjutant-general, who resigned the one to take up the other, who has never yet met a reverse in the field, and whose hill campaigns are models to be studied, is just the man who would be appreciated at the head of a British army. Nor is he a solitary example. The Punjab irregular force is perhaps the most perfect practical school of military instruction in the world. The officers who belong to it serve under the eye of a chief, without whose recommendation not a single man receives advancement. The duties on which they are employed, always arduous, often in the presence of an enemy, and never in absolute security, are of a nature to stimulate every faculty and to excite all the powers of the mind. Far more than the camps of exercise at Chalons or at Aldershot does this real, active campaigning teach men the actualities of warfare. In such a training they become positively identified with their profession; to fit themselves for its duties, so to work as to be able to master, in its higher branch, the great principles by which it is regulated, is the chief object of their ambition. To such men the grounds upon which opposition to amalgamation has hitherto been based must appear in the highest degree baseless. They can only see its brighter, its more inspiring, its purely military side, and regarding it in that point of view they hail it as a blessing, and not, as in other quarters, as the most unwelcome of visitants. Now that the question is settled, this is certainly the spirit in which it should be received. To fight against the inevitable is unwise, to grumble at it is unmanly. To accept the orders of his superiors with spirit and cheerfulness is the true dignity of every real soldier. "It is not enough," said the greatest writer of the eighteenth century, "it is not enough to follow, and he is but a poor soldier that marches on with reluctance." No doubt it is the tendency of all men to regard this question as one that affects mainly their own interests, and as such to condemn or accept it. Yet even in this delicate point there is room for some exercise of public spirit. The loudest oppositionist cannot deny that a measure approved by the heroes of the Indian Army, to which every young soldier looks forward with confidence and hope—a measure, in a word, which will place those who stand foremost in Indian estimation on a par at least with their comrades in the Royal service, deserves at all events a fair, a candid, and an impartial consideration.—Friend of India.

THE RESOURCES OF THE HILLS.

A paper started some sixteen years ago at Mussoorie, and entitled The Hills, but discontinued after an existence of two years and a half, in consequence of the editor having work of other nature on his hands that allowed him but little leisure, has, within the last few days, been revived. Its main object was then, and is now, to demonstrate the advantage and possibility of establishing colonies of Englishmen throughout the Hill Stations. Given the possibility, the advantage must be clear to all who believe and hope that India is capable of becoming something else than a mere burden to England, which hitherto, we are afraid, it must be conceded to have been; and the prospectus drawn out in the first article of The Hills of the facilities at hand for the development of the resources for such a scheme is certainly highly encouraging. Few men are more competent to treat of the subject than the author of the article to which we refer. Mr. Mackinnon, for we believe there is no secrecy as to the proponent of this project, is one of the oldest residents in the Hills, and has studied long and deeply the pros and cons of the question. He states as the result of his experience that the Hills are fitted in every respect for colonisation, and capable of yielding ample remuneration to all such as should embark their fortunes in the undertaking. "The vegetable products," we are told, "of the Hills and valleys may be pronounced to be unlimited. Cotton, tea, opium, sugar-cane, wheat, barley, rice, and numerous pulses reward the cultivator with abundant crops. Apples of the most approved and English and American sorts, pears, vines, cherries, apricots, peaches, currants, gooseberries, may be produced in profusion in numerous suitable localities within the vast diversified zone that lies between the limits of the seven feet of tropical rains at Mussoorie—where grapes are destroyed by the drenching wet—and the rainless tracts of Kunawur, whose grapes are inferior in fame alone to those of Shiraz. Forests of timber trees, too, are abundant in the Hills. Rich and numerous veins of iron, copper, and lead are met with in the Hills; gold, too, is obtained by washing the sands both in the interior of the mountain range and in some streams that flow into the Dhoon." Such is the magnificent programme of the capabilities of the Hills. We lately called the attention of the public to the high importance of the cultivation of cotton, both as regards the safety it would insure to manufacturers at home, should the supplies from America ever fail, and the profit which would result to the growers of that plant in this country, as well as the additional stability which would be given to our power by the increase of British population which its cultivation would necessitate. By the aid of the vast water-power which needs but utilising, we believe that not only would cotton be produced in abundance sufficient for the home market, but by some agency the manufacture of it in this country might be accomplished so as in a great measure to obviate the necessity of exporting it in its new state and re-importing it when worked up. Those who are aware of the mighty ends which are effected in Lancashire by making water do the work which at first required manual labour, will think it hardly possible to over-rate the source of wealth which we possess in the supply of that element which has hitherto been allowed to run waste. By the diversion of small streams at home, water is so economised as to put in motion the machinery of mills that would otherwise have required labour to the extent of some thousands of horse-power, and with, comparatively speaking, small capital, the same result might be attained in the hills. But while we concur with the author of the article which we have quoted, it is but fair to state that others, whose opportunities for forming their judgment of the possibility of the project have been very great, do not take so favourable a view of the question. They allege that to carry out such a scheme at all, we must penetrate much further into the interior than up to this time we have done. That to do so will be a task of great difficulty, and when this obstacle is overcome we shall find but little to reward our pains. One great reason against our success is the small quantity of valley to be found amidst the hills, and this fact, it is argued, will preclude the possibility of carrying out agricultural operations on an extended scale. And it is stated, moreover, that the most ample returns that could be anticipated would yield a bare subsistence, and nothing more, to the cultivator. It is difficult to know which side is to be believed, but we strongly incline to the more favourable view of the case. No doubt it would be far from easy to extend colonisation far into the interior, but this has been felt in the early days of all colonies. If we look at Canada we shall see that at least equal energy was needed for the struggle, and that what at first might have seemed insurmountable has yielded to patience and determination. Why should we hope less for India?

As regards the small amount of valley, we fancy that this deficiency might be compensated for, by terracing the side of the hills, as has been already done in many parts with complete success as to the crops; and we are confident that the soil, if subjected to the same means of improvement that are adopted at home, would prove equally fertile and remunerative.

Hitherto no plan has been propounded concerning the means of inducing emigration. Were it well known in England that nothing is to be feared from the climate, and that it is in fact more wholesome than that of either Australia or Canada, being less subject to severe changes of weather, many of those who are ready to leave home for colonies would be induced to make trial of India, and emigration being once commenced, we should be in no want of a sufficient population to reap the advantages afforded by the hills. The system of making grants of lands, which is in vogue in so many of our colonies, might be here put in force, and we think that we might follow the example of the Roman coloniæ by rewarding veteran soldiers with portions of conquered territory, and thus inducing them to feel that when their fighting is over they will be secure of a comfortable house in which to end their days.—Lahore Chronicle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BRIGADIERS.—The following officers are appointed brigadiers on the establishment:—Col. P. M. N. Guy, C.B., of H.M.'s 5th Foot; Col. J. L. Dennis, of H.M.'s 2nd Light Inf.; Col. G. Burney, of the 65th N.I.; Col. R. T. Sandeman, of the 33rd N.I.

PROMOTION FROM THE RANKS.—On the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, and subject to the approval of the Secretary for India, the rank of ensign unattached is conferred on Sub-Conductor E. Owens and Sergeant Major W. T. Stuart, for having "much distinguished" themselves in the field.

MAGGOORAH.—It is almost impossible to describe the present state of the Mofussil. In some parts of the Jessore, Pubna, and west of Fureedpore district the population in general display such an open hostility towards European residents and their families that by all appearance nothing short of a general expulsion from the interior of the country is likely to satisfy these misguided creatures. Before the mutiny commenced in the Upper Provinces, chupatees were circulated throughout the whole country, and now the docile and timid Bengalees are perambulating the lower provinces and carrying images, round which hundreds of them collect when bent upon some mischievous purpose. Three days ago, an hour or so after the manager of the Sericole concern had left home for the station of Maggoorah, a mob of infatuated villagers collected on the opposite side of the khall in front of the dwelling house, and commenced dancing and shouting round one of those images, making demonstrations of menace to cross and attack the house, which caused a terrific panic amongst the ladies and children. A few hurried lines were forwarded to the husband and joint magistrate who, it must be said to his credit, lost not a moment to start with boats full of sepoy to afford assistance, and on reaching the village assumed a threatening appearance, which caused the leader and promoter to surrender, and it is to be hoped that a severe example will be made of him, pour encourager les autres, as the proverb says. Three or four days ago a beauleah, with two or three ladies on board, tracking on the Fureedpore side of the river, when just on the point of entering the Chundnah river was insulted by the villagers, the towing rope cut, and the boat sent adrift. And we are repeatedly told there is no confusion in the Mofussil! Were the Nabib governor (as the natives call him) to be removed, and a proclamation to that effect circulated in the Mofussil, everything would return to its former tranquillity, and not a single sepoy would be required or an additional expensive sub-division.—Hurkaru, Oct. 15.

NATIVE INCOME-TAX ASSESSORS.—A correspondent sends us (Friend of India) the following instance of the fitness of Tehseeldars, on Rs. 80 to 150 a month, to act as Income-tax assessors. The Tehseeldar of a pergunnah near Futtyghur sent an order to the agent of an European indigo planter demanding the surrender of his books and accounts, that from an inspection of them he might be able to fix the amount of assessment. The planter of course at once exercised his right of being assessed by the collector. The idea is wide spread among the natives that they must submit their books for inspection, and the instructions issued by the local governments are not at all definite on this point.

Mr. G. B. MACONOCHE, assistant commissioner, has been appointed Income-tax assessor for the city and suburbs of Lucknow. We are glad to see that Government is appointing European or Christian officers to assess the towns of the North-west.

SUPERSTITIOUS PRACTICES.—In the district of Nowgong, Central Assam, there is a temple dedicated to one of the numerous gods whom the Assamese adore, celebrated for its sanctity. The popular belief is that anyone who utters a falsehood within its precincts is sooner or later overtaken by the vengeance of the deity who is supposed to inhabit it. Unfortunately, this belief is greatly encouraged by the fact of the magistrates of the neighbouring districts directing cases difficult of decision to be decided by an appeal to this temple. The magistrate of Tezpor (in the year 1858) several times sent litigants to take their oaths at the shrine, Government peons attending to see that the formalities were regularly gone through. The priests or brahmins who officiate at the temple are greatly benefited by this proceeding, for they will not permit anyone to enter it unless they receive a large douceur; and I need not say that when so openly encouraged by Government their demands are proportionately raised. The evil which ensues from this practice is twofold; not only does it cause great inconvenience to the ryots who are compelled to proceed to the temple at times when the weather is unsuited for travelling, and when perhaps their presence is absolutely required to enable them to carry on their various occupations, but it rivets still stronger the chains of superstition on the minds of the poor people, and induces them to put greater faith in the brahmins and submit un murmuringly to the demands of a too extortionate priesthood. Several persons have died shortly after their return from taking their oaths, and superstition declared that their demise was occasioned by the wrath of the deity whose sacred edifice they had polluted by their perjury, but for my part I beg leave to doubt this assertion, and feel inclined to ascribe their sudden deaths to mortal rather than to immortal agency.—Hurkara.

CAPTAIN A. P. ORR.—The Governor-general, by the direction of the Secretary for India, has conferred the honorary rank of major on local Captain A. P. Orr, for his services in the rebellion.

THE CALCUTTA POLICE REPORT for 1858-59 has just been issued, eighteen months old. There were five cases of murder, four of manslaughter, sixteen of cutting and wounding, and seventeen of burglary during the year. Altogether 18,442 persons were brought up before the magistrates, of whom 13,029 were convicted, 270 committed to a higher court, and 5,017 acquitted by them. Property of the value of Rs. 1,32,015-12-6 was stolen, of which Rs. 48,294-6-10, or more than one-third, was recovered. In 1853, the returns were—

	Convictions.	Acquittals.
Supreme Court ...	133	44
Magistrates ...	10,931	2,609

We believe all these figures to be valueless. If the population of Calcutta is anything like half a million, and we believe it to be far above that, Calcutta is the most virtuous city on earth. The truth is, the police notice only the crime which forces itself on public attention.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, Oct. 2.—A fortnight ago starvation seemed to stare the population in the face, but the very abundant rain which has fallen lately has now removed all apprehensions of famine. The crops are thriving vigorously, and there is every appearance that the harvest will prove more bounteous than has been the case for the past three seasons. The face of the country between the Jumna and Ganges is heavy with nearly ripe cultivation, and the joy of the people is now as extreme as was their despondency a few days ago; in fact, till the rain fell suddenly, and almost unexpectedly the other day, a panic and all its consequences was imminent. It was grievous to witness the despair which overwhelmed the people, and to feel the impossibility of affording them any material relief. Prices of grain, however, still continue exorbitant, notwithstanding the Bunnecahs hold large stocks of last year's crop. It is absurd to say—as I observe it gravely declared in an official document—that the large number of troops, &c., moving about the country last year with the Governor-general reduced the stocks of grain stored in the country, that is to say, reduced it more than would have happened had the troops remained stationary. It seems to me that 10,000 men eat exactly the same quantity of bread and other food whether on the march or quartered in barracks, the only difference being that they draw their supplies from many places in the former instance, and from one only in the latter, and therefore really less disturbance and inequality took place last year than usual. In the Sudder stations, attas may be quoted at eight to nine seers per rupee. Gram is about the same rate, but cheaper at a distance from cantonments. Lately I purchased in the district six maunds of inferior gram for Rs. 20, and was glad to get it, and it had then to be brought twenty-two miles. Table rice, which is only consumed by Europeans, can with difficulty be got for six to seven seers per rupee, and ordinary quality about ten seers. These rates now prevail in the Doab, according to the testimony of a bunnecah at Etah, whom I consulted yesterday, confirmed by another to whom I spoke at Bewah this morning. These prices will probably not fall much lower until the harvest is gathered, and the absolute out-turn ascertained. Then we must still wait till the rubbee crop springs up, and should that appear to prove abundant we shall have attas at 30 seers for the rupee. In regard to indigo, about Allyghur great expectations are entertained of a bumper season, and the Bellah concern especially promises well. In Etah, Mynpoorie, Agra, &c., less hopeful results are anticipated, in consequence of rain having fallen too late. One concern, which usually makes 800 maunds, will be contented with 250 this season. By the way, the samples of indigo I have seen in this neighbourhood are great trash, but I suppose high prices will, nevertheless, be obtained in consequence of the shortcomings in Bengal. The Ganges canal is quite a sham as far as navigation is concerned, and nearly so in respect to irrigation. When its waters are most needed the canal is generally dry. If the canal had been as useful as is pretended, it might have been the means of relieving the anxiety universally felt in August, but at that critical period something was wrong with it, and hardly a drop of water could it bestow on the famishing ground on its banks. At this moment, that the canal is again full of water, it is doing more harm than good, for it has inundated the country above Cawnpore, and is destroying the growing crops. You see the canal is always in extremes, either too little water or too much, starving the land, or drowning it, doing it to death any way. The superintendents have just found out that more locks are absolutely required to enable them to regulate the supply of water, the construction of which will necessitate the closing of the channel for some months. I have frequently conversed with cultivators whose lands are within the range of the water power of the canal, that is to say, from five to six miles on either side, and the majority of them object to use its waters for irrigating purposes on pecuniary grounds. They argue that as they must maintain a certain number of bullocks for ploughing, &c., these animals would be idle were they not to be employed drawing water from the wells, which would be the case were the canal water to flow in channels through their fields. Why, say they, should we pay double? Pay for bullocks and pay for canal also? They must keep the bullocks all the year round. They are perfectly sensible of one great advantage they derive from the canal, and for which they pay nothing. The canal water percolates into the wells, and whereas formerly the buckets had to fall twenty or thirty feet before they came to water, water is now very near the level of the field, sometimes not five feet below the brink. I think the canal water should be as free as river water, and an imperial work of this nature be thrown open to all the inhabitants on its banks, so that they may be on a level in respect to its use with the people residing on the banks of the Ganges, the Nuddea rivers and other natural water courses. The Collectors in the North-west are full of the Income-tax. They talk and think of nothing else, and some of them have reported themselves sick (so detraction says), to escape the unaccustomed work. In several districts respectable natives have refused to accept the situation of assessors of the Income-tax, although the pay is Rs. 500 per mensem. They absolutely dread becoming unpopular with their countrymen, and the fate of Ramdial, of Lucknow, deters them. This case is much discussed by natives in Government employ, and I think I may safely say that the opinion of sensible men is, that Ramdial was the victim of a conspiracy. A very shrewd Mahomedan deputy-collector assured me that, at Furruckabad (a Mahomedan city, second only to Lucknow in disloyalty during the mutiny) the respectable people were unanimous in scouting the charges advanced by the local newspaper. Those knowing in these matters do not expect the Income-tax to produce much in this quarter. Agra may possibly yield 1½ lakh. Allyghur district 1 lakh. Mynpoorie, Etawah, Etah, Muttra, about one-third of a lakh each, Futteyghur 1 lakh, Meerut and Bareilly each the same as Agra. Allahabad and Cawnpore two lakhs each, or say five between them. Shajehanpore, Seharunpore, Mozuffernuggur, Moradabad, and Bolundshuhur will not yield anything like half a lakh a piece.—Englishman.

THE GANGES STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY has declared a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the operations of the first six months of the current year. The net profits amounted to 19 per cent. on the capital. The Company intend to take advantage of the opening of the railway to Rajmahal to forward their supplies of coal to the upper stations. Ultimately the whole of the river passenger traffic will be diverted to the railway at Colgong or Rajmahal. The goods trade will always be so large as to keep the river steamers employed. All experience hitherto has shown that, wherever a railway has been laid, it has created a traffic of its own.

KISHNAGHUR.—What we have all foretold has come to pass; as the rice crops are being housed the ryots have stopped paying rents in toto, and of course no Mahajun will advance a rupee upon the faith of the cold weather or any other crop. Mr. Grant's policy is bearing fruit in many ways. A perfect exodus of planters has taken place from the small community of Kishnaghur. Tweedie, home; Sibbald, China; Wood, Cachar; Saubolle, Railway; Charlton, Tirhoot; and Parker, Taylor, Smith, and Voules from the district. From Barsat to Shikarpore along the line of the Matabanga, Issumuttee, Boyrnb, and Kumar, there are only ten or a dozen Europeans left, and how long they may remain is doubtful, as I heard yesterday, from perfectly reliable authority, that the Bengal Indigo Company were thinking of closing their concerns for good, seeing no chance of working them this year at anything but a large and certain loss. This I think a pity; they are the finest and best managed concerns in the district, they have the best men and the most money of any people around. The last is probably the reason they close, in preference to spending six lakhs amongst Mr. Grant's capitalists and getting a third or a half in return. We are having an unusually wet autumn. This last fall of rain I believe was quite against rule.—Hurkaru.

FLOATING WAGGONS.—Some highly interesting experiments have been made in the beautiful grounds of the Ishapore Powder Works, in the presence of their Excellencies Lord and Lady Canning and Sir Hugh Rose, attended by Major General Sir R. Birch, K.C.B., and a select company from Barrackpore Park. Colonel Eyre, C.B., conducted the experiments, the object of which was to make trial of the floating properties of two metallic waggons recently received from England for the use of the Government of India at the requisition of Colonel Eyre, who first introduced this valuable invention to the notice of the military authorities in England in the summer of 1850, by whom it was adopted at Woolwich. Two waggons being lashed together side by side and covered over by a bamboo platform, were run into the river Hooghly at high tide, with the wheels and running gear complete, and were found not only to float extremely well, but to be quite capable of supporting the weight of a field 9-pounder gun, with its limber and ammunition complete, and eight or nine men in addition. After being rowed up and down a short distance, the running gear was detached, and allowed to sink. The two waggon bodies, thus lightened, became sufficiently buoyant to sustain with ease the weight of thirty-eight men, or about 48 cwt. The weight of each waggon, complete on its wheels, is 17 cwt.; and the result of a very careful series of experiments at Woolwich, under Colonel Tulloh, R.A., showed that each waggon body was capable of sustaining either 25 or 34 cwt., according as it was used with or without the running gear attached. Suspended to each waggon is a small metallic feeding-trough, hooked on by a chain. Two of these troughs, being fastened together with bamboos, formed a very manageable though original looking canoe, which was easily propelled to and fro by a native, who sat balanced on a board between the two, having one leg in each trough, and working a paddle with his hands. By these simple means a communication could be always effected with the opposite shore of a stream where necessary. The advantages possessed by an army marching with such waggons are self-evident. Cumbersome pontoons and bridge-trains might be altogether dispensed with, the ordinary waggons that must accompany an army supplying their place; on approaching a river, the means of crossing over the troops and impedimenta would be ready at hand, since the waggons could be driven right across full of men and military stores, or they might be formed into boats, rafts, or bridges, according to the circumstances of the case. Both the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief expressed their entire satisfaction with the experiment, and it now only remains to make the necessary arrangements for giving our Indian armies the early benefit of this most practical and valuable invention.—Englishman.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—A fatal accident on the East Indian Railway, near Rajmahal, occurred on the 5th October. According to the deputy consulting engineer, "the circumstances of the case appear to be, that the train, loaded with tents, sleepers, &c., for Rajmahal, and conveying about 160 people in all, consisting of one of the railway inspectors with his family, about thirty or forty classics proceeding in charge of tents, 100 coolies from Rajmahal, and a few coolies of the neighbourhood, was proceeding along the line (which at this place is in very fair order) at a rate of about fifteen miles an hour, when it was suddenly brought up by one engine and seventeen trucks being thrown off the line with a most violent shock, seven coolies being killed and fifteen injured, chiefly by the sleepers (with which the trucks on which they were seated were loaded) being hurled about in all directions."

GRANTS OF LAND.—A correspondent of the Bombay Times makes a suggestion which we trust Government will act on. "As it is a most desirable thing for Europeans who wish to become landholders in this country to know to whom to apply for grants of land, with a view to settle on such grants themselves, or to have them brought under cultivation at their own expense, would it not be an excellent plan were the Government to desire collectors to publish, monthly at least, such portions of land, and their localities, as are available? It is quite impossible, otherwise, for intending settlers to know where land for certain purposes is to be had." Without the fee-simple no landholders will be safe.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Oct. 22).—We have very little change to notice in the produce market; business has been as limited as is generally the case a week or ten days preceding the general holidays of the Doorga Poojah, which commenced on the 18th, and will last to the 30th instant inclusive. Excepting a small concession in the prices of Saltpeetre, Rice, Linseed, Rape-seed, and Jute, all other staples are still firmly held, consequent on moderate supplies from the interior. Heavy shipments of former engagements of Rice, Linseed, Jute, Hides, and Gunny Bags have taken place in order to complete the lading of some vessels before the holidays.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Oct. 22).—Very little business has been done during the last fortnight, in consequence of the general holidays; buyers being engaged to close their former purchases have shown no desire to enter into fresh contracts. There has been a little inquiry for stout 8 lbs. and upwards, 39 inches wide, and 50, 54, and 60 inches wide 11 lbs. and upwards. Grey Shirtings at a slight advance on price. Figured Shirtings have also been in little demand at a slight advance. Mule Twist has been in fair request, and stocks in first hands being somewhat reduced have caused an improvement of about 1 pie per morah. Metals have continued dull. The Commission for the Revision of Tariff of Fixed Valuations for Duty, which came into operation last April, has been appointed. It is understood that it will recommend that the system of rating Cotton Goods and Yarns for duty be assimilated to that which has long prevailed at Bombay, viz.—On Grey Cottons and Mule Twist the duties shall be assessed on specific valuations per pound weight, and on all bleached Cottons, Fancy, Coloured, and Dyed Cottons and Woolens the duties to be on the market value, in bond, on importation. The valuations which the Commission has decided on recommending, we understand, are to be as follows:—Grey Shirtings, Madapolams, 9 annas per lb.; Long Cloths, 8 annas per lb.; T. Cloths, Domestic, Sheetings, Drills, &c., 7½ annas per lb.; Grey Jaconets and Mulls, ad valorem; Mule Twist No. 40, instead of present rate, 9 annas, to be 7 as. 9 pice per lb.; Mule Twist No. 50, instead of present rate, 11 as. 3 pice, to be 9 annas per lb.; and higher numbers in proportion. Metals are also likely to be altered. The new Tariff is expected to come into operation after the holidays.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIGO is grown and manufactured by the Madras ryots, who have no dislike to its culture without advances, where the demand is sure. The out-turn in 1859-60 for the whole presidency was 25,31,726 lbs. The cultivation is carried on chiefly in Cuddapah, Vellore and North and South Arcot. The cultivation and manufacture by natives bear the ratio to that by Europeans of about ten to one.

RANGOON.—The Income-tax assessors appointed for Rangoon are—official, Messrs. E. O'Riley, magistrate, and R. S. Edwards, collector of customs. Non-official—Mr. C. M. Crisp, on a salary of Rs. 400 a month. The appointments have met with general approval.

ANOTHER "ILLUSTRIOUS" TRAVELLER.—A correspondent of the Sindian says, Prince Meer Ally Yar Mahomed, one of the ex-Ameers of Sind, intends to take a trip to England, partly with a view to petition for an increase of his allowance from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,300 per month. He is said to be a gentlemanly man, of about forty years of age, and speaks English fluently.

KATTYWAR.—The Bombay papers state that the present condition of Kattywar is such as to necessitate a complete political revival. The Katty chiefs, resigning themselves to sensual indulgence, leave their affairs in the hands of a set of Kamdars, who combine in their attempts to deceive the Political Agent. A case recently occurred in which a Dher child was thrown out of a high window into the river below, by some Brahmins, to appease the cholera. The child was picked up alive, and brought into Rajkote by its parents.

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.—Sir M. Sausse, Chief Justice of Bombay, seems to be distinguishing himself by frequent contests with both juries and counsel. He recently kept a jury shut up till midnight, supplying them with only water, till one of their number, a fat Hindoo, would agree with the other eleven in a verdict. Mr. Anstey makes himself especially obnoxious to him. On remonstrating with him for calling useless witnesses in a case, and being answered that a counsel has no discretion when their names appear in his instructions, the Chief Justice said, "Mr. Anstey, if a person has no discretion, he should not be counsel." On which Mr. Anstey replied, "I have, my lord, a duty to perform to my client, and I prefer ten times to incur the displeasure of the court than to violate my own conscience; I stand upon my right to call the witnesses whom I am instructed to call."

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Oct. 13.—The London Mail of the 27th August arrived here on the 9th instant.

The news which we have to convey by this mail is of very great importance. Hostilities have been resumed in the north. Mr. Harry Parkes, Mr. Bowlby, the Times' correspondent, Mr. Loch, Lord Elgin's private secretary, Mr. de Norman, attaché to Mr. Bruce, Captain Brabazon, D.A.C.G., and Captain Anderson, of Fane's Horse, have been taken prisoners. Two engagements or skirmishes have been fought with the Tartar cavalry, who surrounded our force, but had to retire with some loss. The allied army is waiting in a hostile attitude within sight of the walls of Peking; and negotiations have again been opened up by the Chinese, but not in any timid or supplicatory spirit.

In our last overland we mentioned that negotiations had been broken off at Tien-tsin, and that the 1st division of the force was marching upon Peking. The Imperial Commissioners were puzzled by the demands for a permanent residency at Peking, and for an immediate and large installment of indemnity money. Their countermand for delay was met by the advance of Lord Elgin with a great portion of the allied force. Soon the towns upon the march were found to be in great part deserted, and supplies had to be taken by force. One large town, Ho-si-wu, was completely looted by the force, and it became evident that there must be another appeal to arms. On the morning of the 18th September Mr. Parkes and his party fell into the hands of the Chinese, and it was found that the army was surrounded by Tartar troops at the village of Ho-ko-chuang. An engagement immediately took place, which caused the Tartars to retire with some loss. A second engagement took place on the 21st September, when about twenty-five of our force and several hundreds of the enemy were placed hors de combat. The next day a flag of truce was sent in from Peking, and proposals were made, but in a quiet independent manner, to re-open negotiations. On the following day supplies were sent in by the Chinese, for the use of the Allied army, which saved Tung-chau from being looted. The latest news we have is by verbal communication with a French steamer which entered the Yang-tse as the mail from Shanghai was leaving. It brought intelligence from the seat of war up to the 27th or 28th September, when the Allied army was still in its position seven or eight miles from Peking, and two or three from Tung-chau. The statement was confirmed that the prisoners were well treated. The position of the prisoners, together with the want of more troops and of the siege guns, would necessitate delay, and further complicate the question which arose between them and the Imperial Commissioners.

The rebels still continue to absent themselves from the immediate neighbourhood of Shanghai. Their object in coming to that place was to be at a port where they could be in contact with foreigners and obtain foreign ammunition and arms. Having been driven from Shanghai it is likely they will try to effect their object by advancing on one of the other ports where foreigners reside. Elsewhere we give a letter from a missionary who is living amongst them at Su-chau, and in contact with some of the rebel kings.

In the south of China there is nothing stirring; and but for the news from the north Hong Kong would have been quite dull during the past fortnight.—Overland China Mail.

SEVEN MILES FROM PEKIN, Sept. 22.—An attempt has been made at negotiation, which has ended in the smoke of more gunpowder, the partial deception of Lord Elgin and Mr. Parkes, and, I grieve to say, the capture of the latter by the Tartars, with the Times' correspondent, Mr. Loch, Lord Elgin's Private Secretary, Mr. de Norman, attaché, Captain Brabazon of the artillery, and the adjutant of Fane's Horse, with some twenty sowars, and the murder of a French officer. But I must, as well as my memory will enable me, take up my narrative where I dropped it on the 26th August. The whole of our force were then encamped at or near the Taku Forts; now they are scattered over a space of some eighty miles—to say nothing of the 44th regiment, who were packed off in a deuce of a hurry on the 27th or 28th, to relieve Shanghai, where it appears they were not wanted, the Royal Marines having "settled the hash" of the rebels before their arrival. It was not until the 1st instant, I think (unfortunately I have lost the few notes I kept), that the first move was made towards the north. This consisted in the advance of our 1st division, who crossed the Peiho, over a bridge of boats, about two miles above Tongku, and were followed on the 2nd by the 2nd division (with the exception of a wing of the Buffs, who were left to garrison the Taku Forts), the French marching along the left bank of the river. The first halting place was about half a mile from the bridge of boats, on a plain nearly encircled by orchards full of grapes, peaches, apples, pears, and water melons, which enabled the army generally to lay in at a cheap rate a large stock of future mollygrubs and collywabbles, not to mention more serious complaints, from which they have been (to an extent seriously embarrassing the doctors, I believe) suffering ever since. The second march was to a place called Kikko, the third to Kih-tang-kou, and the fourth brought the whole army up to Tien-tsin, the marches consequently averaging about eight miles each. But although they were so short, and the start was generally made before daybreak each morning, still they were much more fatiguing than any one would imagine, as they were never finished in less than four hours, during the last two of which the heat was always very great, and, to men carrying heavy packs, as well as their rifles and ammunition, very trying. At Tien-tsin the army halted for nearly a week on a magnificent plain immediately outside the town, living in clover in more senses than one, while the French occupied a position on the left bank of the river, and an attempt was made at negotiation, which, as I have already said, has ended in smoke, the Chinese commissioner sent down to treat with us having declared himself afraid to sign any convention on his own responsibility, and almost hinting, I believe, that our best plan would be to advance upon Peking, and so frighten the Emperor into submission by a warlike demonstration at his very door. On the 9th inst., accordingly, a force consisting of the King's Dragoon Guards, Fane's and Probyn's Horse, Baring's, Desborough's, and Stirling's Batteries, the Royal Marines, and 99th Regiment, the whole under the command of General Michell, marched past Tien-tsin, to a place called Pookoo, ten miles distant. On the following day they marched to Yang-tsin, eight miles further—the next day to Nan-tsin, eight miles further—and the next to Hoo-si-woo, when they halted for five days again, until the 2nd Queen's, the 60th Rifles, and some 2,000 French came up. Almost the whole of the road for these last four marches was through endless fields of millet, extending as far as the eye could reach, and the camping ground at the end of each of them was nearly as comfortable as a bed of thorns, being upon half cut beds of millet, the spikes of which were nearly as sharp and strong as those surrounding the Taku Forts, and had, I verily believe, been left so by the Tartars, in the hope that they would effectually prevent our advance, without any further aid from their prowess. So far not one of them had shown his face within range since the dressing they got at Taku. At Hoo-si-woo, accordingly, Mr. Parkes was emboldened to ride forward to Mut-ow, about ten miles further on, attended by a cavalry escort and the gentlemen I have already mentioned, in order, I believe, to propose to the inhabitants that if they would send us out supplies of fuel, flour, &c., we would not molest them but encamp outside—as we had previously done in the case of every village or town we had passed. As far as I can make out from the various reports I hear, they first of all told him that they would consent to furnish us with supplies if we would agree to their selecting the camping ground for us; but on his replying that the General could not agree to any such condition, they immediately made him and all his companions prisoners, with the exception of a few King's Dragoon Guards, who succeeded in cutting their way out. Colonel Walker, of the Bays, and Mr. Thomson, of the Commissariat, who had ridden out in the same direction, were also very nearly taken prisoners, a French officer who accompanied them being cut to pieces—Colonel Walker only escaping with the loss of his sword, and a cut over the hand, and Mr. Thomson with a lance wound in the back. The Cavalry, Artillery, 2nd Queen's, Royal Marines, and 99th Regiment, were immediately ordered out by Sir Hope Grant, and about midway between Hoo-si-woo our friends of Singho celebrity, and whom we had heard had never drawn rein after that affair until they reached Peking, again came in sight, extending in a wide semi-circle before Mut-ow as far as the eye could reach. The Queen's, who were in advance, were immediately ordered to halt, until the rest of the regiments came up, and a line of battle was formed, the French taking the right, Queen's the centre, Royal Marines and 99th the left, and artillery and cavalry the flanks. They had not advanced far in this order before fire was opened on them from some dozen points in the aforesaid semi-circle, while the Tartar cavalry threatened our flanks. They were promptly met, however, by ours, but the Irregular Horse, who were on the right flank, the King's Dragoon Guards being on the left, alone succeeded in getting among them—with the to be expected result of "chawing them up" completely, of course. Our artillery meanwhile thundered dreadful responses to theirs, and with very unequal effect—theirs doing little or no damage, ours telling with deadly effect, and finally completely silencing all their batteries, which were planted in all sorts of extraordinary positions, and were evidently of quite an impromptu construction, some at the entrances to villages, others among clumps of trees, and others behind natural embankments. The infantry then advanced, and threw in a smart fire on them as they retreated, our nimble and gallant Allies even getting among them with the bayonet, I believe, and killing great numbers. The enemy fled in every direction, and did not even attempt to defend Mut-ow itself, which was accordingly entered and taken possession of the same evening, and proved to be a very comfortable and picturesque little town, with a tumble down old brick wall of great height, and once, doubtless, of great strength. The following day was made a day of rest, and yesterday the force again advanced into the plain, and had really a hard day's fighting. They had not gone more than about three miles before the enemy again presented themselves in a vast semi-circle. We met them pretty much as we did on the previous day, but got closer to them on several occasions—both the Irregular Horse and King's Dragoon Guards getting well among them, as well as our more advanced parties of infantry—although from the nature of the ground (endless fields of cut millet, intersected by wide ditches, and separated every here and there by dense thickets), and their knowledge of how to avail themselves of it, it was very difficult to get near them at all. If we had had infantry alone I believe they actually might have had the audacity to close with us, as they were evidently plucky enough men; but, as it was, they showed themselves, on both days, impressed with a very salutary dread of our artillery and cavalry, and although they made several apparent charges at our cavalry, I believe they were almost all merely feints to draw them into some trap or other (such as a concealed ditch, or rough piece of ground), while entangled in which they might have an opportunity to fire their gingalls at them from under the cover of some wall or cope of trees. However, the result of the two days' fighting has been that we have captured upwards of a hundred cannon, most of them 8-pounder brass guns of very good description, immense stores of forage, grain, and tea, and have got to within seven miles of Pekin, and have, I should think, thoroughly disorganised the Tartar army, capturing and entirely destroying all their camps and munitions of war, so far. (They say that Sankolinsin commanded in person on both days, and that he had ten Mongolian princes, each with 5,000 men under him.) We have now taken up a position on the right bank of the grand canal, only seven miles from the Celestial capital, but are again encamping among fields of spikes (of which our worthy and gallant general seems to think we are fond, as he never lets us among the trees); there (like so many impaled martyrs) we are to await, I believe, the arrival of some more troops and stores. A "slave" has just come into me that the Emperor has bolted from Pekin, and that Sankolinsin has sent in another flag of truce, but I have not time to find out how far it is true. Great sympathy is felt for Mr. Parkes and his party, and I have heard a report, which I earnestly hope is true, that Lord Elgin has declared he will order Pekin to be sacked if he is not given up again with all his party, alive and in good condition. Such is certainly not more than Mr. Parkes deserves, for he has undoubtedly proved himself throughout the whole of this campaign, as indeed throughout the whole of his long service in China, one of the most energetic and zealous servants his country has ever had. If it is true that the Emperor has fled, and that Sankolinsin is now in undivided power at Pekin, I believe, however, that not only will Mr. Parkes be given up again at right, but that a satisfactory treaty will soon be made, as Sankolinsin's policy throughout, I suspect, has not been so much to repel us, as merely to get a name for himself by opposing us with apparent determination, while he was in reality merely forcing us to advance until his chicken-hearted cousin (as I believe the Emperor is) should get sufficiently frightened to fly into Tartary, that then he might assume the reins of government, and by taking that course which his more enlightened mind must have pointed out to him long ere this is the best for his country, secure for himself that place in it to which he has all along been aspiring.

TIEN-TSIN, Sept. 26.—It appears that Messrs. Loch, Bowlby and (Captain) Brabazon are all safe and well treated at Pekin with Mr. Consul Parkes. The army is within five miles of Pekin, after an engagement on Saturday, in which the enemy is said to have kept at a respectful distance from our artillery; but the French got at them and treated them very roughly, killing, it is said, 400 or 500 men. We had one officer and a few men wounded. The Emperor's brother and another Mandarin of the highest feather came out to camp, but Lord Elgin would not see them until Mr. Parkes and the other prisoners were given up. Tung-chau was given up to pillage, and the usual atrocities of the Tartars were committed by themselves on their women, whom they deprived of life, and on their children, whom they threw into wells. The latter was past doubt, as the bodies were seen when the place was entered. —China Mail.

SWATOW.—From Swatow we (China Mail) hear of the bombardment of another unfortunate village. This time H.M.'s gunboat Weazel has been the assailing party. Certain information of the names of the Chinese who made the attack on Messrs. Jardine, Matheson and Co.'s agent's house on Double Island—the planner of the raid and the disposer of the plunder—being obtained by the British Consul, the gunboat on the 16th September left this port for the village of Bochoey, situate up the Haimun Creek. After a delay of three days, for the local authorities, who, on the plea of the diminutive size of the attacking force, and the dread of the villagers' vengeance being turned towards themselves in case of the defeat which they anticipated, ultimately refused to assist, the usual demand in such cases being made—i.e., restoration of plunder, and delivery of ringleaders—and compliance being refused by the villagers, who did not attempt to deny their participation in the robbery, the gunboat tried the persuasive powers of shot and shell—ineffectually as far as obtaining any desire for treating was concerned. A landing party was sent on shore with a howitzer, and were driven back to their boats—providentially without mishap. The gunboat then taking another and superior position to the former threw more shell amongst the houses, and sent a boat in to observe their effect. The boat with an officer and four men were taken prisoners, lured, as has since been heard, by a letter being held up. The Weazel had of course to withdraw for fear of compromising their safety. Letters have been received from the prisoners, who appear to suffer more from anxiety of mind than from their wounds or personal discomforts. The gunboat returned to Double Island on the 1st October to await reinforcements.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Oct. 29.—During the past fortnight rain has fallen heavily and almost incessantly, and a large portion of the country in the neighbourhood of Colombo has been laid under water. For most of the time, too, the wind has been squally and the sea high, so that circumstances have not been favourable for the preparation and despatch of coffee. We have to notice, however, the departure of three vessels for London, taking away 7,025 cwt. of plantation coffee, and 6,594 native—total, 13,619 cwt. A vessel bound for New York has also taken 1,496 cwt. of native coffee; so that our exports for the fortnight have been:—Plantation, 7,025 cwt.; native, 8,090. Total, 15,115.

The Avon, which sailed yesterday, took the following passengers from our shores:—Mr. and Mrs. Johnston (Ordnance Department) and family; Mr. and Mrs. P. Adams and family; the Rev. J. Rippon, Mrs. Rippon and family.

By a curious coincidence the Conqueror arrived in the roadstead just as the Avon was ready to sail, barely affording time to a gentleman who arrived in the Conqueror to see and spend a couple of hours with his sister, who was leaving Ceylon in the Avon. They had not seen each other for a dozen years, and now they met but to part. Such an incident is worth mentioning, not only for the sake of the coincidence, but to illustrate the migratory tendencies of the English people—tendencies which remain a matter of intense astonishment to a large portion of the inert stay-at-home Asiatics.

At length our new ruler is at the helm, and he has spoken, amongst other matters, on the all-engrossing subject of the railway. We are much where we were, however, for we were previously aware that her Majesty's Government wished to leave the question to the Colonist as represented by the Colonial legislature. We cannot doubt that Sir C. MacCarthy would be glad to get rid of the company and the agreement with them, which in his capacity of colonial secretary he so strenuously opposed. We have no doubt that, like the rest of us, he would be equally glad to see the maritime and mountain capitals connected by a railway, provided the colony could afford the expense. But, naturally enough, before announcing his own policy, the governor is anxious to obtain from the majority of the taxpayers a decided expression of their wishes. They, on the other hand, are no doubt in the same difficulty with Sir Charles MacCarthy as to the state of our finances. Large as our revenue is, and greatly as it has increased in the last five years, the demands on it have increased at least in equal proportion. Apart from the greater expenditure on public works, and the necessarily greater annual outlay for keeping them up, the cost of the official establishment has increased enormously. Instead of £194,000 in 1855, we paid in 1859 no less than £269,000 for fixed and provisional salaries and travelling charges. Fixed salaries rose from £102,000 to £197,000; provisional salaries more than doubled, rising from £27,000 to £57,000; while travelling charges rose from £4,000 to £14,000.

On Friday, 26th October, Sir Charles MacCarthy held his first levee as Governor of Ceylon, when there was a large attendance of the leading inhabitants of all classes. To Sir Charles MacCarthy as well as to others the scene must have been one exciting mingled feelings. For the memory of the able man who so lately held his farewell levee in the same place could not but present itself. To him Ceylon owes much: let us augur for Sir Charles MacCarthy an equally splendid career, and for the colony under his rule a still higher condition of prosperity.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

JAVA, Oct. 14.—The news from Banjermassing is very unsatisfactory. By last accounts the Dutch troops had been thrice repulsed in an attack upon a benting (entrenchment) of the rebels. In this affair Captain Koch and Lieutenant van Emden were killed, while Lieutenant Versyck, brother of the commander of the expedition, was seriously wounded. It is also stated that a native company refused to fire upon the enemy.

The visit of the Japanese embassy does not seem to have produced a favourable impression in Batavia. They appear to have been under great restraint. They could not accept an invitation to dine with his Excellency the Governor-general—they could not make an excursion into the interior—they could not pass the night on shore—and they could not, or would not, answer any questions which were asked of them. The American officers are said to have kept them under a very polite but very vigilant surveillance, and prevented as much as possible any conversation with them.

The Niagara left Batavia on the 11th in prosecution of her voyage to Japan.

The news from the Moluccas is favourable, with the exception of Timor, where fevers and small-pox prevailed to a great extent. On Banda there has been a great scarcity of labour in the nutmeg gardens, since the park slaves and labourers were emancipated.

On the night of the 23rd September the English brig Corcyra, Captain Walsen, from Bali Badong bound to Singapore, was wrecked on the point of Jambrana. Information of the occurrence having been sent by the master to Banyuwangi, the cruise-boat No. 40 and a cargo-boat were immediately despatched to the spot, by which a great part of the ship's stores were landed. No part of the cargo, consisting of 3,000 bags of rice and 250 piculs of coffee, could be saved.—Singapore Free Press.

SIAM.—His Majesty the first King of Siam has caused it to be intimated to the Prussian mission at present in Eastern Asia that it will be inconvenient to him to receive the Plenipotentiary before the end of March, as during the months of January and February he will be engaged in performing two very important ceremonies connected with the Buddhist religion. The first of these will consist in erecting a high pyramid or gift pillar on the top of the sacred pyramidal house at the holy city of Phra Bard, and enshrining some sacred Buddhist relics in two stone pagodas recently erected at that place. The holy city, being situated seventy miles from Bangkok, at the foot of some mountains, in thick jungle, it is necessary that a dry time of the year should be chosen for the pilgrimage thither, as his Majesty will be accompanied by his family and several of the principal officers of State, and the time occupied altogether will be about a fortnight. The second of the ceremonies which will engage his Majesty's attention will be the welcoming and receiving the new white female elephant of Yasodhuri, which will leave her present place of abode in the end of December next, and arrive at Bangkok in February. Dry weather is also essential for the safe transit of the sacred animal, as it has to traverse a mountainous and jungly road.—Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Sept. 17.—Siraj-ood-deen Akhoondzada and the Ailchee, or Ambassador of the King of Bokhara, attended the durbar this morning to pay their respects and to offer the presents which they had brought from their master to the Ameer. There were many fine valuable things, but the only article requiring notice was a very handsome carpet and a horse. This is the same carpet which the Emperor of Russia had sent as a present to the King of Bokhara. The horse, as remarked by the Ameer, is the best of the kind he ever saw in his life. The Ameer was highly pleased with the presents, and ordered the horse to be made over to the Darogah.—Sept. 18.—Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan stated in his urzee from Toorkistan that he had received news from Mamana, to the effect that Hakoomut Khan, the Hakim of Mamana, had sent his son to Sooltan Ahmed Jan Heerat, asking him for troops to protect Mamana from the Affghan; accordingly, Sooltan Ahmed had sent a number of troops under ten Khans to that place, and Mamana is now under the Persians. He further informed the Ameer that the ruler of Undkhoe had also friendly communications with Hakoomut Khan, and he (Ufzul Khan) is resolved to pay him off.—Sept. 19.—About eighty mares, under the charge of Ghoolam Nubbee Khan, sent by Sirdar Mahomed Auzim Khan from Koonduz, arrived in Cabool, and were stopped by Shere Allee Khan's men for the duty. Ghoolam Nubbee Khan went to the Ameer, and informed him that the mares belonged to Mahomed Auzim Khan, and therefore hoped that they would be exempted from the duty. On the Ameer making inquiries about the matter, Sirdar Shere Allee stated that it was not the property of Mahomed Auzim, but of somebody else, and that only to save the duty Ghoolam Nubbee wanted to deceive the Ameer. On this a letter was ordered to be written to Mahomed Auzim, requesting him to tell the truth, if the mares were his own property.—Sept. 20.—The Barukzaee sowars were inspected to-day by the Ameer, and ordered to march to Zoomut to assist Sirdar Mahomed Surwar Khan in realising the revenue of that country. Mirza Ahd Khan, an agent to Sirdar Ma-homed Ufzul Khan in Cabool, having been summoned to the durbar, was directed to present the accounts of Toorkistan, which he had lately received from his son. The Mirza promised to do so to-morrow.—Sept. 22.—Mirza Ahd Khan, with a detailed account of Toorkistan, waited on the Ameer. After taking the account thoroughly into consideration, the Ameer, turning towards Ahd Khan, made the following remarks:—"Is it not very strange, that when the income of Toorkistan, that is of Bulkh, Shukurghan, Ukhcha, and Koonduz amounts to fourteen lacs of Cabool rupees, and the expense of the whole troops stationed there to thirteen thousand (should be thirteen lacs) still Mahomed Ufzul Khan, keeps grumbling that he cannot pay the whole troops out of the income?" The Ameer also requested the Mirza to write a letter to Ufzul Khan, asking him to give an explanation of the grounds on which he applies to the Ameer to pay a portion of the Toorkistan troops.—Sept. 23.—Ubdoolrazak Khan, Moustafee, reminded the Ameer in to-day's durbar of the promise he had made to give Toorkistan to Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, and spoke in favour of the Sirdar, that if the Ameer would not displease Ufzul Khan he had better send Shere Allee Khan to Koonduz and get Mahomed Auzim Khan to Cabool. Shere Allee was ready to pay five thousand troops and three lacs of rupees besides out of Koonduz revenue only, continued the Moustafee. At first the Ameer got in a rage and said, "you are causing differences amongst my sons by making such proposals," and then ordered a letter to be written to Mahomed Auzim Khan, telling him either to agree to the terms as above-mentioned or to come to Cabool, as Shere Allee Khan was ready to pay him (the Ameer) three lacs a year, besides the expense of the five thousand troops.—Sept. 24.—Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan's urzee was this day received from Kandahar. He said he had got letters from Heerat to the effect that Sooltan Ahmed Jan had sent his brother Mahomed Oomer Khan to Suhzmar to collect as many troops as possible and to send them to Heerat. Besides this, about ten thousand Persian troops were on their way from Mushhed to Heerat. About one thousand men had already left Heerat, and were encamped at Anardurrah. He further informed the Ameer that troops were also being enlisted by the Khans of Heerat in the different chief places of Heerat, such as Tahmnee, Khoojundee and Char Eemagh of Heerat.—Sept. 25.—Durbar was held as usual. Sirdar Shere Allee was desired by the Ameer to make over the territory of Hazara Poissod, which formerly belonged to Sirdar Mahomed Shurreef Khan, to Mahomed Hoosain Khan, as he had to pay two hundred sepoy, and had not revenue enough to meet that expense, and as Mahomed Shurreef Khan was gone to Kandahar, if Mahomed Hoosain realised more than was due to him, he would be made to pay the surplus to the State. A letter was also ordered to be sent to Mahomed Shurreef Khan to Kandahar, informing him that the Hazara country had been made over to his brother Mahomed Hoosain Khan.—Sept. 26.—Auleejah Uklutur Khan Barukzaee, with sixteen very valuable horses, arrived at Cabool to-day. These horses are sent by Sirdar Auzim Khan, from Koonduz, as presents for the undermentioned Sirdars. Two for Sirdar Wullee Mahomed Khan, three for Mahomed Oosman Khan, four for Sooltan Mohamed, two for Peer Mohamed, two for Shumshoodeen Khan, two for Syud Mohamed Khan, and one for Mahomed Yeosul Khan. All of the above sirdars were well pleased with the horses, and every one gave a piece of khillut to Uklutur Khan.—Sept. 27.—The kotwal of the city took eight gamblers to the durbar, and reported to the Ameer that they were always getting the people into their houses to gamble, and to-day, when his men went to apprehend them, they, instead of obeying the order, used abusive language and were ready to beat them. The Ameer, after making some inquiries, ordered the gamblers to be fined twenty-five rupees each, and further, that if they were caught again they were to be severely punished.—Delhi Gazette.

WESTERN JUMNA CANALS.

Public Works Dept., Oct. 9.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to sanction the sub div. of the Western Jumna Canals into four separate exec. charges as follows:—

5. With respect to unatt. Capt. W. R. Forster, the subject of the letter from your Government dated 8th Feb. last, H.E.H. was of opinion that the grant of brevet rank in the army in such a case would be unusual; and he suggested whether, as Capt. Forster was considered by your Government to be deserving of reward, it would not be better that a step of local unattached rank should be granted him.

6. H.M.'s Government concur in this view, and I have now the gratification of conveying to you H.M.'s authority to confer on Capt. Forster an unattached commission as major, from the date of your receipt of this despatch, as a testimony of the sense entertained by H.M. of the meritorious services rendered by Capt. Forster with the Shekhawatee brigade.

Under the authority above conveyed, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to promote Capt. W. R. Forster to rank of major unatt., with effect fr. 8th inst., the date of receipt in this department of the despatch from the Sec. of State.

Grants in Aid Exempt from Income Tax.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, under date the 11th October, 1860.

Read an extract from the Home (Revenue) department, No. 2,188, dated the 2nd instant, with enclosures, on the subject of a remonstrance from the director of public instruction, Lower Provinces, against deductions made by the civil auditor on account of the Income-tax from some of the grants made by Government in aid of private schools.

Read the endorsement from this department, No. 10,010, dated the 4th instant, forwarding the above-mentioned papers to the Government solicitor for the advocate-gen.'s opinion.

Read a letter from the Government solicitor No. 357, dated the 9th instant, forwarding the advocate-gen.'s opinion.

Resolution.—At the instance of the director of public instruction, Lower Provinces, the Government of Bengal refers for consideration the question whether Income-tax should be levied from grants in aid which are not devoted to the payment of salaries, or from sums assigned by Government for rewards to the masters and pupils of indigenous schools.

The advocate-gen. is of opinion that the grants in aid made by the Government in respect of schools are not subject to the operation of the Income-tax.

With respect to the rewards paid by the Government to the masters and pupils of indigenous schools, he observes:—"I am of opinion that neither the civil auditor, the accountant-gen., nor the sub-treasurer has any authority to deduct Income-tax from such rewards, or to assess the recipients in respect of them. If a fund or book debt existed, the interest on which was devoted to the payment of these rewards, or of the grants-in-aid, it would be the duty of the accountant-general and sub-treasurer to assess and deduct the duties upon such interests without reference to the purposes to which the interest was to be applied, unless such interest could be and was exempted by the Government as devoted to public charitable purposes. But where the payment is made, not from the interest of any fund or book debt, but generally from the revenue of India, I do not think the sums paid for the purposes described fall under any of the heads mentioned in sections 26 and 27 in schedules 3 and 4, or in parts 9 and 10 of the Act, or that any duties can be assessed thereon or deducted therefrom in the first instance.

"The rewards thus paid to the teachers of private schools will fall within schedule 2 of the Act, and the teacher, unless exempted under part 13, will have to return the total amount of such rewards received during the preceding year as part of the profits earned by his employment. So, too, any rewards in addition to salary, paid to the teacher of a Government school would fall within rule 3 under schedule 4, and would be returnable by the recipient as part of his income under part 4.

"But in neither case could Income-tax be properly assessed or deducted in the first instance from the sums payable for such rewards before payment to the teacher himself.

"Rewards granted by Government to pupils in indigence are not, I think, subject to the provision of the Income-tax at all. The condition of such a pupil cannot be deemed a profession, trade, or employment within the meaning of the Act, and the payment is not a periodical one, but is made once for all, though the same pupil may on several occasions obtain different rewards."

The Gov.-gen. in Council directs that the above opinion be acted upon.

H.E. in Council observes that, in forwarding the above reference from the Government of Bengal, this Government, in the Home department, remarked:—"Looking to the general tenor of section 27,* it seems to the Gov.-gen. in Council that the words 'civil salaries and allowances' can hardly be held to include grants made by Government towards the general support of a private institution, whether educational, or charitable, or other. This doubt seems to derive support from the words within a parenthesis in section 26, and also from the marginal index of section 27. In this view, namely, that section 27, and the three following sections relate only to salaries paid to the servants of the State, it may be doubted whether many payments which are understood to be audited by the civil auditor can be legally assessed by the officer, e.g., political stipends which would seem rather to fall under one or other of the payments out of the public revenues, in respect of which the accountant-gen. and the sub-treasurer are assessors, under section 26 of the Act."

With reference to these remarks, the advocate-gen. observes:—"With respect to political stipends and pensions payable to persons not in Government employment, I think the accountant-gen. and sub-treasurer under section 26, and not the civil auditor under section 27, are the proper ex-officio assessors to assess and deduct the duties. Stipends and pensions of that kind, cannot, I think, be deemed civil salaries or allowance, within the meaning of section 27."

The Gov.-gen. in Council directs that in respect of the stipends and pensions above alluded to, the several accountants, auditors, sub-treasurers, and other authorities in charge of public treasuries, be instructed to act according to the opinion expressed by the advocate-gen.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of the above resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette for the information and guidance of the officers above alluded to.

Ordered, also, that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to the Home department, with reference to the extract from that department noticed above.

Published by order of the Gov.-gen. in Council,
C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

Officers Officiating for the Uncovenanted.

Financial Dep., Fort William, Oct. 5.—Notifications.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify for general information that the following rules, which were passed on April 29, 1859, as an experimental measure, for 1 year, have now been permanently fixed:—

When covenanted officers, civil or military, officiate for uncovenanted officers, and when uncovenanted officers act for covenanted officers, civil or military, the deputation allowance in such cases will be regulated according to the principle laid down in Chapter VI., Sections 25, 26, and 27 of the Covenanted Civil Absentee Rules, it being understood, however, that Section 27 shall not apply to ministerial officers acting for covenanted officers, who are entitled to acting allowance from the date they commence to officiate, and not after the expiration of 1 month, as in the case of other uncovenanted officers of superior grades.

When an officer of the uncovenanted service acts for another of the same service, or when a military officer acts for another military officer, his allowances shall be regulated by the rules of the service to which he belongs.

The Reduction of the Madras Army.

(From the Fort St. George Gazette.)

Oct. 26.—No. 108.—The C. in C. directs it to be notified that, with the sanction of the Home Authorities, Govt. has decided on the reduction of the army of this presidency to the extent of three regts. of native cavalry, and that the corps to be disbanded under this decision are the 5th, 6th, and 7th regts. light cavalry. The reduction of regts. of native inf. to the establishment of 600 privates—each formed into eight companies—has also been authorized.

2. H.E. has been instructed to issue the requisite orders for carrying out this measure, and directs the attention of officers comg. divisions and forces to the following detailed instructions on the subject.

I. CAVALRY.

1. Medical invaliding committees will be immediately convened for the examination of native ranks, combatants, and non-combatants of all regiments of light cavalry, who are considered by the regimental authorities unfit for any further service. The proceedings of these committees are to be forwarded to army head quarters in due course; and in the meantime a nominal roll, showing rank, name, regimental number, date of enlistment and age when enlisted, of such of the men as the committees pronounce to be unfit, is to be at once forwarded to the adjt. gen. of the army, in order to their being transferred to the pension list. Men of 39 and 14 years' full service, declared unfit by medical committees, will be pensioned, the former on the superior pension, the latter at the ordinary rate.

2. A donation of one month's pay for each full year's service will be offered to all men who are willing to take their discharge, without reference to rank or length of service, broken periods not being reckoned.

3. All men of, and under five years' service, whether non-commissioned or privates, are to be at once discharged by the local authorities, with a donation of one month's pay for each full year's service.

4. The provisions of the preceding para. will also be carried out in regard to all ranks (combatants) above five, and under fifteen years' service, who are not considered eligible men for the army, either on account of weakly constitutions or bad character.

5. The donation to be paid under the preceding paragraphs is the pay * of the rank held by the man to be discharged. All such discharged men will also be entitled to the "discharge gratuity" allowed under that head, at pages 371-72 of the Pay Code, and they are to be settled with at once, and furnished with discharge certificates, without further reference to army head quarters.

6. Chowdries and peons of the Bazar establishment, of the 5th, 6th, and 7th regiments light cavalry, are to be discharged with donations as follows:—

For one year's service and under, one month's pay of grade.

For two years' service, and less than three, two months' pay of grade.

For three years' service and over, three months' pay of grade.

7. Puckallies, 2nd Tindals, regimental lascars, artificers, and toties, who have not served the prescribed period, or are ineligible for pension, are to be forthwith discharged, with donations as in preceding paragraph 6.

8. The horses of the 6th light cavalry are to be handed over to the depot at Oosoor, under arrangements to be made by the officer commanding Mysore division.

9. The horses of the 5th and 7th regiments light cavalry will be disposed of agreeably to instructions that will be issued by the adjt. gen. of the army.

10. Chowdries, horsekeepers, and grass cutters to be discharged when their services are no longer required, with donations as in paragraph 6.

11. When the above instructions, as far as practicable, shall have been carried out, a memorandum is to be immediately forwarded to the adjt. gen. of the army, showing the strength of the cavalry regiments. Orders will then be issued for the disposal of the European commissioned and warrant officers of the 5th, 6th, and 7th regiments light cavalry; and the native commissioned, non-commissioned, and remaining native ranks, including recruit and pension boys of these three corps, will be ratably distributed among the remaining four regiments of cavalry.

II. INFANTRY.

1. The establishment of the native ranks of regts. of native infantry will hereafter be as follows:—
8 subardars, 8 jemadars, 41 havildars, 40 naigies, 16 drummers, 600 privates, 24 recruit boys, 32 pension boys, 8 puckallies, 1 armourer mistry, 1 asst. armourer, 1 chucker, 1 bellows boy, 1 chowdry, 2 peons, 1 second tindal, 10 lascars, 2 toties, 1 moon-shee.

2. In order, in the first instance, to reduce regts. to the above revised establishment, a donation of one month's pay for each full year's service will be offered to such as are willing to take their discharge, without reference to rank or length of service. The donation is to be calculated at the pay* of the grade which the applicant holds. Such discharged men will also be entitled to the "discharge gratuity" allowed under that head, at pages 371-72 of the Pay Code.

3. The donation to be paid under the preceding para. is to be disbursed at once, and the men are to be furnished with discharge certificates, without further reference to army head quarters.

4. Should the above measure not effect the reduction to the required extent, medical invaliding committees will be convened for the examination of all remaining supernumeraries, combatants, and non-combatants, who are considered by the regimental authorities to be unfit for any further service. The proceedings of these committees are to be forwarded to army head quarters in due course; and in the meantime a nominal roll of such of the men as the committee pronounce to be unfit is to be at once forwarded to the adjutant general of the army, in order to their being either pensioned or discharged, as the case may be. Men of thirty-nine and fourteen years' full service, declared unfit, will be pensioned, the former on the superior pension, the latter at the ordinary rate. The nominal rolls are to give each man's rank, name, regimental number, date of enlistment, and age when enlisted.

5. In the case of the supernumerary native commissioned officers who may be pronounced to be unfit for further service, the usual applications, as prescribed by the general regulations, for their transfer to the pension list, are to be forwarded to army head quarters.

6. Recruit and pension boys in excess of the revised establishment will be borne as supernumeraries, until vacancies occur for their reception on the fixed establishment, one being absorbed for every two vacancies.

7. The provisions of this order are applicable to corps on foreign service, but will not affect corps serving in Burma until their return to the coast. Men serving in the Straits, discharged or pensioned under this order, will be brought back to the coast if they wish it, at the expense of Government, and will be entitled to pay until finally discharged, and to rations and batta until their disembarkation in India.

* In the case of privates, seven, eight, or nine rupees as the applicant may be in receipt of. Order of Government, No. 3,452, 25th Sept., 1860.

A TIGER HUNT.—A shikar in which the young Rajah of Rutlam and his sirdars played a conspicuous part is thus described by the Indore correspondent of the Bombay Times:—"The Rajah, he informed me, with his nobles were mounted on elephants, and were accompanied by a large number of attendants and bearers. A tiger was discovered in some dense jungle about two koss from Rutlam, and a large elephant was sent in with only the driver on his back to clear a passage, and stir the brute up; but no sooner did the elephant get sight of his dreaded foe than he turned tail, and beat a rapid retreat, smashing through everything that obstructed his progress, the unfortunate mahout being nearly flayed alive by coming in contact with branches of trees, &c. The Rajah then called for a volunteer to go in and stir him up with a lighted brand. One brave young fellow dashed into the jungle to beard the monster in his lair, but paid dearly for his temerity. The brute on seeing him sprang at his victim, and tore away his skull with the brains attached, as clean as if it had been taken off by a knife, and then retreated, taking the skull with him. The body of the poor wretch was then dragged out, still quivering with life. Nothing daunted, another young fellow rushed in, followed by the Rajah on his elephant. The tiger again sprang at his victim, and tore him limb from limb; but the Rajah, in the mean time, succeeded in lodging a ball in the brute's forehead, on which it sprang with a terrific roar on the Rajah's elephant, and wounded it severely. The tiger then dashed at the attendants on foot, and succeeded in killing one man and dangerously wounding two more before he was despatched by a volley from the Rajah's sirdars. The following day his Highness entered Rutlam in great state, and a large concourse of people assembled to do him honour. His Highness, mounted on horseback, was preceded by his band, playing, "See the conquering hero comes." Behind came his bold sirdars and attendants, on eleven elephants, one of which also bore the carcass of the tiger, which my friend informed me was as large as a full-grown buffalo. This being his Highness's maiden essay in tiger-hunting, the three widows of the late Rajah and his own two wives decked him with garlands and other tokens of their admiration for the courage he had displayed."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, November 27, 1860.

BREAKING UP.

SOME surprise, we understand, has been expressed that no notice whatever has been taken in this journal of the memorial recently remitted to the Secretary of State for India from the Indian Medical Service. We imagined that the reason for our silence must have been patent to all our readers. Of what avail would it have been to devote our limited space to the last words of a moribund? The days of the old service, we knew, were numbered, and that nothing that we could urge on its behalf would prolong its separate existence for a single hour. And, indeed, how is it possible that, after the amalgamation there could exist two separate Medical Services? When there is but one army there can be but one medical department, for otherwise there would be nothing but confusion, petty jealousies, and miserable heartburnings. That our prevision was not at fault appears from a statement that has just reached our ears touching the system henceforth to be pursued in filling up vacancies in the medical establishment. There will be, we are told, no more direct appointments from the India-office. Candidates for employment as military surgeons must take their chance of being appointed to a regiment stationed in Canada or the Mediterranean, in the East or the West Indies. They also may take for their motto, "Ubique;" for wherever British troops are serving there may they likewise expect to serve. There will be, we repeat, no exclusive Indian department, though exchanges will, no doubt, be permitted, so that those who prefer service in the East will still be enabled to gratify their unaccountable preference. Nor is this the only symptom of the entire breaking up of the old ship. Addiscombe, also, is doomed. Its glory hath departed, and it will soon only be known as a sort of chapel-of-ease to Woolwich. If we rightly understand our informant, it will be used as a kind of preparatory school, in which gentlemen cadets for the Artillery and Engineers will qualify for admission into Woolwich, to which they will be transferred after a certain period of residence, to educate them in the practical parts of their profession. Many a laudator temporis acti will doubtless lament over these radical innovations, but, sentiment apart, they were inevitable when once the decree had gone forth for amalgamation. We, too, regret the past, but it is more to the purpose to look to the future working of the new system. It is too late to recede, even if the Government were desirous to do so, of which there is neither any appearance nor likelihood. They have entered upon a path which they must follow to the end, lead where it may, and it is clearly the duty of all good citizens to refrain from placing any unnecessary obstacles in their way, and from augmenting in any way the difficulties of the very arduous and dangerous course they have so rashly chosen to pursue.

COTTON.

THAT the people of India must be taught to cultivate cotton is one of the fixed ideas of the British mind. At intervals of about five years the North finds cotton becoming dear, and mills in danger of half-time, and rushes to the conclusion that the Government of India is to blame. The press is inundated with letters, Parliament wearied to death with statistics, the India-house besieged with remonstrances because India does not grow cotton. The old Court of Directors was driven six or eight times over by sheer badgering into experiments which those who ordered them, those who tried to make them, and those who apologised for their failure, all alike knew must be nugatory and expensive. Parliament must be quieted, and accordingly thousands were spent periodically on model plantations, in which the annual cost of superintendence was usually greater than the value of the crop. All this while the cotton spinners were told over and over again by every Indian with the smallest knowledge of the subject that they and their representatives were talking nonsense, that India grew as much cotton as the United States, that cotton was largely exported, though not to Great Britain, and that the whole question was simply one of price. Manchester, unconvinced, at last sent out a representative of her own. Mr. Mackay, familiar with every species of American cotton, reported that Indian cotton was excellent, that the careless picking complained of was a matter of price, and that the one thing necessary to make India the cotton plantation of the world was means of communication. It was all of no use. Englishmen had made up their minds that the natives must be taught to grow cotton, and arguments and facts were equally thrown away. So complete is the delusion, that a company of canny Yorkshiremen are actually about to throw away £100,000 in the effort to teach India to grow cotton, an experiment exactly as reasonable as it would be to teach the people of Newcastle to export coals.

The facts of the case are simple. The Western and Central Provinces of India produce enough cotton to clothe two hundred millions of natives, and export some 300,000,000 pounds to different parts of Asia, China being the largest customer. This cotton is equal to average Sea Island cotton, and can be produced at the average cost of that article. The enormous expense of conveyance to the coast adds, however, some 33 per cent. to the price. The cotton of Berar, for instance, is dragged by oxen in little overweighted carts, over a country without roads, to Mirzapore, where it passes into the hands of an entirely new set of dealers. It is then sent in wretched boats down some eight hundred miles of water way; and finally, after yielding another profit to a third set of traders, is shipped for Europe. By the time it has reached the port the price is beyond the American average; and as at that figure it would be unsaleable, the nominal price is reduced, en route, by fraudulent packing,—leaves, stalks and rubbish all being mixed up with the fibre. The little which reaches England is, therefore, pronounced bad, and the natives are to be instructed to grow cotton.

To remedy this state of affairs Manchester proposes to form a company and send agents to Dharwar as the best cotton district. These agents are apparently to superintend cultivation, instruct the ryot in the use of machinery, and see to the cleanly packing of the cotton. The agricultural part of the scheme is sheer nonsense. The peasantry of Dharwar are not labourers, but cottiers, as independent as Kent yeomen, and about as likely to listen to advice from Englishmen as Sussex hop-growers from cockneys. New machinery may be introduced, but as the native churka is almost costless, and does its work, when the ryot chooses, to perfection, the value of new machinery will probably not be great. As to the clean packing, cotton will be packed clean the moment the price makes cleanliness worth the dealers' while, and not before. An Indian ryot, devoid of principle as he is, is not the swindling fool Manchester apparently believes. No man has a keener eye to his own interest. He asks nobody to teach him to thrash rice properly, or ship it in sufficient quantities. Rice in a certain condition pays, and the cultivator therefore brings it to that condition, just as the artisan works his silk up to the precise quality demanded by the market. All he asks is, that his labour should be remunerative, and this, except in bad English years, is not the case with cotton cultivation for the English market.

The ryot wants simply an extra penny a pound. Of course, under present circumstances, while the American crop is nearly sufficient, he cannot get it, and Indian cotton only helps to supplement a bad year. But he could get it if the penny were struck off the cost of carriage, as it might readily be. If the Berar cotton, for example, could be carried to Coringa or Bombay, by rail or canal, it could be sold in Liverpool year by year at the price of the American staple. The supply is almost boundless; for the English manufacturers, once relieved of the cost of carriage, can outbid the native on the spot, and two years of steady demand would double the amount produced. At present the ryot can sell provided the American crop falls short—a catastrophe of infrequent occurrence, and about which he knows nothing. He is compelled, therefore, to set aside part of his "black land" for other and more certain crops to meet the possible deficiency of demand for the cotton that land alone can grow. Let his market be once secure, and the grain-sowing will be transferred at once to dryer and "redder" soils, and Manchester will receive supplies which in five years will render her wholly independent of slavery intrigues.

The one necessity of the Indian cotton trade is to remove the tax which the want of means of communication inflicts on the exporter.

We cannot dismiss this subject without a word on the consequences which the recent change in the Indian tariff seems about to produce. For some time past the demand for English cotton goods has been rapidly on the increase. It is still in its earliest infancy, for if the consumption of India were only equal head for head to that of Ceylon, India would be a custom to the extent of more than double its entire trade, say 160 millions sterling. The trade, however, was advancing, when the sudden increase in the tariff checked its development. The Indian colonists, always awake to profit, seized their opportunity. Seven new companies started at once, and in a few months will be at their full working power. With labour one-eighth of the English price, no sea freight to pay, a limitless market at their doors, and a heavy protective duty, these companies must pay even the interest which Indian speculators regard as their right. So far as these profits arise naturally from their skill, or enterprise, or geographical position, this result may be viewed with indifference or pleasure. But every penny beyond that sum is so much taken out of the pocket of every man who wears a waistcloth to enrich Englishmen in India at the expense of Englishmen in England.

THE GOVERNING CLASSES OF INDIA.

No. IV.—THE HON. J. P. GRANT.

THE Lieutenant-governor of Bengal is always in an exceptional position. Theoretically he wields precisely the same amount of authority as the Governors of Madras and Bombay, with the exception of the right to communicate direct with England. Practically he is the mere agent of the supreme executive. Living in the same capital, controlled by secretaries who know Bengal as well as himself, watched incessantly by tale-bearers, and exposed on all personal questions to the remorseless criticism of a colonial society, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal can never be at once independent and useful. If he goes his own way, he must pass life—as Sir F. Halliday did at first—in a never-ending conflict with the secretaries of the central Government. If he consents to be a mere agent, he is compelled—as Mr. Halliday was at last—to carry out a policy without heartiness, because it is not his own, and without success, because it has no heartiness. Mr. Grant has endeavoured vainly to find for himself a third position. He brought to his office many of the qualities most important to success. He had an immense official reputation, without the unpopularity which so frequently attends that species of celebrity. He enjoyed the full confidence of the Governor-general and of the few highly placed officials who really govern the Indian Empire. He possessed a wide experience not only in the secretariats, but in the provincial governments which alone make efficient Indian administrators. Nor were these advantages, more especially the first two, merely accidental. There can be no doubt, despite the momentary depreciation of his powers by a justly irritated community, that Mr. Grant is a singularly able man. He is, perhaps, the most logical thinker in the Empire. His minute on the annexation of Oude indicated views broader even than those of Lord Dalhousie. In a dozen different posts he has invariably earned a title to the rapid promotion he has invariably received. He has a large circle of devoted admirers, and even his enemies admit that his policy is firm and consistent. Yet in the very first crisis of his administration, the first real test of capacity, he has failed egregiously. We are not about to enter into the merits of the Indigo controversy; we will suppose Mr. Grant's views absolutely sound, and still as an administrator he has failed. He has had, except on one point, almost a carte blanche, and the result of his action has been to destroy a trade of enormous importance, to drive the English settlers into a position of angry hostility to their rulers, and to eradicate from the minds of the native peasantry all respect for the Government they are compelled to obey. The object to be attained was to conciliate the two classes and save the trade. If that were beyond his strength even a second-rate administrator might have saved the trade and conciliated one class. Mr. Grant has alienated both, and lost the commerce besides. Whatever policy was correct, his was not—for it attained nothing. The trade was not preserved, the Europeans not secured, the natives not protected.

The reason of the break down is not, we fear, far to seek. Mr. Grant is a civilian of civilians. He holds—not as mere opinions, but as settled immutable convictions—the leading ideas of the civil service. These ideas are, first, that India is to be governed for the benefit of the natives alone; and secondly, that in a quarrel of classes the duty of a Government is to support the poorest and most numerous of the two. The first theory looks, of course, exceedingly just and philanthropic; but, unfortunately, as interpreted in action it is in eternal conflict with permanent facts. To govern India for the benefit of its people is possible. To govern it in accordance with their wishes is simply hopeless, and this is the effort of the civil service. The natives detest religious innovation, and consequently all specially Christian legislation is frowned down. But England insists occasionally on Christian legislation, and the action of the service is, therefore, so vacillating as to raise in the native mind the suspicion of ingenious treachery. The natives detest the presence of European capitalists. The service therefore discourages the sale of land, settlement in the interior, and all laws in the interest of the capitalists. But trade is so vitally important to England that Government is compelled periodically to encourage settlers and capital, and the people declare themselves betrayed. In the immediate question of the day Mr. Grant has acted all along as a civilian naturally would. India was to be governed for natives only. Consequently if a contract with a European pressed hardly on a native, it was to be broken with impunity. If natives rose against their employers, they had a right to rise. If Europeans used physical force against natives, they must be put down. Neither Lord Canning nor Mr. Wilson could see a jacquerie precisely in that light, and consequently the natives, after having been told in an official proclamation that they need not cultivate indigo, were imprisoned in hundreds for believing their governor's assurance. No wonder both classes were exasperated, the Europeans by the advice, the natives by the penalties which fell on those who took it. Mr. Grant, so far from being imbecile, was perfectly consistent and straightforward. He held with his class that if English and native interests were in conflict, English interests must give way. English interests being those of civilisation, he was beaten, and his administration stamped with the discredit at once of vacillation and of failure.

The second theory is one carried out by every civilian in the empire, in the highest as in the smallest affairs. It is the constant effort of the service, for example, to place the peasantry in possession of the land. A law against landlords always passes. A proprietor of land is always a doubtful character. A money dealer, or grain jobber, is always a criminal. In the North-West, the moment the price of grain rises the county officials prohibit its export. If a mob sacks a grain dealer's house, or nails his ears to his door, the victim gets just as much justice as law, interpreted in favour of the mob, will give him, and no more. The truth is, the civilian has no fear of the mob treading on his heels. The wealthy native or pushing planter is too near to, and too independent, to be pleasant; and the Indian, like the Austrian official, appeals to the "true people," i.e., the uneducated against the middle class. This is precisely the action of Mr. Grant upon the indigo question. He has not been either silly, or cruel, or even wilfully unjust. He has simply carried out the theory held by all "benevolent despots," in opposition to the theory held by civilised men.

For the rest, Mr. Grant is a very fair specimen of the Indian official. No man would maintain more remorselessly the ascendancy of England, though not of Englishmen. No man has a more thorough contempt for clap-trap of all kinds, or distributes patronage with more thorough honesty. Diligent, active, and keen, he makes his supervision felt in every branch of the administration. That he fails egregiously as a governor is due only to the fact that the policy of his service is opposed to the civilisation he is unable to arrest.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The half yearly report states that the construction of the railway was progressing most favourably. The agent of the company having availed himself of the invitation of the Lieut.-gov. of Bengal, to accompany him on an excursion which he made for the purpose of inspecting a district intimately connected with the line of the Eastern Bengal, fully confirmed the very favourable prospects as to traffic contained in the original report of Mr. Purdon, made in November, 1856. The rolling stock originally estimated for was in course of construction. The expenditure had been in accordance with the original estimate. There would, however, be an excess in consequence of the import duties in India having been raised considerably since the date at which those estimates were prepared. The amount of such import duties was now estimated at £40,000. The great progress which, according to the engineer's report, would be made towards the completion of the line during the present dry season in India would necessitate a large and increasing outlay; and therefore the remainder of the capital not yet paid would be required in two calls of £5 each, one in January, and the other in March. The capital account to the 30th of June last showed that £148,406 had been received and £358,974 expended, leaving a balance of £120,432.

NAVIGATION OF THE GOGRA.—We are glad to notice the opening of the navigation of the Gogra. A Government steamer and flat was to leave Calcutta for Fyzabad on the 25th October. By this route the whole trade of Oude must yet pass. If communication were opened to Bareilly, the traffic of Upper India would reach Calcutta direct. Lord Canning, on his visit to Fyzabad, will decide on the steps to be taken for this purpose.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "CURIOSITIES OF WAR."

Preparing for early Publication in Monthly Parts, price One Shilling, with fac-simile Illustrations printed in Colours,

MEDALS OF THE BRITISH ARMY,

AND

HOW THEY WERE WON.

BY THOMAS CARTER,

Author of "Curiosities of War, and Military Studies."

"What is a ribbon worth to a soldier?
Everything! Glory is priceless!"
SIR E. B. LYTTON, Bart.

No general history of these Distinctions having been yet attempted, it is considered that a Work which shall afford a clear insight into the circumstances under which such Honour-were gained is likely to be received with favour by the public, when accompanied by fac-similes printed in colours of the Medals and Ribbons, and interspersed with notices of Regimental and Individual Acts of Heroism, and Military Statistics of an interesting character.

In order to render this National Work generally accessible it will be published in three Sections, of about five Parts each, commencing with the Crimean Campaign; dedicated by permission to Major General the Hon. Sir James Yorke Scarlett, K.C.B., Adjutant General of Her Majesty's Forces; to be followed, should the effort meet with encouragement, by the remaining two portions, the one comprising the Services enumerated in the General Order of the 1st June, 1847, from the Campaign in Egypt in 1801, to the Battle of Waterloo; the concluding Section being devoted to the Campaigns in India, China, &c., from 1799 to the suppression of the Indian Mutiny. Dedicated by permission to General Lord Clyde, G.C.B., &c., &c.

When completed the series will form a handsome volume, elegantly illustrated, which will contain a record of unsurpassed Military Prowess; and it is anticipated that such an attempt to perpetuate the memory of the brave, by bringing together the gallant deeds of officers and men, will meet with patronage from a public so deeply indebted to, and interested in, the proud achievements of the British Army.

The objects of this Company are to purchase cotton direct from the grower in India, Australia, and other countries, and to afford encouragement to the general cultivation of cotton. The first operations of the Company will be directed to the district of Dharwar, in India. The Government is now constructing a road to connect the cotton districts of Dharwar with the new port of Scadshavahur, at which port a cotton pier will be erected, which the Company will have the advantage of using. The Directors are in possession of the fullest information derived from merchants, as well as from Government officers on the spot, proving that there is a wide and exceedingly profitable field open for the action of this Company. Abundance of good and cheap cotton may be obtained, capital chiefly being wanted for its purchase, and to extend production.

The formation of this Company has grown out of the active exertions of the Cotton Supply Association, and the provisional directors confidently appeal to the spinners and manufacturers for co-operation in carrying out the important object they have in view; and before subscriptions can be received from the general public it is intended that the first half of the proposed capital shall be subscribed by the cotton trade.

Clean cotton can be purchased in many parts of India at prices ranging from 1d. to 2½d. per lb., and with economical management the Company has the prospect, in a reasonable time, of declaring the most satisfactory dividends.

Further information, prospectuses, &c., may be obtained on application to

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED.

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG'S "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAG-

NESIA has been, during twenty-five years, sanctioned by the medical profession and universally accepted by the public as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion. As a mild aperient it is admirably adapted for ladies and children, and it is invaluable in warm climates. Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable chemists throughout the Empire.

MUMFORD'S CONCENTRATED

CARDIAL ESSENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER.

The Cardial Essence, which is now taken in preference to all other preparations of Ginger, not only from its agreeable flavour, but from the value and certainty of its effects, will be found most useful in all cases of indigestion, spasms, heartburn, diarrhoea, irritability of the bowels, and in most nervous affections. To invalids suffering with impaired digestion from long residence in warm climates, and to those who are proceeding to India, this preparation cannot be too strongly recommended.

Prepared only by GEORGE MUMFORD, Chemist, 5, Bathurst-street, Hyde-park-gardens, and sold by all Chemists, in bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each; also in large stoppered bottles, for foreign use, at 21s.

COMMONS' CELEBRATED ARECA-

NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."

"Surgeon Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMONS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.

NO ICE REQUIRED to produce common

Ice, Dessert Ices, to Ice Wines, &c., in SIMPSON'S NEW PATENT FREEZING VASE.—This Apparatus is, without exception, the most efficacious, simple, and portable ever produced. By using the Patentee's Freezing Powder, Dessert Ices and Common Ice can be frozen by the most inexperienced, in a few minutes, on the table, or in an invalid's apartment. Residents and travellers in hot climates will find it invaluable, as it produces that luxury—Ice!—at command, and only occupies the space of an ordinary hat-case.

Prices: one pint, Four Guineas; three pints, Five Guineas. Freezing Powder, 24s. per cwt. Freezing Pots, Ice Moulds &c., &c.

SODA-WATER, &c.—Use the "Seltzogene" (solely of one piece of glass), the only portable apparatus that has the patronage of the medical profession, who recommend it for making pure Soda-water and Aerated Beverages. Metallic impregnation is avoided, there is no leakage, and it is not affected by hot climates.

Prices: two pints, 23s.; three pints, 30s.; five pints, 42s. Powders (forty charges in box), 8s., 10s., and 16s. each. References and descriptive catalogues sent free.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

SUDDEN CHANGES.—Changes of temperature constantly occurring during the winter are prone to produce rheumatism, neuralgia, and other painful disorders of the nerves and muscles. For upwards of twenty years Holloway's remedies have been particularly celebrated for curing this class of complaints; the parts, previously fomented in warm water, have only to be well rubbed twice a-day with this soothing Ointment to be relieved from all pain; by still persevering, the swelling is reduced, and freedom of motion perfectly restored, when the afflicted parts cease to trouble. Holloway's remedies relieve, likewise, gout, spinal affections, weakness of the limbs, and all acrofulous swellings; they expel the local ailment, regulate the disturbed digestion, cleanse every organ, and purify the blood.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTI-

RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLI-

CATION.—Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Dolorens, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectives, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

HORSE GUARDS, October 12, 1860.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

J. YORKE SCARLETT, Adj.-Gen.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

POSTAGE.

Via Southampton (pre-payment compulsory), letters under

1 oz. 6d.	2 oz. 2s. 0d.	4 oz. 4s. 0d.
1 oz. 1s. 0d.	3 oz. 3s. 0d.	5 oz. 5s. 0d.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news received from India by the Bombay mail of the 10th November is less satisfactory than usual. Considerable allowance must, no doubt, be made for the exaggeration habitual with journalists; but even then there will still remain sufficient grounds for disquietude. Though not disposed to believe that the natives have any intention of offering an active resistance to the collection of the Income-tax, we can readily imagine that they will neglect no opportunity of passively obstructing the proper working of the new machinery. Unpleasant rumours will be rife in every bazaar. Highly-coloured reports of injustice and corruption will be eagerly circulated throughout the length and breadth of the land, and every minute error of judgment will be magnified into a gross act of oppression. We shall expect to hear of inquisitorial prying into private affairs, of the violation of the harem, of bribery on the part of native assessors, and of violence on that of European collectors. We shall be told that the people are starving, that they are selling their children for a few annas, that the grain refuses to sprout, that the cattle are perishing on the parched and thirsty fields, and that, nevertheless, in spite of all this misery and ruin, the wretched natives are compelled to pay their last handful of pice towards a tax to which they are not legally liable. The rich and influential, it will be said, are able to purchase exemption, so that on the poorer classes alone will fall the burden of a cruel and oppressive impost. These rumours and assertions, however, must be taken for what they are really worth, and that is for very little. The people will grumble and protest, and endeavour to evade the tax, just as many Englishmen do at home, but they will not have recourse to arms, so long as a strong European force is maintained in India, and the native army kept within narrow bounds. That the Government is anxious to remove all cause for reasonable annoyance is evident from the following paragraph, published as a postscript to the overland Bombay Gazette:—

"The Government of India has authorised the adoption of one simple aggregate form of Income-tax return for use, irrespective of the amount of income to be returned. By this form the taxpayer is merely required to state his name and residence, whether he carries on business by himself, or as a member of a firm, and what is the aggregate amount of his income from all sources. The privilege of using this simple form was at first restricted to persons whose income exceeds Rs. 10,000 a-year; now, an order has come that this limitation shall be abolished, so that none may have reason to complain of the vexatious character of the forms they are required to sign."

Some uneasiness, however, is reported to prevail at the opposite sides of the empire,—in Scinde, and in Pegu and Martaban,—but even there the commotion appears to have been created through a misconception of the nature of the new tax. Clear and explicit explanations are undoubtedly necessary, and it will be well to show every possible forbearance at the outset, until the first natural misapprehensions shall have been effaced by time and familiarity.

It is satisfactory to perceive that very necessary precautions are at last being taken against an enemy far more formidable than any we need fear to encounter within our Indian territories. The increasing influence, or "fussiness," of the French in the East has caused the garrison at Aden to be reinforced, while the entrance of Bombay Harbour is being fortified by a battery of forty Armstrong guns on Oyster Rock, and a similar one on the island known as Middle Ground.

That the Indian Government does not regard the popular discontent in the same light as the journalistic world may be inferred from the fact that H.M.'s 57th and 64th Regiments are under orders for New Zealand. Why should not a Sikh corps also be despatched to the scene of action? For bush fighting they would be invaluable, and the absence of plunder might be made good to them by superior allowances. Every regiment of Punjabees employed beyond the actual limits of the empire is a "material guarantee" for the loyalty of their countrymen and the preservation of tranquillity in the Punjab.

The Waghers are reported to have dispersed themselves in small bands all over the country. They are said to have been met by a British force and severely cut up, losing the greater part of the booty they had carried off from Korinar. Another rumour has it that they have plundered the town of Madhopore, belonging to the Rana of Porbander. In any case they were being hotly pursued by a camel corps of one hundred men, under Lieut. Newton.

Sir Henry Davidson, Chief Justice of Madras, is stated to have died of dropsy, at Ootacamund, on the 3rd or 4th of November.

The trial by court martial of two privates of H.M.'s 5th Regiment European Fusiliers has drawn from the Commander-in-Chief some severe reflections on the officers of that corps, which cannot be said to have been unmerited. Sir Hugh Rose appears determined to walk in the footsteps of the late Sir C. J. Napier, dispensing equal justice to all, and maintaining the discipline and efficiency of her Majesty's forces.

THE TRIAL OF CAPTAIN URQUHART.

The more we look into the proceedings of Captain Urquhart's trial the more we are astonished at his being brought to trial at all. It would indeed be utterly incomprehensible to us were we not in possession of a clue such as editors of papers alone are privileged to have, to interpret the whole thing; but even with this assistance we are astonished that the Commander-in-Chief should have allowed his better judgment to be swayed, and Captain Urquhart brought to trial on such a ridiculously frivolous charge, especially as he is not an officer of the Indian army.

We had only cursorily glanced at the verses so strangely denominated a jeu d'esprit till they appeared in our columns, and we were doubtful before looking into them as to the propriety of publishing them even as part and parcel of the report of the trial. But now that we have read them carefully we are astonished at their inanition. To say there is anything scandalous or immoral in them is absurd; there is nothing at all in them. Coupled with the author's defence, which will be published in due course, and his declaration therein that the verses had no allusion, no point, that the events dimly referred to in them were imaginary and entirely fictitious, they stand forth as a string of unmeaning, pointless, empty words, of no sense or signification whatever. It cannot be said even that his shafts fell wide of the mark, for there was no mark to shoot at, and the shafts were such blunt, unwieldy things as to be no shafts at all. Had the charge against Captain Urquhart been for writing such intolerably bad verses we could have understood it; but Simla society or Sir R. Garrett's feelings must be uncommonly sensitive to feel aggrieved at this.

That there are some blots and blemishes upon Anglo-Indian society we fully believe, blots against which no satire can be too bitter, and they are faults of such a nature that in most cases satire is the only way they can be dealt with.

Scandal both in word and action that would be frowned upon by English society is made a matter of mere jest among us; deeds for which a man or woman would be scouted out of good circles at home are unblushingly blazoned forth before the world in India, and all that people do is to point at them and laugh; open immorality is too often countenanced, and people even of the best intentions allow themselves a latitude of speech and conduct which they would not dream of doing in England, or which, if they did, the world there would very soon let them know what it thought of such things. These truths may be distasteful, but they are truths nevertheless, as every member of our society in his heart of hearts knows full well. Nor is there the slightest prospect of any amendment as long as the general tone of society is not such as to condemn, instead of treating as a jest, such matters. The lowest state of depravity to which the tone of society can fall is that depicted by the Apostle Paul when he describes it not as one in which people do evil, but as one in which amusement is afforded by the sight of evil. And as long as vice, and debauchery, and faithlessness between husband and wife, and encouragement of gross scandal, and the loosest possible code of morality in mercantile concerns are regarded as jests, and treated in the same way as the buffooneries of a clown at Astley's, and who shall deny that this is the case in India? what is the tone of society, but one in which men not only do evil, but take pleasure in them that do it?

Such a state of things is not to be counteracted by such a jeu d'esprit as Captain Urquhart's, or by bringing him to trial for writing it.

The writer of the story called "Hills and Plains," now being published in these columns, (who, by the way, is not Captain Urquhart at all, as has been asserted), has done his best to show up the faults and shortcomings of Anglo-Indian society, and some of the causes of those shortcomings, by placing in as odious a light as possible the characters and customs that lead to nine-tenths of the mischief one hears of. Idleness among men, and a want of proper appreciation of their legitimate duties among women, do the rest.

The first step towards the remedy of a fault, either in an individual or a body corporate, is to discover it, the second to feel ashamed of it. Until that stage is reached there is no hope. People do not laugh at things they are ashamed of.—Delhi Gazette.

THE NIKKUL SEYNEE FAQUEERS.

The secret of the power of our greatest Indian administrators has been the force of personal character. It is to that spell the Asiatic is so peculiarly susceptible. It is that which has made the non-regulation system in the administration of justice, and the irregular organisation in the military art, so successful in our newly-conquered provinces. The men who founded our Eastern empire possessed it in a remarkable degree, and exercised its charm as much over the young civilians and soldiers who had to carry out their policy, as over the sepoys, who, from generation to generation, handed down traditions of their favourite commanders. It was not intellect but instinct—not superior knowledge but the marked individualism of their character—which enabled such men as Wellesley and Metcalfe, Elphinstone and Malcolm, Lord Lake and the best of the Company's generals, to select the very subordinates who would do their will, or to attach to their persons every native and every regiment with whom they came into contact. And it was the same quality which contributed to the formation of our Indian empire, that extended it beyond the Sutlej, and saved it from extinction in 1857. Dalhousie was no unworthy successor of Wellesley; the men whom he selected to carry out his policy were not one whit behind Malcolm or Metcalfe. The school which owns Sir Henry Lawrence and Sir James Outram as its brightest ornaments; which numbers Sir John Lawrence and Sir Robert Montgomery in its ranks; which produced Jacob, Chamberlain, Lumsden, Abbott, and Edwards, may well be proud of the work they have accomplished. Sind, the Punjab, and Oude are emphatically their own; they civilised the Mhairs and the Bheels, and taught the Rajpoots to abandon the curse of infanticide. In the changes which are silently revolutionising the whole administration, it will be a sad thing for the stability and popularity of our rule if the rigour of an iron legality and the exclusiveness of a hard uniformity leave no place for such men.

The hope of this school was John Nicholson; well described by one Governor-general as "a tower of strength;" by another, who had watched the early promise of his career, as equally fitted to be the commissioner of a division or the general of an army. In him the force of personal character was such that in a few years he changed the tribes of Huzara and Rawulpindee, the most degraded and bloodthirsty in the Punjab, into peaceful villagers and attached subjects. The fact has not yet been forgotten, first made public in Mr. Raikes's "Notes on the Revolt," that a brotherhood of faqueers at Hurripore abandoned all forms of Asiatic monarchism and devoted themselves to the worship of Nicholson as a god. It was only in such a way that their blinded minds, struggling with a great idea, could body forth the mingled love and reverence which they felt for the man who had inspired them with terror when he fought on the bloody field of Chillianwallah, and who had since gone in and out among them as a father, a protector, a judge. The subsequent history of the sect is not generally known, and is full of interest. Nicholson left the district in 1850 for England, and then the sect was founded. They looked to him as the Sikhs to Nanuk, as their Gooroo, and called themselves by his name, Nikkul Seynees. They wore saffron-coloured garments and round black hats as their distinguishing garb. Their worship consisted in singing a kind of dirge, every verse of which echoed the refrain—"Gooroo Nikkul Seyn." They were a quiet inoffensive people, and lived in the enjoyment of their faith until 1856. Then their Gooroo arrived in person on his way to Cashmere, and great were the rejoicings of his disciples. They hastened to offer him homage, but when they persisted he ordered some of them to be flogged. This only increased their reverence. They declared that they deserved the flogging; that they had, by their unholy lives, naturally incurred the wrath of their god. The result was that they practised increased austerities and manifested more devoted zeal. When Nicholson fell gloriously before Delhi and the news reached his devotees, the effect was remarkable. Their leader declared he could not remain in a world where there was no Nikkul Seyn, and, going to his hut, destroyed himself, cutting his throat from ear to ear. Another followed his example. A third said he would go to Nicholson's God, started off to Peshawur, waited on the missionaries, was received as an inquirer, and in course of time was baptized. He may now be seen engaged as a teacher in the mission-school. Another imitated his example, and is now under Christian instruction. The rest are about to follow.

The history of religious delusions has no such instance as this, in which many elements are so strangely blended. It teaches us the value of the force of personal character in the work of administration. Instances similar, if not so striking, might be cited in the case of Sir Henry Lawrence, who, as an artillery captain and a revenue surveyor, first learned its power; of Colonel James Abbott, affectionately known by all the children of the Huzari mountaineers as Kaka, or Uncle Abbott; and of the whole school of military civilians who attached the Sikhs to our rule after they had honourably yielded to our prowess. Greater uniformity in our administration, and more scientific accuracy in our legal system will be dearly purchased, if no room is left for the exercise of a power which more than any other is the secret of our conquest of the military nations of the Peninsula.—Friend of India.

CABUL AND OUR POLICY ON THE FRONTIER.

A new leaf in the history of European policy in the East is about to be turned. There are three circumstances which should direct the attention of Indian thinkers to our Peshawur frontier, and the character of our relations with Persia and Central Asia—the landing of a large French force in Syria, the continued success of Russia in permanently subduing Circassia and covering the whole country of the Caucasus with forts; and the critical position of Cabul, with a ruler who in a year or two must pass away, and chiefs who will make desperate efforts to seize the power which his death will leave as a prey for the strongest. Looking at the so-called neutral city of Herat as the central point of Western Asia, we have on the north Russia actively pushing her way southward, while France, by a sudden coup, may secure more in a year than Russia has accomplished in half a century. On the south we have British India, with the Suleimans as our natural frontier, beyond which we should never pass, and Cabul as our ally, whose interests are identical with ours, whom we recently subsidised, and who should ever form an effectual barrier to all invasion of our territory. Reversing the disastrous policy which caused the Afghan war, we restored Dost Mahomed, overlooked his questionable conduct in the Peshawur valley up to 1849, and, by means of our alliance, have made him the strongest ruler in Central Asia, next to the Shah. Were he to live for ever, or were his heir-apparent so strong that he could succeed to his power without a struggle, we might be content to remain indifferent to the politics of Central Asia, except on commercial grounds. But his son, Gholam

Hyder Khan, whom the Ameer nominated heir-apparent in 1848, died on the 2nd of July, 1858, and Shere Ali Khan, a son of the same mother, was appointed in his place. He is as bitterly opposed to his father's policy of friendship with the English as Gholam was in favour of it. He is a man of violent temper and cruel disposition. No nomination of an heir-apparent could have been more unfortunate to all prospect of peace in Cabul and continued alliance with ourselves than his. His great rival, Afzul Khan, the conqueror of Koondooz, will prove a formidable competitor for power. That the end of the old father is soon expected may be gathered from the fact that, when Afzul asked for reinforcements to enable him to proceed against Mymunnah, Shere Ali Khan, though ordered, declined to go, unwilling to be absent from Cabul for a moment in the present critical state of his father's health.

The rise of Dost Mahomed's power, the present influence of his name in Central Asia, and his ability to check the advance of Persia pushed on by Russia, have been entirely owing to the weight of his alliance with the British Government. After his demonstration in favour of the Sikhs, the only districts he possessed which yielded him revenue were those of Cabul, Ghuznee, Jelalabad, the Koh Duman, and a few wild valleys among the hills. From these the utmost he derived was under fifteen lakhs of rupees. He had to provide for twenty-one brothers, many of them with large families, and had fifteen sons of his own. To these Persia was ever holding out hopes. The Kuzubash faction in Cabul itself, the last remnant of Nadir Shah's conquering hordes, filled the chief offices of State; they are the focus of Persian and Russian intrigue, and look forward to the day when the supremacy of the Sheahs will be effected. The Ghilzie, too, the strongest of the Kohistan tribes, were his enemies. When in 1854, after disturbing our Peshawur frontier for years, he sent in a penitent letter asking for an alliance with the British, an Envoy from Persia was living in his Court. The Governor-general's favourable reply arrived in time, the Envoy was dismissed, and a treaty was formed at Peshawur in March, 1855. At once the Ameer's enemies were quieted. The Ghilzie, the discontented nobles of Toorkistan about Balkh, the independent chiefs of Kokan and Khiva, began to fear on their side. The States which then constituted his territory he consolidated, and his sons rapidly added to them Balkh, Koolum, Ackchah, Koondooz, and the Char Walayut, or four districts of Sirripool, Shibberghan, Mymunnah, and Audkhoto, on the west of Balkh, the last of which is known as the place of Moorcroft's death. The Ameer himself took Kelat-i-Ghilzie and Candahar. When the Persians captured Herat in October, 1856, an Envoy was again sent from the Shah to the Ameer to hold out hopes in regard to it. But in a personal conference with Sir John Lawrence on the 1st of January, 1857, Dost Mahomed entered into a second treaty, which resulted in Colonel Lumsden's mission to Candahar, of which we recently gave an account. To enable the Ameer to defend his frontier we agreed to pay him a lakh of rupees monthly, and gave him 8,000 muskets. The total amount paid to him was twenty-six lakhs. Although the Persian war was brought to a speedy close, the beneficial effects of that treaty were felt during the revolt of 1857. But for it the Ameer could not have avoided appearing at Jumrood against us. Had we made over Herat to him, instead of virtually allowing it to fall into the hands of Persia, the object of the war would have been effectually accomplished. It cannot remain independent.

Since the withdrawal of Colonel Lumsden's mission in June, 1858, little has been known of the history of Cabul. The following facts may be relied on:—Shortly after Russian agents appeared at Herat, Khiva, and Bokhara, made surveys of the Oxus, and obtained a serai for traders in Bokhara. In 1859 the whole of Koondooz was annexed to Cabul. During the campaign the Afghans captured the celebrated gun, "Jehangiri," which was originally brought from India by Nadir Shah. As the Khan of Bokhara laid claim to it, the opening of this year saw Dost Mahomed making preparations for an attack from that quarter on his troops in Toorkistan. Beyond a demonstration by the Khan on the Oxus, no hostilities have ensued. But the Ameer has, as usual, made the most of it, asserting that Russia is the real aggressor, with the view of having his subsidy renewed. His son, Afzul Khan, has compelled the ruler of Badakshan, to the east of Koondooz, to become a feudatory of Cabul, and in token thereof, to make over some of his ruby and lapis-lazuli mines. A Persian force, by the last intelligence, was collecting at Meshid, to proceed against the Turcomans of Merv, which the ruler of Herat would accompany. Afzul Khan had advanced against Mymunnah, which would bring him into contact with the Persian troops, and if a collision occurs, the results will be most important. Meanwhile the Afghan chiefs are preparing for the struggle which must take place on the Ameer's death.

When that occurs, the hill empire he has consolidated will fall to pieces, and a struggle will commence in which the Kohistan and other tribes close to our territories will play their part. If it results in the triumph of the present heir-apparent, Cabul will have a ruler who will overturn his father's policy against Persia, and we an enemy who has never allowed an opportunity of showing us ill-will to pass. Whatever happens, we must adhere to the policy of non intervention, recognising de facto rulers in Central Asia as England does on the continent of Europe. No record is so full of heroic disaster as that of our intervention beyond Peshawur. The blood that has been spilt, the treasure that has been wasted, and the prestige that has been lost since Lord Auckland landed in India are incalculable. Now that India has become in all respects identified with England, it becomes us to watch that an English Minister does not again risk our empire in any of the complications to which the Syrian question will yet give rise. Our true policy is to defend India at her own doors. Now, in the few months or years that may elapse before the Ameer's death, is the time to look to our frontier. A generous—some would say a wasteful—liberality has sanctioned the completion of the great military road from Lahore to Peshawur, at a cost of a million and a quarter sterling. Five lakhs of rupees are being sunk in the Attock tunnel under the Indus. We do not regret the expenditure now. But more than this is wanted. The whole frontier from Huzara to Sind should be reported on, not only as to forts and cantonments, but as to the troops to be employed, and the military system to be pursued. It can be made impregnable, and that done, we need have no fear of France or Russia, no interest in Cabul or Persia, except what legitimate commerce dictates. Two fairs, like those of Orenburg and Nijne Novogorod, on the border of Thibet and the banks of the Indus, would give us the monopoly which Russia is gradually obtaining in the markets of Central Asia.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BRIGADIER FORDYCE.—We did not, says the Mofussilite, in our last issue, inform our readers that a very serious accident had befallen Brigadier Fordyce, commanding Meerut, inasmuch as it was for some time doubtful whether the Brigadier would survive the effects of the injuries he had sustained. We are now happy to state, however, that the Brigadier is considered out of danger, and is advancing towards recovery. The Brigadier was proceeding to the Artillery lines, to review the various troops of Horse Artillery, when his charger stumbled, and fell with him. The charger—a very powerful one—rolled over the Brigadier upon the hard kunks road. It grieves us to think that this accident—notwithstanding that the Brigadier is out of danger—will deprive India, for a while, of his valuable services, and Meerut of his agreeable society. We are told that Brigadier Fordyce must, under any circumstances, go home during the ensuing cold weather.

THE FIRST WORKING OF THE INCOME-TAX.—The Income-tax officers have begun with the owners of household property. They are required to write the name and residence of persons who are lodgers, tenants, or inmates of the premises. Many of the headings of the blank form in the vernacular are so badly worded, that people cannot make out what has been demanded. They are nervous about the penalty that might be inflicted under the Act if returns are not made in a week. Some, taking along with them the blank forms, wander in the streets, asking friends whether they could by any process translate the Government vernacular into that of the people? Some repaired to the office of the commissioners, but were surprised to find that the clerks there were in a like fix. One wrote to an assessor that he could make neither head nor tail of some mystic lines. He was naively answered to do his best under the existing circumstances. Some are annoyed by imagining that the names of their wives and sisters are required to be returned. The confusion among the community can best be imagined; the fears and anxieties of the female portion are in some cases very amusing. Of course, Government is, at present, in ill odour. Fortunately new forms have arrived from Calcutta, and their translation has at least the singular merit of being understood. We are informed that a large quantity of blank forms is sent to the Mofussil, which will be useless. The present difficulty with the house owners is to find out the name and residence of clerks and other servants who occupy their premises during business hours. Those who have chaals or ranges of building are put to the greatest trouble. It cannot be concealed that the native mercantile community have no confidence in the assessors, either as to their competence or to their fidelity in keeping secrets. Their want of mercantile experience is much dwelt on. In the case of a party who submits his books to show that he is over-assessed, there are no officers who have the slightest experience in examining books. Either they must accept his balance-sheet (cooked or otherwise), without questioning, or subject him to unnecessary trouble and vexation. Many of the merchants do not close their books at the end of the year, but carry down the accounts. It would be better if the collector could give facilities to tradesmen to compound their tax for five years by the payment of a round sum. They are very anxious to get rid of all inquisitorial interference. But who is to judge whether the sum offered represents approximately the real income of the tax-payer? Much will depend on his honesty; but we are afraid that will be not forthcoming from all quarters. The only thing Government can do is to get a revenue to meet the present exigency of the State, without producing serious dissatisfaction. That the tax will equally press on all parties, no one is green enough to imagine: that it will have a deleterious effect on the morality of the tradesmen, is apparent.—Rast Gofar.

"HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS."—We publish the following return of the number of tigers killed in the Mundla district between Oct. 1, 1859, and Sept. 30, 1860, as it may prove interesting to some of our readers:—Pergunnah of Sohagpore:—Tigers, 3 killed; amount of reward paid, Rs. 60; number of men, women, and children killed during the year, 3. The remaining Pergunnahs of Mundla:—Tigers, 46 killed; amount of reward paid, Rs. 920; number of men, women, and children killed during the year, 123. Total:—Tigers, 49 killed; amount of rewards paid, Rs. 980; number of men, women, and children killed during the year, 126.

A SHIP BURNED.—Accounts have reached Calcutta that the British ship Cincinnati, Captain Sellars, belonging to Mr. John Hay, of Sunderland, was burnt in the South East Trades in the Atlantic. The vessel was laden with a cargo of coals from Sunderland, from which port she took her departure on the 24th day of June last. The crew, we are glad to have it in our power to state, are all safe, having landed at Bahia, in the Brazils. The vessel must have been some eight weeks out when the catastrophe occurred.

TOOLA RAM OF REWAREE.—When, after the mutiny of 1857, a search was made for the ring-leaders and chief rebels, Rao Toola Ram, the late chief of Rewaree, (a place situated near Delhi) having disguised himself, made his escape to Rajpootana, and wandered from one country to another. Proclamations were issued for his seizure, and the Maharajahs of Jeypore, Jodhpore, Beekanere, &c., were requested to apprehend Toola Ram, but all in vain. Shaikh Ahmed Bukhsh, a native of Khatumpore in the Cawn-pore district, informed the Government that Rao Toola Ram had been advised by some of the rajahs to quit India altogether, and that he was on the eve of departure for Persia. On this a few sketches of the rebel were ordered to be drawn, and sent to the officers and gentlemen in charge of the ports, with instructions to seize him if they found him passing their domains. Toola Ram, by some means or other, arrived at Bombay, and having taken a cabin in a ship, quietly went off to Bushire without its being known to anybody in Bombay. In Bushire he was recognised by Oulad Allee, a loyal native of Lucknow, who immediately informed Mr. Mathews of Toola Ram's arrival at that place. Mr. Mathews, or the gentleman in charge of Bushire port, said, in reply, that when Toola Ram left Bushire for Bussora he would have him seized on board ship. Toola Ram was not sleeping all this time; he was wide awake, and instead of going to Bussora, took a cabin in another ship which was destined for Sheeraz, and so Toola Ram was off to Sheeraz. The gentleman in charge of Bushire was astonished when he learnt that Toola Ram had embarked for Sheeraz. He lost no time in writing a letter to the officer in Sheeraz telling him about Toola Ram, and requesting him to apprehend him and send him back to Bushire. In Sheeraz Toola Ram was examined by his picture, and was going to be seized, when the Persian Chief at that place interfered and said that he could not allow him to be caught there. A report containing all the account was submitted to the king, and in reply an order was received that when a man had come under Persian protection he could not be made over to any one, on any account, and thus Toola Ram is now enjoying liberty in Persia.—Delhi Gazette.

CALCUTTA JAIL.—We (Phenix) hear that a serious misunderstanding has taken place as to jurisdiction over the Calcutta jail between Mr. Brown, the sheriff, Mr. Wauchope, the commissioner of police, and Mr. King, the jailor; and that the matter has been submitted for decision to the Lieutenant-governor. The circumstance which gave rise to the dispute was the refractory conduct of certain privates now imprisoned in the criminal side of the jail. Mr. King, apprehending that the unruly and disorderly conduct of these soldiers might lead to some serious consequences, represented the case to Mr. Wauchope, and asked permission to remove the men from their wards and place them in solitary cells. Upon this representation Mr. Wauchope at once sanctioned Mr. King's proposal. The Sheriff, it would appear, subsequently came to the knowledge of this circumstance, and his honest indignation would seem to have been much excited to learn that Mr. King had tacitly ignored his jurisdiction by applying for orders to the Commissioner of Police, whereas, in Mr. Brown's opinion, the matter ought to have been referred to him. Mr. King, however, thinks that he was right in submitting the case to Mr. Wauchope, inasmuch as the prisoners had been sent to jail by virtue of sentences passed by a police magistrate. Mr. Wauchope likewise imagines that the jurisdiction rightly belonged to him to order the removal of the refractory inmates of the wards to solitary cells. A representation has accordingly been sent up to the Lieutenant-governor by Mr. Brown, who considers himself to have been ignored by both Mr. Wauchope and Mr. King. When a decision has been arrived at by his Honour it will then be time to comment on the subject if necessary.

A EUROPEAN GENERAL COURT MARTIAL is to assemble at Agra, for the trial of Lieutenant Lee, of her Majesty's 3rd Bengal European Regiment.

THE OPENING OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY TO RAJMAHAL.—The opening of the line of the East Indian Railway Company to Rajmahal was inaugurated with great solemnity by the authorities, and was honoured by the presence of Lord Canning, the Commander-in-Chief, and other distinguished functionaries, with much splendour, and with no small amount of speech-making. It is, however, to be remarked that none of the speakers on the occasion thought it proper to mention the fact (which, by the by, would have amounted to nothing but a graceful acknowledgment), that the line of the East Indian Railway was carried to Rajmahal in opposition to their own original intentions and plans, and solely in consequence of its being urged by Mr. W. P. Andrew, in one of his earliest publications in England, under the sobriquet of an "Old Indian Post-master," that that was the best and most judicious direction of the line. It is always as well to keep such facts before the public; and it would, we repeat, have been more graceful on the part of the company to have saved us the trouble of reminding them of the obligations the company owe to the "Old Postmaster!"—Railway Record.

LANDOUR, Oct. 27.—Dr. Cotton arrived here on the 9th, and took up his quarters at Mussoorie, with the chaplain there. On the 10th he visited the Mussoorie Boys' School, under the Rev. Mr. Maddock. He addressed the boys, expressed his satisfaction with what he saw about him, and concluded by obtaining a holiday for the youngsters. On the 11th he came over to Landour, visited the hospital, and spent the rest of the day at the Landour Academy, under the Rev. Mr. Lewin. Here, also, as at the Mussoorie School, he made a long and impressive speech to the lads. He appeared highly pleased with the appearance of the boys, and expressed his entire satisfaction with everything he saw. On the 12th there was a confirmation held at the Mussoorie Church, and sixty candidates from both Landour and Mussoorie were confirmed. The church was full, so much so, that there was hardly a seat obtainable. The bishop addressed the young people twice. The discourses were very impressive indeed, and he spoke with great fluency. At Dehra he confirmed a number of natives belonging to that Christian colony. The weather charming at present. Two or three cases of small-pox in the Landour bazaar. The military authorities ought to have such turned out of cantonments without a moment's delay, and the kotwal should be punished for not giving notice.

SIMLA, Oct. 29.—Mr. Bernard has been appointed Assessor of Income-tax at this place, and has entered upon his labours, while Mr. Havelock has assumed charge of the office of the Assistant Commissioner. Last Saturday there was a gathering of the natives at the Kutcherry, such as shopkeepers, cloth merchants, bunneahs, &c., when it was explained to them that they would have to pay the Income-tax. The announcement was not apparently met with approbation, and loud were their complaints at having to pay 4 per cent. on their profits; it appeared to me that it was not so much their having to pay a certain amount of tax of which they complained, for I fancy they manage to recover that from the buyer by an enhanced price on their goods, but they like not that it should be publicly known how much profit they make annually. Thus the Income-tax is most distasteful to them. Mr. Barnes, the Commissioner, has returned from his tour through Bussahir, and now very shortly leaves for Umballa. Mr. Riddell has also returned from his trip, and will quit Simla in a few days; in fact, the station is, or will be, entirely deserted in a very few days. The few who remain, and are on the point of going down, find great difficulty in procuring coolies for their jampans and baggage, as the high price of food here has driven them away to their villages, so that much annoyance and inconvenience is felt.—Delhi Gazette.

DELHI, Nov. 1.—The sale of houses, late the property of rebels, continues; in the Dureeba I am told the houses are realising fabulous prices, why or wherefore nobody seems to know, unless it be because the Dureeba is the safest place in Delhi just now for natives to dwell in. I heard of one spot of ground—not built upon—only a few feet square, selling for some large sum, probably because the purchasers fancied some mine of wealth lay buried beneath. The unusual sight of a veritable Italian image vendor was witnessed last evening in the streets of Delhi. The vendor manages matters differently here, however; he dresses neatly, and has a coolie behind him carrying his tray of plaster of Paris, busts and "full lengths," some of which appeared at a distance really very attractive. I would advise some of these speculators, for I am told there are several, to take a trip to Ulwar and Pinjore; they would there find a ready sale for their wares, as the rajahs of those places evince a decided taste for the fine arts and all that is novel and curious. Whilst giving my advice I may as well extend it towards any European wishing to establish himself as a farrier. Delhi is fast becoming a place of importance; there are plenty of horses in it, and many more would have been alive, if report speaks truth, had an experienced "Vet" been at hand in their sickness during the hot weather, now happily past, but, with only a native "Salotrie"—who, for all we know to the contrary, may participate in the profit derivable from the skins of the noble animals when dead—it is scarcely a matter of wonder that many died. The weather is clear, the sky cloudless, the mornings becoming sharp, evenings cool, and punkah-pulling over for a season. The Hotel (Courtenay's) and Dawk Bungalow, judging from the collection of Dawk carriages in front of each, must have a change of travellers daily.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLAHABAD, Oct. 30.—The Commissioner, Mr. C. B. Thornhill, came in last Saturday and resumed charge of his duties. Mr. Cocks, who has thus been relieved, has been ordered to remain at Allahabad till further orders. I believe it is quite decided that the judgeship of the Saugar and Nerbudda territories will be abolished, the Sudder Dewanny being constituted the appellate authority for that province also. People say that Mr. Cocks is to be appointed a special commissioner, either in the Income-tax or police department. There is a strong rumour here that the proposed tour of the Lieutenant-governor towards Agra and Etawah will be abandoned. It is expected that Mr. Edmonstone will march straight to Allahabad, and proceed thence to Benares and visit the several districts of that division. The rumoured cause of this change in his intentions is the fear entertained that the impoverished districts of the Upper Doab will feel the drought that now prevails in a much greater degree if so large a camp as the Lieutenant-governor's passes through. The consumption is awful when there are 10,000 men to be fed, and it would indeed prove a calamity to the poorer classes if the little food they have in their districts were swallowed up by the great camp of the Lieutenant-governor. From a letter just received from a friend at Lucknow, I learn that the Governor-general is expected there by the end of next month. The chief commissioner will meet his lordship at Fyzabad, to which station Lord Canning will proceed by steamer from Calcutta. This entirely upsets the idea we have entertained of having his lordship here in a few days. I have every confidence in the information received from Lucknow, as it comes from one who is likely to know every particular connected with the movements of the Governor-general. We had a first-rate review of the troops composing the Allahabad brigade this morning. The 48th, 70th, 75th Royal Regiments, and the 70th Native Infantry with one troop of Horse Artillery, were drawn up on the parade ground of the Chatham Barracks at six o'clock this morning. The Brigadier with his staff was early on the field and put the troops through several manœuvres. We then had skirmishers to the front, who kept up a brisk fire, and on their retreat the Artillery, which had been divided into two portions, one on either flank of the line, thundered forth several rounds, while each battalion kept up a sharp fire. The Brigadier expressed himself quite satisfied with the way in which the troops had gone through their exercise; and he then called for three men who had to receive good conduct and long service medals. He gave them a short and appropriate address, and then pinned on the medals to their breasts. Two of the men were privates of her Majesty's 48th, one a sergeant of her Majesty's 34th, who is at present in the Convalescent Depot at this station.—Delhi Gazette.

FUTTEHGURH, Oct. 27.—A bigoted Brahmin, named Mohan Lall, jemadar of the Collectory Sowars, who was said to devote three hours in a day to the worship of his god, has been to-day baptised by the Reverend J. L. Scott, on the northern extremity of the Sudder Bazaar of this station, a place where the native catechists used to preach the Gospel. The place was immensely crowded, and the ceremony was solemnly performed by the above-named clergyman. Mohan Lall, after receiving the token of baptism, stood up and made a fine speech to the people surrounding him, pointing out to them the superstitions in which they were involved, and advising them to implore the assistance of the Almighty to lead them to a true religion.

AGRA.—The 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, as we (Delhi Gazette) are happy to hear on good authority, is to remain at Agra for another season. There is probably no other reason for this arrangement but economy, and a desire to save trouble and expense to officers and men. But a bazaar rumour has it that there is something unsatisfactory in the relations between the Indian Government and one of the neighbouring Rajpootana Courts, and in consequence the Rifles are to remain where they are. We give the above for what it is worth, without attaching too much importance to it. Twenty-four thousand people have lately gone from and through Agra, into the Gwalior territory. They are running away from the famine, or the Income-tax, or both.

JOONPORE, Oct. 29.—Income-tax operations have been carried out as vigorously here as in other districts, but the result in the shape of collections will not, I fear, be at all commensurate with the exertions of the assessors. The tehsildars of the district have been temporarily relieved of their duties, to enable them to make the assessments, under the immediate supervision of the covenanted civil officers, Messrs. Loch, Jenkinson, and Young. The European residents have furnished their returns direct to the collector, Mr. Loch. I am sorry to find that we have been altogether deprived of the services of an assistant chaplain, Mr. Hubbard, who used to divide his time between Joonpore and Azimgurh, having now been posted to Ghazeepeer. A wing of the 47th N.I. will shortly leave Joonpore for Azimgurh. Now that the rains are over, the local committee will be able to carry out their plans for the season. It is intended to repair thoroughly the road between Joonpore and Allahabad, which is at present as much out of repair as it could possibly be; for though it is nominally a metalled road, yet it has been so long neglected that the vestiges of metal which remain make it far worse for wheeled conveyances than a kutcha fair-weather road would be. The distance to Allahabad by this line of road is little more than 50 miles; but travellers are obliged to come via Benares, a détour which more than doubles the distance.—Delhi Gazette.

BREVET-CAPTAIN H. B. BLAKE, H.M.'s 3rd Regiment Bengal European Infantry, has been dismissed the service by sentence of a general court-martial, for having been found guilty of "fraudulently applying to his own use the sum of Rs. 606-4-8, being public money intrusted to him for the payment of men of his company." The Court recommended him to mercy, on the ground that he had refunded the amount, and of his conspicuous bravery in action recently; but Sir Hugh Rose deemed it "impossible" to allow an officer to return to the society of his brother officers, and to the command of a company, who had been found guilty of such disgraceful conduct. This is the second court-martial and second dismissal in the same corps for the same offence within the last month—the first being that in the case of Captain R. C. Stevenson.

CAWNPORE, Oct. 24.—I have just learnt from good authority the following movements of corps during the ensuing cold season:—H.M.'s 77th Regiment from Benares and Ghazeepeer to Jullundur or Rawulpindee; 18th Punjab Infantry, Gondah to Umballa, Kemoan Levy, Bareilly to Gondah; Loyal Poorbeah Regiment, Umballa to Bareilly. I fancy the relief will soon be published; the delay has been caused by the Legislative Council. Weather here continues warm, no signs of rain. Thermometer in the shade to-day 80 degrees. The Commander-in-Chief's camp is now forming here; from Lucknow he will visit Agra, Meerut, and Delhi.

N.W. PROVINCES, Oct. 20.—I have reliable information that the rail from Cawnpore to the station of Etawah (about eighty miles) will be completely laid down in February next, and that public trains will commence running on March 1, 1861. The distance from Agra to Cawnpore by the trunk road, via Mynpoorie, is 181 miles, but when steam is "up" at Etawah dak passengers will travel by that road only as far as Shekohabad (42 miles from Agra), from whence there is a puckah road, 36 miles long, to Etawah, at which station passengers will, of course, take the train to Allahabad, without the necessity of getting out at Cawnpore. Travellers from the Punjab, Meerut, Delhi, and other stations above Allyghur, will (in the present state of the cross-road from Etah to Shekohabad) proceed by the Grand Trunk-road past Etah, as far as Kerowlee, where they will turn off sharp to the right, down the road (about ten miles long, in tolerable condition) to Mynpoorie—the native town, not the civil station, which is two miles off—from whence a good puckah road (thirty miles), leads to Etawah. After the 28th Feb., therefore, no portion of the Grand Trunk-road upwards, from Cawnpore to Bhowgong (ninety miles) will be used by dak travellers. At Bhowgong the road divides, the branch on the left hand of the traveller proceeding to the N.W., going past Mynpoorie civil station (seven miles) and town (nine miles) Shekohabad, to Agra; the other branch to the right hand, going past Kerowlee, Etah, Allyghur, to Khoorjah, where it again divides, one route leading to Delhi, &c., the other to Meerut, &c. The portion of the left road between Bhowgong and Shekohabad, forty miles, and of the right between Bhowgong and Kerowlee, twenty-two miles, and ultimately to Etah, twenty-four miles further, will not be required either, where the rail runs to Etawah. Cawnpore, henceforward, must be abandoned for Etawah by the dak transit companies, and Government should be immediately pressed to put the road between Etawah and Kerowlee via Mynpoorie, and the road between Etawah and Shekohabad, into first-rate order, which can easily be done, as, with the exception of a few miles on the Etawah end, they are already in very tolerable condition. The road from Etah to Shekohabad, however, is at present nothing better than a mere bullock-cart track, and it will take time and money to convert it into a good puckah road available for spring carriages; and moreover, when the rail to Agra is laid, this road will be little needed, as passengers from Allyghur will join the train at Agra by fifty-three miles of excellent road via Hatras.

FREEMASONRY.—At Lucknow they have solved the great question, how to improve the social relations between the European and the Oriental. Freemasonry is the talisman; get the natives of India to become masons, and the problem is solved. His Highness Moomtaz-ood-Dowlah, one of the Mahomedan Princes of Oude, has just been made a mason, after undergoing a more than usually severe examination. After submitting heroically to the initiatory ordeal, his Highness has come through purified a mason and a brother. This is a far better idea than Union Clubs and other weak measures tried in Calcutta. Encourage masonry and encourage the natives, particularly the Mahomedans, to become members of the fraternity, and we shall hear no more of antipathies and antagonisms. We observe the Raja of Kupoorthulla is a candidate for the honour of becoming a mason also. They are evidently going ahead in the North-West, and doing more towards bringing round a friendly feeling than at a greater distance from the scene of the late rebellion.—Englishman.

CAPTAIN GRANT, of the 2nd Dragoon Guards, lately doing duty in the Public Works Department, has just been selected to go to China as assistant quartermaster-general. It would have been difficult to have selected a more popular or efficient officer.

SIMLA, Oct. 19.—Famine seems staring us in the face, and though its aspect is not at the present moment gaunt, it has every prospect of becoming so ere long, unless genial showers come to refresh the earth, and give us an abundant harvest in the spring. The Commander-in-Chief has shown much good sense in not bringing a large escort with him to the Upper Provinces, to make the scarcity of food greater. Grain of all kinds is frightfully dear, and as a natural sequence, food of every description has risen greatly in price. The hill chieftains have forbidden the exportation of the produce of these hills to the plains. On inquiry I learn that the harvest in the hills has been very nearly equal to that of the generality of years, but Simla has been usually supplied in a great measure from the plains, not depending on the hills for food, though buying what comes in for sale. This year the hill chieftains, fearing a scarcity in their own little dominions, have naturally forbidden their ryots from depriving them of food; thus Simla suffers. The Rajah of Sookate is an exception; he offered to send grain into Simla, if the person to whom he made the offer would give accommodation for it; the arrangement, however, has not been completed; reason unknown. The potato crop has been very abundant this year, and large quantities have left the Mahoseo ridges, where it is grown, for the plains. The price of this vegetable has been very low, from rupee 1 to rs. 4 a maund, according to size and quality. The people of India, unfortunately, however, do not look on this esculent as a staple of food, as the Irish do. Dr. Townsend, the surgeon of this place, has received orders to look for and report on a suitable spot for the location of a body of 250 Europeans as a depot. Whether this will lead to the Nusseerze battalion being sent away from Jutogh, and that situation being chosen for the depot, I have not heard. The idea of locating Europeans in the Simla hills is not original with the Commander-in-Chief, it has been brought forward, and advocated often, and it is to be hoped will now be carried out with vigour. More than fifty members have already been enrolled in our Volunteer Rifle Corps, and funds have been despatched to England for material for the uniform. It has been decided that the colour of the uniform shall be some shade of khakee, that hue having been pronounced as the most appropriate, being the least distinguishable at a distance. The first brew of the Simla beer has been very successful, and will be offered very shortly to the public. Those who have tasted it pronounce it far superior to that brewed at Kussowlee, and almost equal to English beer. The Simla jail is to be broken up, the criminals to be sent for incarceration to Umballah, or some other central prison, while only a small lock-up with a reduced establishment will be kept up here, for prisoners whose term of confinement is to be short, or till they can be despatched below. By this a large saving of expenditure will be effected. The annual exodus to the plains is rapidly going on, visitors packing up, and with a sigh quitting these beautiful hills and heavenly climate for the dusty plains; shops are closed, and the place begins already to wear a deserted aspect; the season of 1860 is ended.—Lahore Chronicle.

FLAX FROM THE PUNJAB.—A recent communication from Lahore mentioned that an agent of an English Flax Company had made his appearance at the capital of the Punjab, and was about to establish himself at Sealkote. We now hear that Mr. James Wightman (not Whiting, as our correspondent had it,) has reached Sealkote, which station was strongly recommended on account of the operations of Messrs. Henry Cope and Co. having been carried on there for the last two years, and the readiness of that firm to make way for the India Flax Company, to whom they have made over their small establishment. Mr. Wightman has received every assistance from the local authorities. He is provided with ample funds for a commencement, and has arranged for advances on a considerable scale in the neighbourhood of Sealkote, so that the prospect of flax cultivation in the Punjab may now be considered secure. We are told that Mr. Wightman pronounced the flax prepared from acclimated seed by Messrs. Cope and Co. as of a very superior quality, fit for any manufacture in England.—Delhi Gazette.

MAJOR-GENERAL E. PETTINGAL.—The death of this officer, which occurred in London on the 17th ultimo, was reported in our last number. Major-General Edward Pettingal belonged to the Bengal Army, and was colonel of the late 12th Regiment of N.I. His commission as ensign bore date 1st January, 1804, and he had thus been upwards of fifty-six years in the Indian Army. He served at the taking of the Cape of Good Hope in 1805, and also at the capture of the Mauritius in 1810. He was subsequently employed in the Nepal war of 1813-14, having been present at the assault of the fortress of Kullunga in October of the former year. Major-General Pettingal again saw active service in the Mahratta campaign of 1817-18, and during the first Burmese war in 1824-25. He received two medals for his services in Nepal and Burmah respectively. After serving for several years in a political capacity in Central India, he finally returned to Europe in June, 1856, before the outbreak of the Indian mutinies.

THE SIKHIM RAJAH.—A correspondent from Darjeeling informs us in a recent communication that the demands made upon the Rajah of Sikhim by the Superintendent at Darjeeling, Dr. A. Campbell, for the surrender of certain criminals and the restoration of certain kidnapped British subjects, are the following:—1st. The restoration of the kidnapped British subjects. 2nd. Compensation to those who have been plundered. 3rd. The surrender of the plunderers. 4th. Payment of the cost of occupation of that portion of the Sikhim territory lying to the north of Ramman river, which is the northern boundary of the Darjeeling territory, and is bounded on the east by the Singalela range, and north by the snowy range, and 5th. Security against future aggression from Sikhim. And, that if all these conditions shall have been complied with within three months from the date of the entry of the force into the occupied territory, the occupying force will be withdrawn. If not, the British Government shall reserve to itself the right of declaring the occupation to be permanent.—Hurkaru.

MADRAS.

THE NIZAM'S TERRITORIES.

The negotiations regarding the partial restitution of the ceded territories of the Nizam still hang fire. His Highness, not unnaturally, objects to accept the Raichore Doab and Daruss as a satisfactory consideration for relinquishing his claim to Berar, the garden of Central India. On the other hand it becomes a grave question whether the British Government is justified in delivering a numerous population, which has tasted the blessings of Queen Victoria's rule, to the iniquitous administration of the petty barons of Hyderabad, who would, many of them, have been qualified to take high rank among the ancient feudal tyrants of the Frontdeboef class in Europe. Christianity protests against the surrender of a principality which has enjoyed Christian laws to the dominion of a heathen chief. We cannot, we admit, on Christian principles, violate our explicit engagements, but in this case we are entangled by at least a tacit pledge of opposite import to that which engages us to restore these countries to the Nizam. Our Government, it would seem, is inclined to cut the knot, as the Viceroy has all but disposed of the land before he has acquired the ownership of the same.

The proposal for transferring the Berar districts to Nagpore appears geographically judicious, though we doubt whether it would be fair to augment the already excessive labour imposed on the able and indefatigable officer who is at the head of the Nagpore commission. It is well known that the affairs of his office were in such a state when he took charge, that the most unwearied application was necessary to bring the records into even semi-decent order. And we question whether Major Elliot, over-worked as he is, would hail the accession of another province to his present consulship with exuberant satisfaction. But if this difficulty can be overcome, the Berar districts naturally enough fall into the Nagpore circle, and the arrangement, as we have already argued, would be economical. The question remains, in what way the Nizam can be induced to resign his ancestral rights. The most practicable methods of bringing about such a consummation would probably be the transfer of some confiscated fief, which has just lapsed to the Crown in lieu of the territories which we are so anxious to retain. It would be better even to carve out a new Principality for some near relative of the Nizam from the forfeited fiefs on the North-West, and to bestow this in acknowledgment of good service and as a token of our good will, upon some scion of the Hyderabad Family. The debt of gratitude which we owe to the Nizam's Government for the loyalty of the State in the crisis of the rebellion is universally acknowledged, and we must find means to requite the faithful conduct of his Highness by some Imperial largesse, either of territory or coin. If, therefore, it is possible to place some member of his family on the Guddee which is now at the Viceroy's disposal, either at Furruckabad, or Jhujjur, or Bullubghur, or elsewhere, we might find in some such arrangement a substantial method of testifying a national recognition of the support afforded us in the hour of peril by the State of Hyderabad.—Madras Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HYDERABAD, Oct. 15.—Some changes in the military dispositions of the English troops in the Nizam's dominions are about to take place; the motive for which is not clearly understood. Jaulnah, once upon a time the head-quarters of the subsidiary force, is now occupied by an European regiment, a regiment of native infantry, and one of native cavalry from the Madras side. It is under contemplation to relieve this force by one of greater strength (which is all right) from Bombay, consisting of one regiment of Europeans, two of native infantry, one of cavalry, and two brigades of guns, with European artillerymen—essential point—and to canton them at Aurungabad instead of Jaulnah, which is to be occupied by a wing of a regiment of native infantry, one squadron of horse, and two guns from the Hyderabad Contingent. It is not intelligible why the British Government has decided upon removing troops from Jaulnah to Aurungabad. The country requires to be protected from marauders over-running it, and we require to be on our guard against a disaffected Mahomedan population; but why Aurungabad should be preferred to Jaulnah, the localities being distant only forty miles, is inconceivable. Jaulnah is healthy, Aurungabad the reverse; and Jaulnah having been, as I have before said, at one time the head-quarters of the subsidiary force, possesses the necessary accommodations for cantoning a force, barracks, arsenals, &c., which would save the Government from incurring additional expense for these, I presume no small object at the present time, as well as bungalows for officers. It can hardly have been deemed necessary, though there is not much against the probability by having a force at Aurungabad, to keep in subjection the Mahomedan inhabitants of a large frontier town and the Arabs forming its garrison, though at present they are quiet enough. To counterbalance this, which I consider a right move, there is the objection of bringing our native Bombay troops, who did not show themselves over faithful to the Government in the late rebellion, into close contact with persons who, by this very movement, we assume are not well affected towards us. But nothing can well counterbalance the objection of sending European troops to a station considered unhealthy.—Englishman.

MOULMEIN, Oct. 12.—When the news reached here that the Income-tax had passed into law, the Commissioner, instead of carefully translating the wording and explaining the nature of the tax, sent the gongs and police peons round the town, and the native officials in the interior, to explain the Act after their own fashion. These men, perfectly ignorant of the strange duty imposed on them, went about circulating most exaggerated ideas of the law, and telling the people that they must send into Court at a certain date, returns of their property, and that each was to be rendered separately, the houses and land in one line, their profits for the year in the next, and their ornaments in succession, under heavy penalties; that the tax was to be upon the gross value of their property, &c. As can be well imagined, this caused the greatest excitement and dread, and although the authorities were well aware of it, they seemed for a time to take no notice of it. When at last the Commissioner found out that the people were not to be so easily quieted, he issued a proclamation that the tax was not to be imposed upon the poor man, but only on the rich, and that even in the case of the rich man only to the extent of 4 per cent. on his profits. Immediately following upon this came the returns to each man, sent by the assessor, and instead of being according to the above proclamation, only corroborated the information of the police gongs and peons. The people then discovered that they had really to fill up the forms, even to the inserting of their wearing apparel, according to the Burmese interpretation of the words used in the columns, and the excitement at once became intensified. They threatened to close the bazaars and shops, and numerous parties purchased stores to last for many days. The only reply made to quiet the people by the authorities was Major Tickel calling a few of them on a Sunday morning to his house and talking a lot of nonsense to them, which had quite a contrary effect to what was intended, and the publication by the Commissioner of a letter he had addressed to Major Tickel, which could only be interpreted in the light of a threat, for in no other way could the community view it. The Burmese, Moguls, Chinese, Sooratees, and Madrasses, then began to draw out petitions to the Commissioner. He appointed the 9th inst. to receive the Burmese deputation and their document. They assembled in great numbers, but the only satisfaction he offered them was to forward their representations to Calcutta, but would on no account wait for a reply, or stay the operation of the tax, which he stated he would collect at all hazards, if he in doing so were to reduce the town and country to the fishing village and jungle it was thirty-five years ago. He then told them not to trouble him, and dismissed them, saying they were to go home and fill up their returns. He never offered to persuade them, and use cool and conciliating language to induce them to consider the matter calmly. On the contrary, his language was violent, and full of threats. The petitioners have only claimed exemption for working-classes and petty tradespeople, which I believe to be the intention of the Legislature when making the demarcation of Rs. 200, to be the lowest limit of taxation, and which is quite unsuited for this country, which from the scarcity of labour and the very high prices for provisions, makes the wages of the daily hired mechanic amenable to the tax. This is not fair. They say, "We are poor, and very poor; why tax our working classes and exempt those of your other territories?" The Commissioner would not give in an inch. They then asked him to name a sum, and that they would subscribe and pay it; but even this he declined. The next day, 10th inst., he appointed to meet the native merchants. A deputation of them went, followed by a number of natives anxious to listen and to observe if the deputation did their duty on this occasion. No objection was made by the Commissioner; the magistrate had consented on being told the object of the crowd assembling, and the business of the day began. All went on well until such time as the Commissioner, by some infatuation, repeated his threats of reducing the town and country to a jungle, when some persons in the crowd roared out in several directions, "We will not pay the tax." Captain Hopkinson now quite forgot himself; and was far more violent than I can venture to detail. While this was going on, the native merchants supplicated the mob not to touch or attack the Commissioner. The report in town to-day is that the Commissioner called in the havildar's guard of sepoys, ordered them to fix bayonets and charge the people. They were doing so, and had got so close to the crowd that one of the office-clerks fearing bloodshed, involuntarily cried out "Halt!" which the sepoys fortunately obeyed. The havildar is said to have addressed his men with "guard, mutiny! charge!" The Commissioner then got his hat and stick and drove the people down the road a considerable way from the Court-house, but failed to disperse them. I need scarcely add that nothing has since been done. All classes of the natives are determined passively to oppose the tax, and placards have been since posted all over the town, nearly to the following effect, addressed to the Commissioner: "You are not looked upon by us as the big man you would wish us to believe; you are a low fellow; you fell upon us more like a mad-dog than a man in authority. You did your best to threaten us; you certainly at the time made us afraid, but now we are resolved not to pay the tax, and we warn you to take care of yourself." Then follow some insulting remarks about our gracious Queen, and a threat to the editor of the Advertiser if he does not publish the placard. My opinion is that the Commissioner has gone so far that he cannot well undo what he has done. The private remonstrances of influential men of the place are only answered by letters which are anything but polite or conciliatory. The European community are drawing up a written and lengthy remonstrance to him to-day, and forwarding a copy of it to the Government of India. At present trade is quite at a stand-still; all are looking out for the morning of the 16th instant, the day after the expiry of the time given to send in the returns, to see what the Commissioner will do. The news from Rangoon is that numbers of the people are leaving for the Burman territories, and from our borders report says the natives are leaving villages. I greatly fear this tax will not suit the natives. P.S.—5 P.M.—I have just heard that the Commissioner has written to the proprietor of the Advertiser, begging of him not to publish the placard or to take any notice of it in his issue to-morrow.—Englishman.

STOPPAGE OF PUBLIC WORKS.—By order from that potent machinery in operation at Calcutta, yecept the Supreme Government, all work in progress towards the formation of branch railways has come to a deadlock. The Government of India have limited all Indian railways to a certain expenditure, owing to the want of funds in the treasuries. This will put a stop to the Bangalore and Bellary lines, so that these establishments will be disbanded, to be resumed no one can tell when. This stoppage is greatly to be deplored, inasmuch as it involves a very serious delay, even should the work be resumed again after the lapse of some six months. In addition to this must be taken into account the sacrifice of money, which will be considerable, as it will be more difficult to get together contractors and people than it was at first, their confidence being shaken in the good faith of the Government and all connected with them. Besides which, they must by this sudden stoppage be losers to a considerable extent. So much for not first counting the cost; so much, too, for a centralizing policy. Had Madras been in a position to direct its own affairs, matters would not have come to this pass.—Bangalore Herald.

ALLEGED MURDER IN THE NEIGHBORHOODS.—The police officers sent from Madras to assist in solving the mystery of the tragical fate of Captain Green have returned to the Presidency, and we understand that their opinion confirms that which has been gathering strength at Ootacamund for some time past, as to the innocence of the accused servants of the late officer of the crime of murder. They hold the suspicious circumstances of his death entirely reconcilable with the hypothesis of his having committed suicide in a paroxysm of the excitement to which he was notoriously liable, and from what we can gather of the case, their conclusion is perfectly justifiable. The evidence points directly to self-murder, and does not implicate any second party in the crime.

AN INDIAN MULLINS.—A day or two ago a peon attached to the Subordinate Judge's Court went to the house of Mr. Bird, accompanied by a female, who, the peon stated, had something to say relative to the murder of Captain Green. She accordingly informed the subordinate judge that the Mussulman boy now under suspicion came to her house on the night Captain Green died, and confessed the deed to her, and that shortly afterwards a gardener in Captain Green's employ came in and accused the boy of the murder, who then fell at the gardener's feet and begged of him not to disclose it. On after inquiry it turned out that the woman-informer was the paramour of the Court peon, and that the gentleman himself who conducted the lady to the judge's house did so to obtain the reward of 500 rupees offered for the discovery of Capt. Green's murderers. Mr. Bird very properly deprived the man of his belt, and sent the wretched couple adrift. Native perjury is proverbial.—Eclectic.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. WILLIAM CRAWFORD was, on Saturday, the 3rd Nov., sworn in at the residence of the Governor in Council, as Revenue Judge for the town and island of Bombay. All appeals, in future, against the assessments of the Collector of Land Revenue will be heard and determined before the Revenue Judge in his office in the Fort Police office.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—Her Majesty's 57th Regiment, now stationed at Poona, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed immediately from Bombay to New Zealand on field service. The families and depot of the regiment will remain here for the present. Her Majesty's 6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons, and the 4th (Gaye's) troop of Bombay Horse Artillery, will leave Kirkee and Poona on the undermentioned dates, the former for Ahmednuggur the latter for Kirkee:—1st Squadron Inniskilling Dragoons, on the 20th November. 2nd Squadron on the 21st. 4th Troop Horse Artillery, on the 23rd. 3rd Squadron Inniskilling Dragoons, on the 23rd. 4th Squadron, on the 25th. The whole of the headquarters of the Bombay Artillery, now stationed at Ahmednuggur, will move from thence to Kirkee, including their depot, immediately after the arrival of the Dragoons. The first division of the Mountain Train from Ahmednuggur has been ordered to proceed to Jacobabad, via Callian, Surat, and Deesa. The wing of H. M.'s 56th Regiment from Ahmednuggur, has been ordered to Poona, leaving one company there for the present. They will commence their march on the morning of Tuesday the 6th Nov. A squadron of the Southern Mahratta Horse has been ordered to Sholapore in place of the 3rd Regiment Light Cavalry ordered to Aurungabad. The 26th Regiment N. I. will be replaced at Dhoolia by the 20th Regiment N. I. from Dharwar, and the last-named place will then cease to be a military station. H. M.'s 64th Regiment from Kurrachee are also about to proceed to New Zealand.

THE GOVERNOR'S TOUR.—His Excellency Sir George Russell Clerk will leave Bombay on the 10th of November, accompanied by his personal staff, and will remain at Khandalla all to-morrow, and reach Poona early on Monday morning, when he will at once proceed by special train to Deeksal, at which place a flying camp has been pitched for his Excellency's temporary accommodation. On the morning of Tuesday next he will proceed to Phaltun, a distance of thirty miles, from whence he will travel to Punderpoor, and continue his tour throughout the Southern Mahratta Country, and return in February to spend the hot season at Mahabeshwar. Sir George Clerk will be the first Governor that has visited the Southern Mahratta Country since Sir John Malcolm did so in 1829-30.

A RACING DISPUTE.—Some unpleasant circumstances are reported to have occurred at Belgaum, in connection with the recent races at that station. Dr. Robert Millar, it appears, got into a dispute with the stewards relative to certain races being ridden which were not inserted in the prospectus. Upon these and other grounds he refused to adjust his book on settling day, and a discussion was the result. Dr. Millar was then threatened with being posted as a defaulter, but this did not intimidate him in the least. One of his characteristic letters was at once despatched to the stewards, and as the language in many places was exceedingly plain, it was handed up to the military authorities. Dr. Millar was at once placed under arrest, and ordered either to withdraw the letter, or stand the consequences. Resolute as Coriolanus, he, for a time, sternly refused to withdraw a single sentence of his letter; but like the noble Roman we have mentioned, he had eventually to succumb to softer influences, and the epistle was reluctantly withdrawn. In the meantime the stewards have resolved to post him as a defaulter, and he, in his turn, has applied for a court of inquiry. The quarrel is, therefore, a very pretty one as it stands. Were the question referred to the Byculla Committee, it might, we think, be easily settled, as we have a horror of these discussions which lead to arrests, and finally terminate in courts-martial.—Bombay Telegraph.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.—Whereas misapprehension may arise that the officers appointed to manage and assess the Income-tax are authorised to insist on the production of people's books or accounts, the attention of all persons is hereby drawn to section 56 of the Income-tax Act, by which it is declared that, on hearing an appeal against a surcharge, the collectors or commissioners "may inspect any books or papers which he (the tax-payer) shall voluntarily tender; but they shall not require the person chargeable to produce any books or proofs besides those which he may choose to tender." The instructions of Government to its officers are in strict conformity with the above, viz., that, if tax-payers shall not think fit to offer sufficient information to satisfy the collectors or commissioners that the assessment is too high, they are not to make any inquiry on the part of Government, but are simply to confirm the assessment against which the appeal has been laid. From this all will see that it is optional with them to produce their books and accounts or not, and that under no circumstances whatever will the production of books or accounts be insisted upon by the authorities.—By order, A. D. ROBERTSON, Acting Sec. to Gov.—Bombay Castle, Oct. 31, 1860.

MR. TODRINTER, Deputy Superintendent of the Indore and Central India Circle of Electric Telegraphs, is about shortly to proceed to Europe on a sick certificate. He will be succeeded by Mr. M. K. Mam, a gentleman not only highly valued for his ability, but esteemed by all who know him for his genial disposition and kind and courteous manners.

"IMPHÉE."—The introduction by Government of "Imphee," South African Jowaree, in the Scinde Province, is likely to prove a source of great benefit to the country. Twenty-two seers of grain, and twelve and a-half seer of goor were produced from half-a-seer of seed, a return which, if made known to the natives, will certainly induce them to undertake the cultivation of the "Imphee" in preference to any other kind of grain, particularly as it is extremely palatable and nutritious.

THE COMING DEWALEE FESTIVAL.—It is currently reported in the city of Poona, that the Banians, Marwarrees, and other natives, do not intend to light up their houses and shops this year, owing to the Income-tax being enforced. Instead of the soucars and traders making pooja to their wealth, as usual, it is their purpose, we hear, to perform a sort of "shradh," or funeral ceremony, on this occasion. We think it would be well for the Government officials to keep a strict watch upon what is just now going on in the city. It is evident there is mischief of some kind or other brewing, which bodes no good to any one, TROOPS FOR CHINA.—It is stated, on good authority, that instructions have been received by the Bombay Government, to despatch three regiments of infantry to China.

SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD came down from Poondhur to Poona, October 29th, to meet the Governor previous to his departure for the Southern Mahratta Country. His Excellency was to return to the Hill Sanatorium in a few days.

EURASIAN RIFLE CORPS.—We understand that the Eurasian inhabitants of Bombay are making arrangements to get up a Volunteer Rifle Corps of their own, on principles similar to those of the Bombay European Volunteer Rifle Corps. Mr. W. C. Sillar, the originator of the latter corps, has kindly proffered his assistance in the cause. No symptoms of volunteer movement are yet observable among the natives, though the enterprising class of them, the Parsees, carry on a small talk about the formation of a corps of their own.

DEPUTY CORONER OF BOMBAY.—The acting-coroner, Mr. Cleveland, has appointed Mr. Prentiss, solicitor, his deputy.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL TRAVERS, of the Royal Artillery, who is expected out by the first steamer in December, will command the Royal Artillery in this Presidency, vice Colonel Buchanan, who will, now that there are two field officers of the same arm of the service on the spot, be brought on the list of brigadiers, and it is rumoured that he will be posted to the Poona division. His commission as colonel, as also that of Colonel Heath, our present brigadier, bears date the 28th November, 1857; but Colonel Buchanan being an officer of the Royal Army will, in this instance, take the precedence.

MR. J. M. ERSKINE, sub-treasurer, is appointed Collector of the Income-tax for the town and island of Bombay.

REWARD OF VALOUR.—His Excellency the Governor-general in council has been pleased to admit Naick Rajeenah, of the 2nd company Bombay Sappers and Miners, to the 3rd class of the Order of Merit, in consideration of his conspicuous gallantry on the occasion of the capture of the Fort of Loharee, on the 2nd of May, 1858.

GARRISON OF ROSA.—The native regiments selected to garrison Rosa, near Aurungabad, are the 8th Regiment N.I., from Sattara, the 26th Regiment N.I., from Dhoolia, and the 3rd Regiment of native cavalry, from Sholapore. The station of Sattara is to be abandoned.

public order, rushing in darkness, and at the hour of the soldier's rest into the lines of his company, and with cries for rifles and ammunition, inciting the men to mutiny, instead of perturbing, only called into instant action Serg. Macminnie's presence of mind, and determined him to take, without the loss of a moment, the step he ought to take.

8. In reward for this conduct, H.E. the Viceroy has been pleased, on Sir Hugh Rose's warm recommendation, to promote Serg. Maj. Macminnie to the rank of officer. The C. in C. will not stop here; he will place him in a position as advantageous to himself as to the interests of the service.

9. H.E. will carefully remember Qr. Mr. Sergt. Owen's excellent service. He has already expressed to the 5th comp. 5th batt. Bengal Art. his approval of their conduct, in terms which entitle them to the respect and goodwill of every officer and man in this army, from the C. in C. downwards.

10. When Sir H. Rose assumed the command in India, he issued a G.O. in which he said that he would, under the influence of the most binding of obligations, do his duty to his most gracious Sovereign, promote the welfare, uphold the discipline, and maintain the credit of H.M.'s armies in India.

11. These words were meant to be a warning, especially to the 5th Regt., which last year broke out into prolonged and scandalous mutiny, going so far as to depose their own officers, and to elect others in their place. How far so large a portion of the 5th Regt. has neglected these warnings is shown by this court martial. For although numbers of the men who were foremost in last year's insubordination, took their discharges, the seeds manifestly have remained and borne bitter fruits.

12. Not one good soldier or non-commissioned officer denounced, or reported to their officers, a combination and state of feeling amongst the men of the regt., which it now appears had existed for a length of time. If the non-commissioned officers did not know the state of feeling of their men, they are unfit for their posts; if they knew it, and did not report it, they have betrayed their duty. Nor can the C. in C. absolve the commanding and other officers of the 5th Regt. from great blame from their entire ignorance of the bad feeling existing amongst their men.

13. It is the positive order of Sir Hugh Rose that the amplest and most patient justice shall be done to soldiers' complaints, provided they be preferred respectfully, individually, and according to the rules of the service. H.E.'s orders are as positive that soldiers, who, in disobedience to the rules of the service, prefer complaints in combination, collectively, or insubordinately, shall be brought to trial by court martial for so doing.

14. The C. in C. is determined to uphold, by every means in his power, the discipline and the credit of the army. The surest mode of effecting both these ends, is the invariable assertion of the principle, which has actuated H.E. on the present occasion, and from which he will never swerve; prompt and generous reward of good soldiers, witness the artillerymen and their commander; and as prompt and signal punishment of bad soldiers, witness the guilty men of the 5th regt., exiles from their country for their lives, these mutineers, with felon's punishment, will expiate their crimes in penal servitude.

15. Sir Hugh Rose ordered the revision of the proceedings of this general court martial, because he was of opinion that the good of the service, and of the State, required that the enormity of the prisoners' offence ought to be met with a more severe punishment than the four years of penal servitude originally awarded by the court.

16. Several other men of the 5th regt. are now, by order of H.E., under trial by general court martial, for having also in wicked folly, combined against the discipline of the British army, a folly not the less wicked because it was a wretched failure.

17. Sir Hugh Rose calls on all good soldiers to do their utmost to induce erring comrades to return to the path of duty. The advice of kind and honest friends often turns the most hardened heart.

18. The mutinous conduct of soldiers of the European local army last year, that of the 5th regt. last month, and indications of a like spirit elsewhere, with respect to the European Forces Bill, render imperatively necessary the issue of this explicit, and warning, general order.

19. The inherent love of British soldiers for discipline and order, the mass of good and loyal feeling which pervades the army at large, the present example, and the determination of the C. in C. to visit, with instant and signal punishment, the slightest attempt to renew the wicked and insubordinate excesses of the year, will, H.E. sincerely trusts, cause all ill-disposed soldiers to leave, once and for ever, a path which must inevitably lead to their ruin and disgrace.

20. Should, however, a renewed attempt at mutiny be made, the C. in C. will consider it his duty to vindicate discipline by representing to military tribunals the necessity of visiting the crime with the extreme penalty of the law.

By order, W. MAYHEW, Lieut. col.,
Adjt. gen. of the army.

Competitive Examinations.

The following notice has been issued by the Horse Guards:—

The competitive examinations hitherto held of candidates for the artillery and engineer services of the Indian army will cease, and all candidates for the artillery and engineer services generally will, in future, have to go through a course of instruction at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich.

The next competitive examination, in conformity with the annexed regulations, will commence on Jan. 7, 1861.

The number of vacancies to be competed for is seventy.

Applications of candidates, as required by Art. 8 of the regulations, will, in this instance, be received until Dec. 20.

The successful candidates will be admitted in the first instance to the Royal Military College, Addiscombe, and eventually transferred to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich.

As in the prospectus formerly issued for admission to Addiscombe College it was provided that candidates might be examined in the use of astronomical and surveying instruments, there will be an examination in that subject for such as desire to take it up, in Jan. next; after which date, however, it will not be included among the subjects of examination for admission to Woolwich. Seven hundred and fifty marks will be allotted to this subject, as heretofore.

W. F. FORSTER, Mil. Sec.

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—The report states that Mr. Makinson, their late engineer-in-chief in India, was compelled by ill health to resign his appointment and return to England. The statements as to the progress of the line were considered by the directors as satisfactory. Impediments caused by the death of one of their assistant-engineers, and of their inspector of brickwork, which temporarily delayed operations, were removed by the timely arrival in Calcutta of a fresh assistant-engineer and subordinate staff; while the more serious difficulty which might have been raised by the failure of health and resignation of Mr. Makinson had been most happily obviated by their having prevailed on Mr. Longridge, their consulting engineer, to proceed personally to India and undertake, for an agreed period, the engineering superintendence of the line. Mr. Longridge's full and accurate knowledge of the requirements of the line, and the personal interest he felt in its early completion, inspired the directors with the hope of very valuable results from his mission. Mr. Longridge was expected to have reached Calcutta in the beginning of the present month. He would be followed in a few days by an experienced accountant from the Great Western Railway in England, who would bring his previous practice and knowledge to bear beneficially on the system of accounts to be adopted in India. In addition to the permanent way material, the Board had transmitted to India the girders for Tolly's Canal bridge, the rolling stock, and almost all the other articles needed for the line; the ironwork for the Pallee-bridge, the last remaining shipment of importance being now under despatch. The company had been fortunate in the safe arrival in Calcutta, up to the last communication, of all the shipments made by the Board, and which they were advised from India as having reached, from time to time, very opportunely for the construction of the line. The directors had made a final call of £2 per share, completing the £5 per share. The directors congratulated themselves on having again obtained the services of Mr. G. B. Bruce to act as consulting engineer in Mr. Longridge's absence. The report of Mr. Bruce, the consulting engineer, states that on the 1st of July last the proportion of earthwork then executed was satisfactory. The price at which it had been done varied from 24d. to 3d. per cubic yard. The results had not been so satisfactory with respect to the brickwork, little more than one-tenth of the whole having been executed. The bridges over Tolly's Canal and the Pallee river were the key to the opening of the line. For three miles out of Calcutta the road had been partially ballasted and the rails laid. The permanent way materials were led forward for a considerable portion of the line. The main stations and workshops at Calcutta had been commenced. Their late chief engineer, Mr. Makinson, did not anticipate that the whole line would be opened for traffic before the end of 1861, and after the unexpected delays which had arisen, the consulting engineer thought that it would not be wise to look for the opening at an earlier period. The capital account to the 29th of September last showed that £197,073 had been received, and £126,352 expended, leaving a balance of £70,721. The interest account showed that £10,429 had been received from the Government, and that £10,104 had been paid to the shareholders, leaving a balance of £325.

PRIESTCRAFT.—The project for establishing a high school for the education of young boys of the Khojah community of Bombay, towards which about fifty thousand rupees were subscribed, has been abandoned at the desire of the Aga, the high priest of the Khojahs, who maintains that the education of Mahomedan children in any other save the language of the Koran is a work of impiety.

The War in China.

(From the Supplement to the London Gazette of Tuesday, Nov. 27.)

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 27.

No. 46.

Head Quarters, Chang-tsia-wan, Sept. 20.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that I left Tien-tsin on the 9th inst., with 700 infantry, 600 cavalry, and two batteries of artillery; 3,000 French troops followed one march behind me; and two days later Sir John Michel marched, with a regiment of cavalry, a nine-pounder battery, and the 2nd Infantry Brigade.

On the 13th inst. I reached Hoo-si-woo, forty miles from Tien-tsin; and as several letters had been received by Lord Elgin from some fresh commissioners of high rank, I halted while Messrs. Parkes and Wade went on to meet them at Tung-chau, twenty-five miles distant. On the 15th these gentlemen returned, having made satisfactory arrangements with the Chinese commissioners, by which it was agreed that the allied forces should halt at Chang-tsia-wan, five miles short of Tang-chau, to which place the ambassadors should advance with an escort and sign the convention. On the 16th Sir J. Michel's force arrived, and on the 17th we encamped at Matou, five miles short of Chang-tsia-wan. The forces consisted of Lieut. col. Barry's Armstrong battery, Captain Desborough's nine pounders, Captain Stirling's six pounder battery, the Cavalry Brigade, and the 2nd and 4th Infantry Brigades, and 1,200 French, with a light battery. From the above, however, three six-pounders and the 60th Rifles had been left at Hoo-si-woo, to hold that place, where I have a depot.

Mr. Parkes rode on to Tung-chau to arrange matters for Lord Elgin's reception, and to make sure of the agreement as to our advance, that a collision might not take place by advertence, it having been settled that the Chinese army should fall back from Chang-tsia-wan. Mr. Parkes was accompanied by an escort of Fane's Horse, under Lieut. Anderson, and by Mr. Loch, private secretary to Lord Elgin. On my part I sent Lieut. col. Walker, acting quartermaster-general, to fix the site of our camp with the Chinese authorities, and Dep.-Assistant-Commissary-General Thompson to receive the promised supplies for the force.

At daybreak on the 18th I marched, and, after going about four miles, I came in sight of a very large force of Chinese, both cavalry and infantry. While halting to form my force Mr. Loch galloped in with three sowars, and informed me that, on going into Tung-chau the previous day, they had found everything quiet on the road; the commissioners had agreed to all Mr. Parke's arrangements; and that, accordingly, leaving Lieut. Anderson and his sowars at Tung-chau, Messrs. Parkes, Loch, Thompson, and Lieut. col. Walker, with five men of the King's Drag. Gds., had come out to meet us, and show us our camping ground, which was a mile and a half south of Chang-tsia-wan.

On arriving at that spot, however, they found it occupied by a large Chinese army, while batteries had been hastily thrown up and armed, so as to flank the proposed site of our camp. From the commanding officer Mr. Parkes could obtain no satisfaction, so he started back to Tung-chau, with an orderly of the King's Drag. Gds., to see the High Commissioner and ask the reason of this move. Mr. Loch came on to tell me of this, and Col. Walker and Dep.-Asst.-Commissary Gen. Thompson remained on the ground with four men of the King's Drag. Gds. and one sowar, where they were to await Mr. Parke's return.

It was only now that I learnt that Mr. De Norman, attaché to H.M.'s Legation, and Mr. Bowiby, correspondent of the Times, had gone to Tung-chau with Mr. Parkes, and remained there with Lieut. Anderson.

Mr. Loch volunteered to return with any orders, and Capt. Brabazon, dep.-asst.-qmr.-gen., R.A., volunteered to accompany him.

They accordingly started, under a flag of truce, for Tung-chau, with my orders for Mr. Parkes and the whole party to return at once to head-quarters.

Meanwhile the Chinese cavalry advanced in great numbers on both flanks, and their infantry poured down on our right front, which was enclosed ground and carefully intrenched. I was extremely anxious not to engage, for fear of compromising our officers, who were in their lines. I therefore covered both my flanks with cavalry, and ordered the baggage to be hastened on and massed on a village in our rear, where it could be defended by a small force. This latter operation occupied nearly two hours, during which time the enemy's cavalry had almost entirely surrounded our forces. Sufficient time had elapsed for all of our party to return from Tung-chau, and I became anxious for their safety, when suddenly a commotion appeared in the enemy's line. The guns and matchlock men in their centre opened fire, and Col. Walker's party dashed out of the midst of their ranks. Col. Walker reported that, while waiting for Mr. Parkes, a French officer joined him, who was suddenly set upon and cut down by a Chinese soldier, and, on riding up to prevent his being murdered, his own sword was snatched from his scabbard, and some men tried to throw him off his horse. Seeing that it was a deliberate attempt to assassinate the whole of them, Col. Walker set spurs to his horse and galloped out with his party, under the fire of the Chinese line. One of his men was wounded and one horse, Mr. Thompson receiving a spear-thrust in his back; but they fortunately managed to reach our lines, their wounds not being severe. It was now useless to wait longer, and the attack was immediately formed. Gen. de Montauban advanced to turn their left, and with him I sent a squadron of Fane's horse, under Lieut. Cattley. On the centre the 9-pounder battery opened, supported by a squadron of King's Dragoon Guards, and part of the 99th regt. advanced up the road.

The Armstrong battery with the 15th Punjab infantry took ground to the left, while Sir John Michel, with the 1st Sikh cavalry, three 6-pounder guns, and the 2nd (Queen's), made a wide flank movement on the extreme left, so as to turn the right of the enemy.

The action commenced simultaneously on all points, and it was now apparent that the Chinese had carefully prepared a very treacherous reception for our forces. An intrenchment, skilfully concealed by natural obstacles, extended on our right and left for several miles, and was armed with numerous guns.

Their cavalry hovered in large masses on our entire left flank, so that Sir J. Michel was unable to perform the flank movement that had been intended until the 1st Sikh cavalry had, by a brilliant charge, discomfited the Tartar horse, and his force advancing, had driven them back for some miles. Finding his position to be such, I caused the Armstrong battery and the 15th Punjab infantry to take ground still more to the left, and with them I turned the right of the enemy's intrenchment, who thereupon fled with considerable precipitancy. I then sent the Armstrong guns and the reserve cavalry to join Sir J. Michel, who, after making a circuit of six or seven miles, joined me in front of Chang-tsia-wan at a later hour. Meanwhile the French had turned the left by a very extended sweep, and were advancing steadily up, capturing many guns, while the 99th with a 9-pounder battery joined me in the centre of the enemy's position. The 15th Punjab infantry pushed on with much spirit, captured several guns in the act of retiring, and eventually advanced through Chang-tsia-wan, taking several large camps on the outside. Here my force halted. The French, being much exhausted by their extensive movement, had halted on the Chinese position.

The enormous extent of country covered by the enemy, who showed more than 20,000 men, did not permit me to use my force with as good effect as I might have done, as it was too small to allow of its being scattered. The loss of the enemy is estimated at 600 killed, while 75 guns fell into our hands.

The French force encountered chiefly infantry, who, on being driven back, were charged most gallantly by Lieut. Cattley's squadron, of whose conduct Gen. de Montauban has written to me in the very highest terms.

The conduct of the rest of the troops was also most excellent; and I would more particularly mention the 15th Punjab infantry, commanded by Lieut. Randall, who, under my observation, advanced with great steadiness and kept their position to the front throughout the day.

Mr. Wade went yesterday to Tung-chau to try and gather tidings of Mr. Parkes's party, but the Prefect denied all knowledge concerning them. A Chinaman, however, was brought in to-day who states that he heard that upwards of twenty foreigners went, after the fight, to Peking. We have every reason to hope for their ultimate safety.

I was compelled to leave a good force at Tien-tsin, lest the sudden withdrawal of so many troops should allow a disturbance to arise there. This in effect took place, but, being judiciously met by Sir R. Napier, everything is again quiet there, and I have directed that officer to join me with two regiments of infantry, leaving two and a-half regiments, with two batteries of artillery, under Brigadier Staveley, at Tien-tsin.—I have, &c.,

Head-quarters, Camp near Tung-chau,
September 22.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that, after the action of the 18th inst., I remained in Chang-tsia-wan for two days, during which time the 1,500 French troops left at Hoo-si-woo joined us, and some convoys arrived in camp, together with intelligence of a flotilla of junks coming up the Peiho with further supplies. From reconnaissances on the 19th and 20th we had ascertained that the Chinese army was encamped in very large numbers about four miles off, on the road between Tung-chau and Peking, and on both sides of the canal which runs from the Peiho to the latter city.

At daybreak on the 21st I marched from Chang-tsia-wan, and, parking the baggage in a village two miles in front, I was there joined by the French, who advanced on the right. Soon after passing Tung-chau the French troops got under fire of the Chinese works thrown up to protect a fine bridge crossing the canal, and on the imperial high road to Peking. At this point the enemy's infantry appeared in considerable force. On the left the Tartar cavalry showed in large masses, and advanced rapidly until within 200 yards of our guns, which, hastily unlimbering, drove them off with a fire of canister, assisted by skirmishers thrown forward from the 2nd (Queen's). The cavalry brigade, which I had kept échelonné away on the left to guard that flank, was now moving up, and the enemy's cavalry driven away from the right by our fire, hung in large masses on our left front, affording an excellent opportunity for our cavalry to charge, which they promptly seized, the King's Drag. Gds., under Lieut.-col. Sayers, in particular, inflicting a very heavy loss on the enemy. On their left Fane's Horse charged a similar body with great gallantry, while the 1st Sikh Cavalry, under Major Probyn, supporting Fane's Horse, effectually turned the right of the Chinese army.

The enemy, though defeated on the spot, yet still remained in front, in clouds of horsemen, who, though constantly retiring from the advance of any part of our cavalry, however small, never allowed more than 1,000 yards to intervene between us, and showed a steady and threatening front. At this time I had with me the cavalry, the 4th infantry brigade, and three Armstrong guns; the rest of the artillery, with the second brigade, having been left in the centre, with directions to feel the French left. With the three Armstrong guns, under Captain Rowley, we fired occasional shots on their thickest masses. These shots, fired singly, at slow intervals, served admirably to illustrate the good qualities of the Armstrong gun; not one failed to strike the thick masses of the enemy, at once dispersing them from the spot.

Thus advancing, the cavalry was brought to a check by the fire of a camp, which was taken by the 99th regiment, under Major Dowbiggin, and which proved to be the head-quarters of some of the imperial princes. This, with several others in the neighbourhood, was burnt by our troops, and the Chinese army retired upon Peking.

We then rejoined our right, which had kept in line with the French, who had carried the bridge, inflicting much loss on the enemy.

Forty-three guns were taken during the action, and the loss of the Chinese was very severe. On the right and left were their heaviest losses, but all along the centre small groups of dead showed the effect of the artillery fire, which had followed their movements till they finally retreated. Our loss is two killed and twenty-nine wounded—chiefly slightly.

I should wish most particularly to bring to notice the very excellent service of the King's Dragoon Guards. The country is extremely unfavourable for cavalry at present, partly from the number of ditches, and partly on account of the crops of maize and millet having been recently cut, leaving sharp-pointed stubble, most injurious to horses, and rendering their rapid movement very difficult; their charge was, however, most effective, and they surmounted these obstacles in a most creditable manner.—I have, &c.,

J. HOPE GRANT,

Commander of the Forces.

DEATH OF NOWROJEE JAMSETJEE WADIA, Esq.

—This venerable old man died at his residence in the Fort a little before one o'clock on 2nd Nov., at the advanced age of eighty-five years, after a long illness. During his last moments he was surrounded by his family and numerous friends, who tenderly and affectionately watched his approaching dissolution. Mr. Nowrojee was the head of the Wadia or Lowjee family, and was looked upon as the chief of the Parsee community, and, till within a few years, occupied the position of the president of the Parsee Punchayet. At an early age he entered the Bombay Dockyard, and succeeded his father, the well-known Jamsetjee Bomanjee, in the year 1822, as master builder, which responsible situation he held for a period of twenty-two years with credit and honour. He retired in 1844 upon a handsome pension allowed by Government as the reward of his meritorious and faithful services during fifty-four years. His life, both in public and private, was one of usefulness and worthy of imitation and example. Generous hearted and liberal in the extreme, he devoted his energies disinterestedly to the good of his countrymen, who uniformly sought his advice and assistance when disputes or difficulties arose among them. He was the friend and companion of the late venerated Parsee Baronet, and the lamented Franje Cowasjee. He was virtuous, pious, and amiable, and bore his severe worldly afflictions with exemplary patience and fortitude. He leaves a large circle of friends to bemoan his loss. The Parsee community have lost in him a worthy patriarch, and the world a truly good man. In testimony of respect for the memory of the deceased, Commodore Wellesley closed the dockyard yesterday, a graceful compliment to our native fellow-subjects, which we are sure will be appreciated. All the Parsee shops in the fort were closed in the afternoon, and the flags of the navy vessels in harbour hoisted half-mast high. In respect to the memory of the late Nowrojee Jamshedjee Wadia, a sum of Rs. 21,601 has been subscribed by his relatives, and from the deceased's estate, towards several charitable funds and religious purposes. About Rs. 6,000 have also been subscribed as a general fund, to be raised among the Parsee community, for a statue, or a full-size portrait of the deceased gentleman.—Bombay Times.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

COTTON.

We publish a letter from Mr. Haywood, Secretary to the Cotton Company, objecting to our view of the Company's proposed operations. He says the Company is established to buy cotton, not to teach the natives of India to grow it. The contrary view tends, he believes, to injure the Company with the public. Then the Company should revise its prospectus, in which the following sentences occur:—

"10. Under the present primitive system of cultivation which prevails in India, the soil realises but a comparatively small quantity of cotton per acre. In some districts as low as thirty or forty pounds, the average being from 100 to 200 pounds of clean cotton per acre. But experiments in nearly all parts of India have shown that under an improved method of cultivation the soil of many parts of that vast territory will produce as much cotton per acre as any other country in the world. It will be the interest of this Company, therefore, to direct its attention to the improvement of the cultivation by superintending the management of farms in suitable localities, to demonstrate to the natives the immense advantages which attend an improved system of agriculture.

"12. One of the greatest benefits ever conferred upon India will be the introduction of machinery for the cleaning of cotton. At present it requires the labour of 750 persons to clean one ton of cotton per day, by means of the rude Indian churka. The employment of machinery, in substitution for this waste of human toil, would liberate an enormous amount of labour for the cultivation of the soil, and be a source of profitable investment for a portion of the capital of the Company."

If those sentences do not mean that the Company intend to teach the ryot, what do they mean? Perhaps we do not give sufficient importance to the main object of the association, but Mr. Haywood would scarcely be content with our views, even upon that point. The Company assumes that by buying the cotton upon the spot and doing their own carriage they will materially diminish the price of the staple. In other words, a European agent will purchase cheaper than the Parsee agents who now act as middlemen, and who possess a knowledge of the people and the country no European will ever acquire. He will not. He must do at least the greater part of his business through natives, who will plunder him to an extent the Parsee would instantly detect. As to the saving in carriage, we wish the Company joy of that part of its undertaking. If it employs a separate staff, it must pay about double the wages native merchants will afford. If it contracts, the contracts will be broken, and the Company driven either to forced labour or to civil courts, which, after a few years of litigation will give them a right to dis-train upon men whose property has been assigned. Even Messrs. Palmer and Co., who, as the representatives of the native Court, exercised almost sovereign power in Berar, found it impossible to screw a profit from their vast acreage of cotton. What has changed since then, that the present Company should be more successful? We repeat, until the expense of carriage can be struck off, Indian cotton cannot compete with that of the Southern States.

LORD CANNING AT RAJMAHAL.

THE opening of the East India Railway from Calcutta to Rajmahal was one of those happy opportunities for delivering a graceful and effective speech with which the present Governor-general has been so frequently favoured. A good classical scholar, and possessed of a cultured mind, and an ingenuous disposition, Lord Canning is also gifted with the enviable talent of easy and appropriate expression, and with the nice tact of saying the right thing at the right moment. Nature evidently designed the noble earl for such occasions as the reception of princes or deputations, and the inauguration of great public undertakings. A facile and elegant speaker, equally courteous and dignified in demeanour, he would have shone unrivalled as a master of the ceremonies, or as perpetual chairman of public banquets. As Lord-lieutenant of an English county, or perhaps even as Viceroy of Ireland, he would probably have been entitled to a conspicuous place in the foremost rank of those who had ever held such appointments. But "the fortuitous concurrence of circumstances" drove him into a situation requiring far greater force of character, greater breadth of views, and greater sternness of disposition. His very virtues have proved his worst enemies, and born to shine in an ordinary sphere in ordinary times, he has been accidentally placed in a false position, in which, with the best possible intentions, and the most devoted self-sacrifice, he has succeeded in imperilling the highest interests entrusted to his supervision, and in alienating the sympathies of his own countrymen without conciliating the native and conquered races. For this, however, Lord Canning is not so much to be blamed as those who selected him for a post requiring exceptional abilities and a marked individuality. It was not Phaeton's fault that he was not an Apollo. An accomplished charioteer, he was yet unable to control the fiery coursers of the Sun, but his rash presumption led to his own destruction, and threatened an entire world with "hideous ruin and combustion." According to the popular verdict, Phaeton was justly punished, but was not Apollo accessory to the fact? Was he not guilty of culpable partiality, carelessness, and indiscretion? So, likewise, we are bound to make every allowance for Lord Canning's shortsightedness in the midst of such overwhelming and unparalleled difficulties and dangers, and to throw the responsibility of his failure on those who made choice of him as their representative. It may be objected, indeed, that at the time of the noble lord's appointment to the Government of India, the terrible cataclysm that so shortly followed was neither foreseen nor suspected, and that a man of the second order of abilities was purposely chosen to carry out and complete the great designs of his illustrious predecessor. But at all times, and under the most favourable circumstances, it is absolutely necessary that the Viceroy of India should be a man of the highest mark, possessed of a large knowledge of human nature, and endowed with a natural genius for command. That Lord Canning did not possess those rare qualifications must have been known to his colleagues, and yet, as it was jestingly remarked at the time, he was sent out to India because his father was once very nearly going.

It was not our intention, however, in commencing this article to speak unfavourably of his Excellency the Governor-general, but simply to draw public attention to the admirable speech in which he invited the assembled guests to drink "Success to the East-India Railway Company." This toast the noble Chairman gracefully prefaced by proposing the health of the Marquis of Dalhousie, who had nursed that undertaking in its infancy, and guided it through its first difficulties. The immediate benefit the European community would derive from the line now opened was, of course, the first point that suggested itself, and it must have been very gratifying to the majority of his hearers to learn that a road traversable at all seasons would shortly be completed from the bank of the Ganges to the foot of the Darjeeling Hills,

"which will enable the wearied and jaded Englishman in Calcutta to transport himself in a few hours to the lower crest of the Himalayas, 8,000 feet above his steamy, swampy home, there to refresh himself, body and mind, by breathing the purest air of heaven and by gazing on the loftiest and grandest snow-peaks of the world. Gentlemen," continued the noble Earl, "I do not speak of this as a mere luxury or indulgence. I have learnt by experience so to value the services of the able men who are under my authority, as to know that there is nothing wiser in policy or of truer economy than to place occasional healthful rest within the easy reach of those who labour hard—whether their labour be for the State or for private interests—and to enable English blood and English lungs to be invigorated by a more congenial atmosphere than the debilitating vapours or parching winds of Hindostan."

The larger and more general advantages to be expected from increased facility and rapidity of communication were next dwelt upon in appropriate language, and the peculiar features of the present enterprise were traced with a "master's hand and poet's fire."

"We began this day's journey," said his lordship, "at a spot washed by the tides of the Bay of Bengal; and within a stone's throw of the anchorage of some of the noblest ships which, to the furtherance of commerce and all its attendant blessings, the skill and enterprise of our fellow-countrymen have launched upon the ocean. We have ended it in an inland district 200 miles off, where not only are the uses of the great highway of nations uncared for and unknown, but where the very name of the 'black water' is a word of mystery and terror. We began our journey at the chief seat of Western trade and civilisation on this side of the Globe—the head quarters of England's power in Asia—and we have closed it almost under the walls of the ancient capital of Bengal and Behar—the city of Gour, which little more than two centuries ago was not surpassed by any in India for its busy population and magnificence, but which now lies a mass of tangled ruins and rank forest, tenanted by wild beasts, reeking with fever, and void not only of human industry but of human life. In travelling between these two points—points of such striking contrast—we have passed through a country teeming with population and covered thick with all that is necessary for the sustenance of man. We have skirted a district abounding in mineral wealth, and already eagerly seizing the opportunity, as yet imperfectly afforded to it, of pouring this wealth into the great centre of activity in Calcutta. We have been carried through the wild country of the Sonthal, one of the rudest and wildest races of India, but a race not insensible to kindly government, and who, if their hills and jungles had been as accessible five years ago as they are now, would have been at once checked in a purposeless rebellion. Lastly, we find ourselves standing on the bank of the Great Ganges, at that point at which it is in the interests of commerce that the tedious and uncertain navigation of its lower waters should be exchanged for a short and secure land carriage."

After a few passing remarks on the success of this particular line in a commercial sense—the net profits amounting to 8 per cent.—Lord Canning again reverted to the more picturesque incidents of the occasion:—

"I have known," he said, "something of similar ceremonies in England, but never have I heard of any that was more thoroughly successful than that which we have this day witnessed. I need not speak of the marvel of seeing such a train whirling through a district which, though not uncultivated, is so backward that at one of the stations not only was anything deserving the name of a road unknown a very few years ago, but the engineer residing there found that even the rudest bullock hackery was an invention altogether new to the people. I need not speak of winding our way at twenty miles an hour amongst hills and forests so wild and unredeemed that bows and arrows are still the weapons of their inhabitants, and that the least crossing into the jungle must, as yet, be much more of a convenience to the tigers than to any human beings."

The conduct of the officials of this Company, as regards the treatment and management of the native population, was next acknowledged in suitable terms of praise, and the character of the English as rulers was sketched with graphic power.

"The natives of Bengal," observed his Excellency, "of whom in one way and another not less than 118,000 are daily working on this railway, are, in this part of the province, a timid, suspicious people; easily taking alarm at novelties, averse to interference with their usages, unused to steady labour, fickle, and too often crooked in their ways."

"And, Gentlemen, it is of no use to deny or conceal it, for it is known to all the world. We Englishmen, with all our great national characteristics, are not, as a people, conciliatory or attractive. God forbid that any of us should feel ashamed of his national character, or wish it to be other than it is. But none amongst us will deny that the very virtues of that character are not seldom exaggerated into faults. We are powerful in body and in mind, and we are proud of that power. We are self-reliant, and justly so, and we like to show our self-reliance. We are conscious of our high purposes and enlightenment, and we are apt to look down upon those whose motives we believe to be less worthy than our own, or whom we regard as debased in ignorance; and we do not care to conceal our feelings. These feelings are not inconsistent with our national greatness. In the days of slavery Englishmen were amongst the hardest taskmasters that the African ever had; but England did not hesitate to spend her gold and her blood lavishly for the suppression of the slave trade, and we poured out our twenty millions like water when we found that it was the only means by which to rid ourselves of the curse of slavery."

"But, Gentlemen, no people, whatever their condition, will patiently bear to be treated by their rulers as though they were less than men; less rational, less capable of right feeling than those who rule them. If we attempt individually or collectively to do this—if we neglect to win the hearts of those over whom Providence has placed us—if, instead of seeking to inspire them with confidence, we take for our maxim that the people of India should be governed as a conquered people, which, as I understand it, means that they should be governed by sheer force; if, in our pride or impatience, we refuse to show forbearance and indulgence to the weaknesses and shortcomings which offend us, we shall not wrongly represent England in the great work which lies before her, and we shall assuredly fail to accomplish it."

These sentiments and reflections cannot be too warmly commended. It is impossible to deny their perfect truthfulness, or to cavil at the manner of their exposition. Si sic omnia dixisset! But, after all, it is not so much Lord Canning's words as his works that have ever appeared to us as objectionable, and we the more regret that one who can think and speak so correctly should display such lamentable vacillation and inconsistency in his public acts and administrative policy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

COTTON COMPANY (LIMITED).

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—I am sorry to observe that you have totally misconceived, and hence misrepresented

(in your leader of the 27th inst.), the objects of the Cotton Company (Limited). I cannot account for this, inasmuch as the advertisement clearly specifies that our object is not to grow cotton, but to buy cotton. At the same time we shall do all in our power to influence the more careful and improved cultivation of the staple. You cannot for a moment suppose that the Indian ryot has arrived at absolute perfection, any more than our farmers had reached perfection in this country even twenty years ago, or that the United States planter has even yet reached that unattainable position in cotton agriculture. The Government has, at the instigation of Manchester, constructed a road from the port of Sedashegur into the heart of Darwhar, and this Company proposes to send capital out to buy, and thus stimulate the growth of the best class of cotton ever grown in India—American. All your other observations as to the need for roads, canals, &c., &c., and the impolicy of increasing the Indian tariff, we coincide with. But, in justice to this Company, I trust you will take the earliest opportunity of correcting the erroneous impression (injurious to the Company) which your leader conveys.

I feel assured that nothing but inadvertence could have occasioned the writer of the article to suppose that our leading object, as a Company, is to teach the ryot how to grow cotton. The company of canny Yorkshiremen must refer to some other company than ours—all our supporters being Lancashire men.

I send you a copy of our prospectus, in which you will observe an alteration in the amount of the shares.—I am, dear sir, yours truly,

G. R. HAYWOOD, Secretary.

BOOKS.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. No. DXLII. William Blackwood and Sons. "Our only danger in India," said Lord Ellenborough, "is the native army." On this theme a very readable, if not a very practical or suggestive, article appears in the current number of Blackwood. There is not much, indeed, to be said against this paper, neither is there much to be said in its favour. With a self-conscious air of authority it lays down certain conventional commonplaces, and affects to give as new what has already been repeated a dozen times, as to the mal-organisation of the old native army and its intrinsic faultiness. We suspect, indeed, that this essay on things in general must be from the same prejudiced and unreliable writer who penned the unfair attack upon Sir Charles Wood, which appeared in the last number of Blackwood. Enunciating his views ex cathedra this polemist lacks the temper and moderation that indicate a thorough knowledge of the subject. He makes up by vigour of assertion for his deficiencies in matters of fact, and prefers affirmation to argument or proofs. Though clever and well written, this article is by no means sound and "thorough."

Elementary Principles of Fortification. By John T. Hyde, M.A. London: William H. Allen and Co.

It is rather late in the day to inquire how many lives might have been saved during the recent mutinies in India had the elementary principles of fortification been more generally understood; but it cannot be doubted that in many instances a successful, or at least a prolonged resistance might have been offered had officers been more frequently acquainted with the true science of self-defence. At Arrah a fierce and numerous enemy was baffled by the skill of a civil engineer; but it is beyond all dispute that Mr. Boyle's plans would have been still more efficient had he been acquainted even with the mere elements of fortification. It is by no means necessary to be a Vauban to possess the knowledge requisite for making the most of any position whatsoever. Still, it does require some sort of training to appreciate at once the true value of accidental advantages—such as a marsh, a wood, a hedge, a ditch, a wall, or a mound of earth. This elementary knowledge, however, may be easily attained by a careful perusal of the treatise compiled by the Professor of Fortification at the Royal Military College, Addiscombe. Nor is it unimportant to observe that the perspicuity of the letter press is greatly enhanced by the excellent engravings by which it is accompanied and illustrated.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The report states that the directors had the utmost confidence in the soundness and promise of the Toombudda project, and they were assured that, with a continuance of that full and ready support which they had hitherto received from the local Government, it would fully justify the expectations entertained of its merits. The directors believed they would be enabled very shortly to lay before the shareholders an accurate plan of the whole work now to be carried out by the company. The expenditure of the company, both in England and in India, up to the 30th of September last, amounted to £72,127, and the receipts on account of capital to the same period to £536,366, leaving a balance of £464,239 in hand at that date.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War-office, Pall-mall, Dec. 1.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Rutherford Alcock, Esq., H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Tycoon of Japan, and Charles Alison, Esq., H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Shah of Persia, to be Ordinary Members of the Civil Division of the Third Class, or Companions of the Most Hon. Order of the Bath.

The objects of this Company are to purchase cotton direct from the grower in India, Australia, and other countries, and to afford encouragement to the general cultivation of cotton. The first operations of the Company will be directed to the district of Dharwar, in India. The Government is now constructing a road to connect the cotton districts of Dharwar with the new port of Sedeshvaghur, at which port a cotton pier will be erected, which the Company will have the advantage of using. The Directors are in possession of the fullest information derived from merchants, as well as from Government officers on the spot, proving that there is a wide and exceedingly profitable field open for the action of this Company. Abundance of good and cheap cotton may be obtained, capital chiefly being wanted for its purchase, and to extend production.

The formation of this Company has grown out of the active exertions of the Cotton Supply Association, and the provisional directors confidently appeal to the spinners and manufacturers for co-operation in carrying out the important object they have in view; and before subscriptions can be received from the general public it is intended that the first half of the proposed capital shall be subscribed by the cotton trade.

Clean cotton can be purchased in many parts of India at prices ranging from 1d. to 2½d. per lb., and with economical management the Company has the prospect, in a reasonable time, of declaring the most satisfactory dividends.

Further information, prospectuses, &c., may be obtained on application to G. R. HAYWOOD, Sec., 1, Newall's-buildings, Market-street, Manchester.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,

PURE AND MIXED,

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

WITH A VARIETY OF PROBLEMS IN, AND PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in this gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Tooth, from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a complete Upper or Lower Set, from 42 to 45. Mr. Bradshaw, Dentist, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-circus.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—TRUE MADRAS CURRY and MULLIGATAWNEY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 9d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho-square; FORTNUM, MASON, & Co., Piccadilly; and of the Principal Sauce Vendors throughout the Kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.
 Price 1s. 14d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.
 Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 299, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAG-

NESIA has been, during twenty-five years, sanctioned by the medical profession and universally accepted by the public as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion. As a mild aperient it is admirably adapted for ladies and children, and it is invaluable in warm climates. Manufactured with the utmost attention to strength and purity by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable chemists throughout the Empire.

CARDIAC ESSENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER.
 The Cardiac Essence, which is now taken in preference to all other preparations of Ginger, not only from its agreeable flavour, but from the value and certainty of its effects, will be found most useful in all cases of indigestion, spasms, heartburn, diarrhoea, irritability of the bowels, and in most nervous affections. To invalids suffering with impaired digestion from long residence in warm climates, and to those who are proceeding to India, this preparation cannot be too strongly recommended.
 Prepared only by GEORGE MUMFORD, Chemist, 5, Bathurst-street, Hyde-park-gardens, and sold by all Chemists, in bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each; also in large stoppered bottles, for foreign use, at 21s.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of papers from Calcutta to the 8th, Bombay to the 16th of November, and from China to the 29th October. The contents of the latter will disappoint such of our readers as have been looking forward to a stirring narrative of martial exploits, or even to a tale of horrors. It is true that the allied forces are in Peking, but that city was taken without resistance. Preparations having been made for the assault to take place on the 13th October, Hang-chu came forth and placed the gate in the custody of the Commander-in-Chief. The outer and inner gates were immediately occupied, and a body of troops quartered on the wall. The Emperor had fled with his Tartar ministers and Tartar army to his Palace of Yehol, where he is not likely to be disturbed by the intrusion of the foreign barbarians. His Majesty's Summer Palace, however, has been completely gutted, the French, as usual, distinguishing themselves by their predatory skill and perseverance. The amount of plunder obtained appears to have been after the fashion of the olden times, when the Mongols first in-truded India, and sacked the ancient cities of the Hindoos. Treasure in gold and silver ingots was likewise found, and has been placed under a guard for the benefit of both armies. The waste and breakage probably far exceeded the value of the spoils actually carried off; but in any case this is the best prize that has fallen to our soldiers for many a year, and we can only hope that the proceeds will be divided among them in less time than it has taken to effect the distribution of the Indian prize-money.

Mr. Harry Parkes, Captain Loch, a French officer, and seven or eight Sikh troopers, were delivered up on the following day, but nothing was known as to the fate of the other prisoners. It is, therefore, still permissible to cherish a hope of their future return to their friends and relatives.

The Earl of Elgin and Baron Gros were at military headquarters, and Mr. Bruce had been sent for from Tien-tsin. It was supposed that the allied armies would winter in Peking and Tien-tsin, and Sir Hope Grant was already taking measures to that effect.

Strict discipline must in this case be maintained, if we would avoid a repetition of the Cabul catastrophe, which was in a great measure produced by causes which the "amorous Gaul" is not unlikely to furnish in the intervals of military duty. And it must also be admitted that what Lord Canning calls the "superfluous energy" of the Anglo-Saxon not unfrequently displays itself in attentions to the fair sex more pointed than polite.

By way of Bombay a telegram has been received from Calcutta, dated November 12, reporting a fresh mutiny in the 5th Bengal European Fusiliers, and the consequent disbandment of that ill-disciplined regiment. It is also said that a soldier of that corps was shot, but whether by order of a drumhead court-martial or in an affray there is nothing to show. The whole report, indeed, must be accepted with reservation.

From the North-West Provinces there are again unfavourable accounts of the state of the harvest, and the up-country papers speak of a famine as almost inevitable.

In Bombay the natives continue to hold out against the Income-tax, and sullenly talk of offering a combined and passive resistance to its assessment and collection. We can only trust that Sir George Clerk will act with energy in crushing this rebellious spirit, and will teach the worshippers of Mammon in that Presidency that they have no more chance of successful opposition to Government than had the votaries of Moloch in the Upper Provinces.

It has been decided by the Treasury that the Indian prize money shall be distributed after the European and not the Indian rates. By this the commanding officers will benefit at the expense of the private soldiers and subalterns.

The Secretary of State for India has made the following appointments in his Council for the ensuing year:—Vice-President, Sir James Weir Hogg; Chairmen of Committees—Finance, Mr. W. Arbuthnot; Military, Major-General Sir Robert Vivian, K.C.B.; Revenue, Mr. T. Prinsep; Judicial and Legislative, Sir T. Erskine Perry; Public Works, Colonel Sir Proby Cautley, K.C.B.; Railways, Mr. Eliot Macnaghten; Political, Mr. W. J. Eastwick; Public, Mr. J. P. Willoughby.

THE TWO ARMIES OF LOCUSTS.

When we condemn the swarms of levies and the vast native army which eat into the vitals of the State, when we are startled by the multitude of police of all classes, civil, rural, and military, we do not think of the two armies of punkah-pullers and chuprassees, both of which, we believe, exceed in number and almost equal in expense either the native corps or the police. What the sutlers and camp followers were to our army during the late campaigns, outnumbering them at the lowest calculation in the proportion of three to one, the punkah coolies and chuprassees are to the army and the whole civil administration in time of peace. We would be the last to advocate the despicable economy which would impair the efficiency of departments, lower the dignity of secretaries, and affect the health and comfort of the hard-worked clerk at his desk and the too little cared for soldier in his barracks. If the present number of Punkah coolies and chuprassees is absolutely necessary, then by all means let it be maintained. But there is not an official who will not admit that the number of the latter at least could be reduced, that four men instead of nine, as at present allowed to each secretary, are quite sufficient to bear the official missives from place to place every day in a city where the offices are in some cases two miles distant from each other. When the departmental buildings are concentrated into one vast range worthy of the metropolis of British India, as is proposed, when they are as close to each other as those in Madras and Bombay, and built so as to secure an internal organisation and speedy means of communication of which the latter cannot boast, then not merely will the fabulous sums now spent in house rent be saved, but the army of chuprassees will almost cease to exist. Meanwhile the most conservative of secretaries, the most ambitious of under-secretaries, the assistant clerk or registrar, who is most tenacious of his rights and resolute in upholding his dignity, admit that the army of chuprassees could be reduced just one-half, not only to the saving of the treasury, but to the securing of greater speed and efficiency in the despatch of business.

When the Military and Civil Finance Commissions, now sitting, publish the statistics of punkah-pulling the world will be astonished. At present the State pays for two coolies to each punkah, or set of punkahs in all the civil offices throughout the empire. It allows punkah pullers for the barracks at something like the rate of one to every two soldiers, and two to every married couple. There are, for instance, in Fort William alone, 1,141 punkah coolies daily at work, each receiving on an average 4 rupees a month. We are told that the supply of punkahs to the Peshawar garrison during the hot season costs about Rs. 7,000 a month. If we allow a monthly expenditure of at least Rs. 4,000 for each large military station in India and of Rs. 160 for every civil office, we have a charge from March to 15th November of something like a quarter of a million sterling. We would not deprive the soldier of one coolie, nor do we think, from the utter inefficiency of the present system of hand labour, any appreciable reduction can be made in this respect in the civil offices. But the expense is so great, and the punkahs are so badly pulled, that he must be welcomed who can show a really effective mode of reducing the former and correcting the latter. So great has been the irritation caused to the sick by the jerking, sleepy, unequal mode of pulling, that in several cases the hospital authorities have preferred to do without punkahs. To some mechanical minds a plan for pulling punkahs by machinery has had as great an attraction as the problem of squaring the circle, but the result has hitherto been equally barren. Projectors have overlooked the fact that the object to be attained is so simple, and have produced the most cumbersome machine, which broke down after a short trial, or the most complex collection of wheels and pulleys, which was as expensive as it was unsatisfactory. We would recommend the Civil Finance Commission to inspect the easy contrivance invented by Mr. Orr, a watchmaker of Madras, and now at work in Fort William. It has been visited by Lord Canning, by the members of Council, and by the military authorities, and should be inspected by all who preside over large establishments or are interested in the comfort of the soldiers. It was approved of by such high engineering and military authorities as Colonel Arthur Cotton and Colonel Balfour in Madras. There it pulled 12 large punkahs in one ward of the General Hospital at less than half the cost of coolies. The patented machine which we saw in Fort William, and for which a charge of Rs. 300 is made, pulls four large punkahs in the garrison library with more than the ease and with twice the swing of those managed in the ordinary way. The water used is 15 gallons per minute. In public offices and barracks, in large private establishments in which many punkahs are required, the use of this machine, after the first cost for purchasing it, will reduce the expenditure for pulling one-half, and give an easy and even swing for twice the length secured by the present mode. We understand the Calcutta authorities have appointed a committee to report on its utility. If they are as favourable to it as those of Madras, it may be improved and introduced into all barracks and offices where a supply of water is available before next hot season. Thus, by the efforts of the Civil Finance Commission, directed to chuprassees, and the use of some such machine as a substitute for punkah coolies, the expense of the two armies may be reduced one-half.—Friend of India.

A YEAR'S ADMINISTRATION OF OUDE.

Lord Dalhousie identified himself with the Punjab. He carefully selected its first rulers personally, supervised the details of its administration, and made it a theatre for the development of that system which is generally known as Non-Regulation. The best officials of the North West, the most promising of the class of military civilians, were poured into it. In a few years it became the most remarkable instance in British history of the power of English government in taming and then elevating warlike races. It is now somewhat the fashion to discredit accounts which may have occasionally sacrificed the real truth to a picturesque style, but the fact remains that the most recent of our conquests, and the most dangerous of our enemies saved India in 1857. Lord Dalhousie's successor has equally identified himself with Oude. The only notable feature of his five years' rule is his connection with that province, and the policy which he has sanctioned in reference to it. In the Proclamation of March 1858, by which he confiscated the whole territory, he but anticipated the declarations which he everywhere made to native princes during his vice-regal progress. What the revolt of a nation did for Oude the rebellion of Northern and Central India has done for the whole peninsula. The former obliterated all rights, whether derived from Pashah, Nawab, or King, or stretching back into the far antiquity, whose only record is to be found dimly traced in mythology. The latter, destroying as it did the dynasty of the Moguls for ever, seated the Monarch of England on the throne of Delhi, made Queen Victoria the incarnation of the paramount power, and the absolute source of all such rights as feudatory princes had previously held at the will of the puppet of Delhi. The royal proclamation did not destroy, but only transferred such rights from Delhi to Calcutta. It declared annexation at an end, for there is but little more to annex. But it substituted a principle far more potent—that the Queen's representative in Calcutta is the source of all rights, the fountain of all honour. The tenure on which the native prince holds his lands and privileges is that of loyalty to England. The adoption of a successor, in the failure of natural heirs, is conceded to him as a favour by the paramount power; it is not recognised as a right. If the annexation policy is coupled in history with the name of Lord Dalhousie, the confiscation policy, in this high and forensic sense, is linked with the name of Lord Canning. It is the solitary great idea of his administration. It is recognised as just by our native feudatories, for Calcutta only takes the place of Delhi. It is recommended by acts which give to the native aristocracy a position far higher and much more secure than they ever enjoyed, such as that held by the zemindars of Bengal, the talookdars of Oude and the sirdars of the Punjab. The history of Oude during the official year which ended on the 1st May last, viewed in this light, is full of interest. The gross mismanagement of all the proceedings in the libel case may show how unsuited are the law and its expounders in a non-regulation province to a complicated state of society. But that law is all the better adapted to the six millions who inhabit Oude. While based on the great principles of natural right, it is the fruit of social usages and the simple customs of centuries. The year 1859-60 is the first during which the machine of Government was in order, and peace allowed all its parts to work smoothly. Rebellion was at an end. All the districts were re-occupied and the courts re-established. The settlement of the land revenue was completed, and the executive had nothing to distract its attention from its ordinary duties. The wave of revolt had passed on to Nepal, where it had harmlessly broken, and in the place of the old institutions which it swept away, a new and better system had been erected. But one circumstance occurred making it impossible for us to look upon 1859-60 as a standard year, with which all its successors may be compared. The new police, which had done such service in trampling out revolt and disarming the country, could not at once throw off their military character, no longer necessary when peace had returned, nor could they easily assume their proper position of subordination to the civil authorities. In this respect the year was one of transition, and the result is that the statistical returns of crime are untrustworthy, owing to the discrepancies between the lists sent in by the police and those of the district officers. This evil has now been corrected, but we must wait for the report of the current year for accurate details of the administration.

The general facts, however, may be relied on. In the administration of civil justice the important step was taken of making English the language of record, of dispensing with the deposition-writing of amlahs, and causing the judge himself to examine the witnesses. In place of the native writers, the new agency of a Clerk of the Court was had recourse to, who is charged with all the petty details requisite for the preparation of a case, and for the enforcing of a decision. This reform, so urgently called for in the Regulation Courts, worked most satisfactorily. The right of appeal was limited by making the concurrent opinion of two Courts final. Out of 387 cases, only 23 decisions were reversed by the superior Court, and 84 were returned for further investigation. The registration difficulty was overcome by appointing Canoongoes and Cazees notaries public. Under strict rules they register all deeds up to Rs. 500, and receive fees at the rate of one-half per cent. There were 3,695 regular suits in the Civil Courts, of which 3,342 were disposed of. The average duration of each was 28 days, or six times less than in the Regulation Provinces. The value of property litigated was a million and a half sterling, nearly the whole of which was in the district of Lucknow. While cases are still tried in the North-West under the notorious Penal Acts there was not one prosecution under them in Oude. Murder was prevalent; 183 cases were reported. But the vigilance of the police, inefficient as they were as detectives, prevented other heinous offences, such as dacoity and gang-robbery, although the province swarmed with disbanded sepoys. The number of criminal cases in the district courts was 8,464, involving 17,421 persons. Of these 6,226 were acquitted. The disarming of the province was completed. Of forts and fortified houses destroyed or dismantled there were 1,575. Of arms taken or surrendered there were 720 cannons, 192,307 fire arms, 579,554 swords, and 694,060 arms of other kinds, making a total of 1,466,841. After this, even were Oude to wish for revolt, it would be harmless. Yet under the recent Arms Act the whole country may re-possession themselves of their arms.

The revenues of Oude are derived from the land-tax, the income-tax, and from excise and stamp duties. In 1856 the king raised Rs. 1,20,41,818, exclusive of extra cesses, from the land. In 1859-60 our demand on this account was only Rs. 1,03,70,108, or a quarter of a million less. Of this upwards of a half is paid by 690 talookdars. The excise duties amounted to about 7½ lakhs, and the stamp duties rose from a half to nearly 1½ lakhs. The anticipatory income-tax, now about to be superseded, yielded 11½ lakhs. The whole revenue from local sources was about three millions sterling. Supply Bills and remittances raised to Rs. 4,47,39,069. All this was spent, leaving a cash balance of a quarter of a million sterling, a sum less than that with which the year was begun. In round numbers the total loss of Oude to the empire was one million sterling. Much of the expenditure was exceptional. The charges of the military engineers were large, the gratuities given to the disbanded corps of the military police were heavy, the force in the garrisons was unusually strong. But allowing for large reductions and increased taxation in the current year, Oude does not pay. The 3 per cent. tax on incomes was realized, the Chief Commissioner still asserts, without a murmur, except in Lucknow. All objections were to the amount assessed on the individual, not to the nature of the tax—a sufficient argument against punchayets and native agency in collection. The number of tax-payers was 502,468, and the average sum paid by each was Rs. 2-4. The octroi duties were abolished.

Lucknow was the stronghold of rebels in March, 1858. Oude was not entirely reoccupied till January, 1859. In two years a nation of six millions, each one of whom was an enemy, has been tamed, disarmed, and soothed. Their territorial aristocracy have been made our friends; the people have become at least unresisting tax-payers; the machine of civilisation, with its justice and material prosperity, is peacefully at work. Oude in 1860 is a parallel to the Punjab in 1850. It is equally a tribute to the power and the forbearance of England. The work, as yet in its infancy, has been accomplished not so much by an efficient civil administration as by the knowledge that that was based on a strong military force. The lesson is evident. We shall civilise India, we shall raise its peoples towards our own level, only as we make the very dream of resistance impossible.—Friend of India.

THE PENAL SETTLEMENT OF THE NORTH WEST.

The district of Banda was ceded to the East India Company by the treaty of Bassein in 1802. It lies to the south of the Jumna, and is one of the great outposts of the north-western provinces. Except on the north and partially on the west it is surrounded by the petty States of Rewah and Bundelkund, whose chiefs were never really favourable to our rule. Its people are a bold and warlike race, equally ready with the sword and the plough, masters of a hilly country, to the fastnesses of which they can at all times retire to escape the action of our Courts, or to defy their own superior lords. From the days of Mahmood of Ghazni who besieged its great fort of Kalleen-gur in 1023, it has been the scene of warlike struggles and incessant contests for dominion. For centuries it was the great battle-field of the Pathans and Moguls. The people have been bred in blood, and the anarchy of 1857 allowed them again to taste its sweetness. In the successive changes of masters which Banda has undergone, the tenures by which its fields are held have become more complicated and more numerous than even those of the Southern Marhatta Country. Under our own administration the sales of land have been most extensive, and over-assessment has demoralised the people, while it has lessened the revenue. The difficulties connected with such a state of things were sufficient to deter the boldest collectors from Banda. But to all this is superadded a climate which is most deleterious to European life. There is a Banda ague which is as notorious as the Scinde fever used to be, and which, like that, can be removed only by change of scene. The history of Banda during our own administration, its unhealthy climate, and its position ninety-five miles from all civilisation, account for the horror with which it has been regarded.

Up to the year 1819, the district formed one with Hummeerpoor and Calpee, but that proving too extensive a charge, it was made into a separate Zillah. At the last census in 1853, it covered an area of about 3,000 square miles, and contained a population of 743,172 souls. There were eight settlements of the land-tax previous to that in 1833. Of these the first affected only a portion of the district. The 2nd, 3rd and 4th were made on jummas varying from Rs. 13,75,000 to Rs. 14,04,000, and the collections were about the same. Then came the ever-to-be-remembered settlement of Mr. Scott Waring in 1814-15, from which dates the ruin of Banda. To raise the revenue was his grand object, and raised it was from Rs. 14,94,908 to Rs. 19,21,220, which again in 1819-20 rose to Rs. 20,26,508. The people were then in flourishing circumstances, the soil rich and productive, the seasons propitious, and the disorders prevailing in the native States attracted capitalists to the district. The enormous jumma was not only demanded but paid, and it was continued at the same high standard through the 6th settlement in 1820-21. The 7th settlement of 1825-26 saw it reduced to Rs. 18,78,000, and then the effects of Mr. Scott Waring's Act began to appear. The virgin soils which had been relied on for cotton crops became exhausted, a succession of bad seasons prevailed which told with tenfold severity in a district so entirely dependent on the seasons as Bundelkund, and the stream of capital and labour to British territory was diverted by the comparative restoration of order in the independent States. Land went out of cultivation, or was overrun by a destructive weed called the Kous grass. So matters progressed from bad to worse, till at length in 1829-30 the whole district may be said to have been bankrupt. Of a jumma of 18½ lacs, only 13½ lakhs were found realisable. An immense number of estates changed hands, till at last the Government issued a proclamation that all who pleased might resign their malgootaree engagements. The result was the immediate resignation of nearly six hundred estates paying more than two-thirds of the revenue of the whole district. These were all thrown upon the hands of Government. The 8th settlement of 1833-34 reduced the assessment to 13½ lakhs, or 5½ lakhs below that of Mr. Scott Waring. The relief given was beneficial, but unfortunately the jumma was progressive, and as it began to rise balances commenced to accrue. Then followed in 1841-3 the settlement under regulation IX., 1833, when in the face of previous warnings and the obvious fact that a district exhausted by years of over-taxation required a long term of light assessment to recover itself, the Government demand was raised to Rs. 17,23,000, but was subsequently reduced to 15,85,890. But year by year the balances continued to grow, notwithstanding processes on a most extensive scale. The people, driven to all sorts of expedients to evade an oppressive demand, fought the collector in and out of the civil court, with the weapons of fraud and chicanery.

So matters went on till at last, in 1856, the authorities perceived that, in a district where the people, stricken with poverty, paid the revenue by private transfers and mortgages; by the sale of their agricultural implements and cattle; by cutting down their trees for timber and taking the tiles off their houses, petty remissions were of no avail, and that the true remedy lay in a light assessment. Measures were being carried out for this end when the flood of the mutiny came and swept them all away. Then, to crown the woes of this unhappy spot, ensued a year of anarchy. Every man's hand was against his neighbour; the strong preyed on the weak; villages were burnt; crops were carried off or destroyed; the large and powerful villages oppressed the small ones, and both in turn were oppressed by mutinous troops passing through the district, and by the forces of the rebel Nuwal, of Banda, and Nurayun Rao, of Kirwee. When the district was re-occupied, the necessity for revision was tenfold more urgent. The people had been thoroughly looted, the speculators in land who had taken villages before the mutiny had turned rebels, and where two lakhs of remission were required before, three were called for now. The work of revision was at once entered upon and finished last year. The general need of it may be estimated from the fact that out of the 1,367 villages comprised in the district, the assessments of 1,085 have been revised. The total permanent reduction for the whole Zillah amounts to Rs. 2,78,328, or an average of 19 per cent. on the former Government demand, as follows:—

Jumma for 1858	...	Rs. 15,82,212
Proposed jumma	...	13,03,884
		Decrease 2,78,328.

The percentage of reduction is thus 17.6.

As the lightness of the new settlement is appreciated by the people; as roads link the station to Allahabad and cultivation disperses the deadly malaria; as the people increase in comfort and the revenue rises proportionally, Banda may cease to be regarded as the penal settlement of the North-west.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HAZAREEBAUGH, Oct. 28.—This station has been in an unusual state of excitement to day, caused by the arrival of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; everything necessary for his reception at two or three o'clock in the afternoon had been completed, and all parties were anxiously waiting that hour, when suddenly, at half past eleven a.m. a horseman, stationed on the road for the purpose, brought in the intelligence that his Excellency was but a few miles off, and would be in much sooner than was expected. At this announcement everything was expedited, and mounted officers were seen in all directions wending their way to the house of the Commissioner, where his Excellency intends putting up during his stay amongst us. Here they were joined at intervals by more officers who came on foot, until at last nearly all that the station could muster were assembled to greet his Excellency on arrival. About twelve, or a little after, the guard of honour and band of H.M.'s 37th Regiment arrived, and were drawn up, facing the house, in the shade afforded by a top of mangoe trees which grew on the edge of the road, and seemed to have been planted for the occasion. As time flew, and no appearance of the Commander-in-Chief, the more numerous were the conjectures as to the veracity of the report. Some began to bewail the loss of a few hours' repose thus unceremoniously nipped in the bud, while others grieved inwardly at having hastily thrown away some pet cheroot, or laid aside some well coloured pipe, when suddenly the crowd outside begins to move, and another horseman arrives with the cheerful intelligence that his Excellency is close at hand. Off drives a carriage and pair to meet him, swords are looked to, gloves put on, and mustachios stroked, and in a few minutes more his Excellency turns in at the gate as the guard present arms, and the band strikes up amidst the loud roar of seventeen guns, fired with admirable precision by a party of the military police under the superintendence of the station staff officer. On alighting at the house and entering the verandah he is met by a host of officers, with whom he has a few minutes' conversation, and having ordered the guard to be sent away, bows a good day to all, who then depart, brim full of satisfaction.—Nor. 1.—This place relapsed into its former dullness on Tuesday last (30th), owing to the departure of the Commander-in-Chief. The stay of his Excellency amongst us, although it was but short, has been marked by an energetic desire on his part to become personally acquainted with everything in and around the station. On the afternoon of his arrival he drove out and visited the fort which was thrown up for the protection of the inhabitants during the mutiny; the next morning at an early hour he rode out to one of the hills about four miles off, on the summit of which it is proposed to erect barracks as a sanatorium, and on his return he visited the hospital occupied by the troops, the barracks at the dinner hour, and inspected all the troops in garrison in the afternoon, leaving the same night about 10 o'clock for some place near Dinapore. The troops were paraded at a quarter to five P.M., and were drawn up in line about five. They consisted of H.M.'s 37th regiment, on the right of which was a detachment of Ramgurn Horse, and a couple of small field-pieces harnessed to bullocks and manned by a detachment of the Military Police. About a quarter past five his Excellency and staff arrived on the ground, and was received with a general salute. He then inspected the line by riding down it, after which the whole marched past in slow time, which was done in excellent order, the bullocks, for once in their lives, keeping some degree of regularity. The 37th regiment was then put through a variety of evolutions by several of its officers called out for the purpose, until the moon began to shed her light on the scene, when the whole were dismissed, his Excellency expressing himself as highly pleased with the appearance of this regiment and the efficiency of its officers.—Englishman.

PATNA, Oct. 31.—The collector and magistrate of Tirhoot has officially reported the fact of the Durbangah Rajah's demise to the commissioner of Patna, and Mr. Deputy Collector and Deputy Magistrate Casperz is deputed to go to Durbangah at once, and preserve order and peace in that domain. Mr. Henry Rose assumed charge of his new appointment of collector and magistrate of Sarun on the 22nd, on which date Mr. R. J. Richardson also left for Mozufferpore. After a long interval a chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Broomhead, of Dinapore, visited Chuprah a few days ago, and afforded the Christians of that place the benefit of divine service in English. The assistants of the Patna opium factory are as busy as bees now, packing for the first fleet which is expected to leave this for Calcutta on or about the 6th proximo, under charge of Messrs. W. H. Watkins and R. Fraser, jun. On Friday, the 25th, a scene was witnessed at sunset at the Grand Square of Dinapore. All the troops stationed there (including a regiment of Benares horse (natives), the Mysore levy and detachments of H.M.'s 73rd and 5th Bengal European Infantry and 5th battalion Bengal artillery regiment) being paraded on the esplanade, privates John Brown and Baldwin, both of H.M.'s 5th B.E.F., stepped forth in obedience to the brigadier's order, and were immediately manacled. Brigade Major Gilbert then read out in a stentorian voice the general orders by the Commander-in-Chief dated the 22nd inst., for the information of the prisoners and the edification of all the soldiers present, after which the culprits were made as public spectacles of disgrace to march in slow time up and down the several files of the European corps drawn up in half-distance columns, and finally they were fettered with the big chains, and taken off to their cells. Many other Dumpees, too, whose faces had not up to date been decided, stood disarmed on the occasion. The nights have become rather chilly now, but it is still considerably hot in the day. Fevers, consequently, are prevailing.—Burkara.

Mr. Forlong, manager of the Mulnath indigo concern, has been appointed secretary to the Income-tax Commission in Calcutta. This remedies the mistake made by Government in not appointing a paid collector, like Mr. Ellis in Madras.

CAPTAIN URQUHART'S JEU D'ESPRIT.—TO THE MEMBERS OF THE SIMLA CLUB.—JULLUNDER, May 30, 1860.—GENTLEMEN!—The accompanying letter—the remote date of which, as far as it is discernible, proves it to have been written in the last century—was found the other day by my khansamah among some old papers which he had picked up somewhere—could not tell where—and which he was in the habit of giving daily to the cook to wrap round a red herring that I invariably have for breakfast every morning. It was on my discovering, last Tuesday, on the body of one of the said herrings, rather underdone, a small fragment of antique doggerel, that I was induced to make inquiry touching the M.S. My khansamah, a very intelligent nigger by the way, and one remarkable for his extreme attention to the whims and oddities of his master—a “rum'un”—perceiving the document to have some value in my eyes, carefully unrolled the paper from the fish, and carrying away the former, returned with it almost immediately after, and so far cleansed from all oleaginous stains and matter, as to enable me, to my very great antiquarian delight, to have it legibly and fairly copied out by my moonshee, who writes English admirably; and I have much pleasure in doing myself the honour of now presenting to you in print this curious relic of bygone times, in token of my unqualified approbation of the very exemplary and irreproachable standard of morality which, under your distinguished influence, and exalted example, at present obtains at Simla.—I remain, gentlemen, with the highest respect, your obedient and very devoted humble servant, CATIUS.

A FAMILIAR EPISTLE FROM JACK SIMPKIN, A.M., TO HIS FRIEND, BOB SAWYERS, ESQ., F.R.S.

“Res not ætate ad omnes pervolgatæ.”

JULLUNDER, May 30, 17—.*

Dear Bob! You have ask'd me, if not in the blues, To write you a letter, and give you the news; With your wish, my dear Bob, I would gladly comply, But just now there is nothing new under our sky. All the Tritons are gone—Nimrods only are here, Which is always the case at this time of the year; For you know that about the beginning of May, On the Plains no poor devil in comfort can stay; So, anxious, no doubt, to escape from some ills, All pack up their traps, and fly off to “The Hills!”— Were it not for the want, my dear Bob, of the pelf, I'd pop into my doolie, and go there myself. But Simla, I'm told—for I've never been there— In the season's a place that's excessively dear. A bob for a chicken—a dib for a duck, And I know not how much for a—sheep's head and pluck

Of a frowzy old ewe, that is not worth a button, But at Simla is thought to be very fair mutton! And you know, my dear Bob, that abroad or at home, Without money, one cannot conveniently roam; And if truth must be told—and I deal not in fibs—I'm damnably hard-up just now for the “dibs.” I've spouted my tucker—my buggy is gone— My Buckmaster's mufli, revolver, and gun, And even my grey Arab—you remember poor Pat?— And I'm now, Bob, reduc'd to a grass-cutter's tat! I've one consolation—I have not got a wife! For in India a spare-rib's the plague of one's life; Her home is a place not at all to her taste, And of all men, her husband's the one she likes least! About, as I've said, the beginning of May, If you don't let her loose, “there's the devil to pay!” She sells all your chattels without rhyme or reason, And starts off at score to “The Hills” for the season; Not caring a farthing, a tittle, or jot, Whether you can get leave, and go with her, or not!— There—she keeps open house for each cackling dragoon, And infantry gent, and artillery “spoon,” And snob on the staff, and irregular cavalry— Fellows who glory in all sorts of devilry, And fasten, like flies upon treacle, upon her, Not caring a straw how they pigeon “your honour!” But honour's an old-fashioned thing, and quite faded is, On “The Hills” now-a-days, 'mongst such gents and such ladies. There are tilfins, and dinners, and pic-nics, and balls, And archery meetings, and theatricals; And “meetings by moonlight” down khuds, which give rise

To very queer stories—but, no doubt, they're all lies.

* Illegible.
† The name of the favourite horse referred to.
‡ An undersized, ill-bred country pony.
§ Of course there are some bright exceptions, but, alas! they are—

“Like angels' visits, few and far between.”

For my own part, I really don't credit one-half I see, hear, or read of—I vote it all chaff! Yet if rumour speak truly, there is too much handle For all sorts of ill-natured gossip and scandal. To wit—it is said, but I think it's absurd!— At balls certain ladies get “drunk as a lord,” And in seeking their doolies, fall down the club steps, And on their way home meet with other mishaps. Now, to think the soft sex would imbibe XXX, Or even Champagne in excess, is a libel, Much less gin or brandy, though either were handy, And fall, from their high estate, under the table! It is really a shame, and a sin to defame, And accuse them of that horrid vice—Inebriety! I've seen a great many, and never knew any Forget, for a moment, the strictest propriety! But be this as it may, my dear Bob, I must say I don't quite approve of society's attitude. At “The Hills,” where the gents are a trifle too gay, And the ladies, too, often slip out of their latitude! But I may, it is true, be some years behind Time— (I was told so, indeed, when I last was at Cadiz.) And there's something, no doubt, in an Eastern clime That tickles the taste and the tails of the ladies. Farewell, my dear Bob! I am sorry my letter Is not worth the postage—I wish it were better; Just drop me a line, my good friend, in reply, And believe me, yours ever, dear Bob, till I die.

J. S.

P.S.—I had nearly forgotten, dear Bob, to apprise you Of one little circumstance which will surprise you: Though quarrels are frequent, they never yet end In “Pistols and collee for two,” and a friend! If your wife play you false, and levant with a lover, Don't trouble yourself her retreat to discover, She's sure to return when the novelty's over. Take her back to your “buzzum”—shake hands with the gent,

And say you're quite satisfied, he never meant To tarnish your honour, or injure her fame, And assure him that you, and you're only to blame! And if, as no doubt, you may have a spare room, Politely invite him to make it his home. And tell him he'll always find knife, fork, and plate, At your table—and let him select his own seat: The nearest to ma'am Sahib—and furthest from you. For want of a better, at present will do. And at night, after dinner, “When Pleasure fills up To the highest top sparkle each heart and each cup. Put wool in your ears—shut your eyes—if you can— And fall fast asleep, like a good-natured man! Such, Bob, is the rule in society here, Where all things are done pretty much on “the square.”

J. S.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

I've open'd my letter to tell you, dear Bob, Of a very sad business—a shocking bad job; But which here is considered a mere bagatelle— Mrs. A. has elop'd with a cavalry “swell!” While her sister's gone off with a private dragoon! And the daughter's non est since the full of the moon! And club gossip hints that papa, too, has “mizzled” With the wife of a friend, whom its said he has chisell'd

In more ways than one—in fact let him in For the loss of his spouse, and the loss of some tin! To men like ourselves, Bob, whose morals so strict are,

'Tis really quite sad to see Vice always Victor. And Virtue, that goddess so mild and so good, Fairly turn'd out of doors, and snubbed, and pooh-pooh'd.

Don't you think that a letter address'd to The Times Might have the effect of correcting such crimes? J. S.

RAJAH OF OODYPORE.—In acknowledging a complimentary letter from the Rajah of Oodypore on the subject of her Majesty's assumption of the direct government of India, Sir Charles Wood says:—“During the recent disastrous period of the military insurrection in Upper India the Queen relied with confidence on the unshaken fidelity with which your Highness and the other princely representatives of the ancient houses of Rajpootana had adhered to your engagements with the British Government; and her Majesty observed with the liveliest gratification the support which you gave to her armies, the assistance which you rendered to her subjects, and the tranquillity which you maintained throughout your own extensive dominions. It is in such times that the quality of friendship is best tested; and her Majesty commands me to assure you that the proofs which your Highness has afforded of loyalty and devotion to the British Crown will ever be held by her Majesty in grateful remembrance. The praise is fully deserved. The Thakoor of Awah was the only rebel in Rajpootana in 1857, and he rose against his own Rajah, and not at first against British power.”

THE RED KARENS.—The first tract ever printed in the language of the Red Karens has been issued by the American Missionaries. The Red Karens are the most savage of the tribes, and have not yet allowed the establishment of schools among them. Christianity has won its triumphs chiefly among the Bghai, Sgau and Pgho tribes. These three tribes alone, savages who ten years ago had no written characters, have used twelve thousand separate printed tracts or books, issued by the Maulmain Mission Press during the past twelve months.

COAL IN SIAM.—A deposit of coal has been discovered in Siam, some 20 miles from Bandon, a town on the eastern side of the Malay Peninsula. The governor of the district reports in admirable scientific English to the First King of Siam the results of his inspection of the formation. "The stratum of coal is generally found at about nine feet from the surface. The upper part of the ground is composed of loam until within a foot of the coal, when a stiff blue clay with small stones is arrived at. The coal is in a very pure state, and in veins of considerable magnitude, in proof of which a depth of six feet was cut without signs of the seam being finished." The coal is within an easy distance of Singapore and Bangkok, and every facility is offered by the Siamese Government for working it. The supply in Labuan makes the English independent of Siam, however.

THE BENGAL COAL COMPANY have increased the remuneration of their miners twenty per cent. at all their extensive collieries. With the general advance in the rate of wages and food this would sooner or later have been unavoidable, and the directors have acted wisely in anticipating the demand which might otherwise, with the advice and help of the Lieut.-governor's officials, have been enforced by strikes and repudiation of engagements. The advance in wages will diminish the handsome profits which have lately been made in this business, but there is no reason to fear that the price of this now necessary article will be enhanced for improved machinery and appliances, and the extension of the branch railways (though not profitable to the shareholders, or rather to Government and the public) will keep the supply up to the present consumption.

THE CALCUTTA DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE held its first anniversary on the 1st of November, Dr. Mouat in the chair. Sir Bartle Frere was elected president. In the course of the evening the services of Sir Mordaunt Wells to the Institute were deservedly commended. Sir Mordaunt Wells' energy is in place in fostering an important institution of this kind, and we trust he will long and intelligently continue to do so. The speakers were Sir Bartle Frere, Mr. W. Brett, Mr. R. Temple, Dr. Duff, Captain Malleson, and Mr. Parker.

THE REV. MR. NORMAN, Chaplain of Dum-Dum, has succeeded in inducing Government to establish a permanent institute for the instruction and recreation of the soldiers in the station. The first step has thus been taken by the Government of India for ameliorating the condition of the soldier, and we now look with some interest to the practical fruits of Sir Hugh Rose's order. The old mess-house has been purchased, a sum of Rs. 2,500 has been granted to fit it up so as to contain a library, museum, and rooms for lectures, concerts, refreshments, &c., and a monthly expenditure of Rs. 116 sanctioned for lighting and establishment. The experiment is sure to succeed with Mr. Norman to watch it. Similar institutions will, we trust, be introduced into every military station in India. Gymnasias, baths, &c., should be added. The committee gracefully recommend that the Dum-Dum building should be known as "The Outram Institute."

THE SYREN AND THE SENTINEL. (Translated from the Bostan of Sadi.)

I.
They say that once a soldier,
On a dark and dreary night,
Kept watch upon the palace
Of a Persian King of might.
The ground was thickly cover'd o'er
With hail, and sleet and snow,
And bleakly bitter did the blast
O'er that poor soldier blow.

II.
The King, wrapped up in folds of fur,
Upon the terrace stroll'd,
And chanced to see the sentinel
Stand, quivering, in the cold.
His heart was moved to pity
When his eyes beheld the sight,
And sorely did he feel for those Who watched on such a night.

III.
"Stay! stay!" he cried, "thou sentinel
Who guardest thus my life,
And bravely fight'st in battle fields
With dread and danger rife.
A cloak of fur I'll bring to thee,
T'will shield thee from the blast,
And be to thee a faithful friend
Till winter's winds have pass'd."

IV.
The King within the Palace Halls
In eager haste retired,
To search them for the cloak of fur
The sentinel required;
But ere the search was over,
Lo! his eyes beheld a girl,
Far statelier than the cypress,
And far fairer than the pearl.

V.
She rose. Around the Monarch's neck
She threw her ivory arms!
The Monarch gasped, and gazed, and sighed,
While gloating o'er her charms.
With love and passion motionless,
The Monarch to the spot,
The Syren chained! The sentinel
Was suddenly forgot.

VI.
In ecstasies of blissful joy
The Monarch pass'd the night;
No thought of sorrow cross'd his brow
To clash with his delight.
And when his eyes grew weary
And Love's vigils ceased to keep,
By beauteous slaves, on bed of down,
The King was sung to sleep.

VII.
Next morn the mighty Monarch rose,
And sought the Halls of State.
He asked his courtiers, each and all,
"What tidings to relate?"
"There's nothing new or rare," they said,
"The snow still wraps the ground,
And the guard who kept the watch last night

Meerut, Nov. 3, 1860. JOHN LANG.

THE RAJAH OF JYNTEA, who is rusticated at Sylhet on a pension of Rs. 500 a month, having, for certain reasons, given up all his property and authority to the British, lately applied for the restoration of his little kingdom; on reference it was found that he had sacrificed human beings to Kali, that his sister had kidnapped British subjects in order to sacrifice them to the goddess in order to please her and obtain the blessing of fruitfulness; that the Rajah had aided and abetted in all this; and, besides, was so steeped in the superstition of his country that nothing could prevail upon him to assist in discovering the instigators to the kidnapping, or to assist in putting down the vile practice of human sacrifices. It was resolved that the Rajah's request could not be complied with.

THE MOSQUE AT HOOGHLY.—The junior secretary to the Government of Bengal has written a letter to the Commissioner of the Burdwan division, on the subject of the mosque at Hooghly.

The magistrate of the latter place, annoyed by the daily calling to prayer at this mosque, near which his office is situated, ordered the muezzin to discontinue the practice. The Lieutenant-governor is of opinion, that if the call was not a novelty, the magistrate's indiscretion was very great. The legality of the question will be decided by the Judge of Hooghly.

A BOOK FOR THE SOLDIER.—We wish to direct attention to a grievance, small in appearance but productive of the worst results. The long cold winter evenings have now set in, and the soldiers must be much in their barrack rooms. It is difficult to imagine anything more cheerless and disconsolate than the appearance these rooms present after night-fall. By some freak of cruel and ill-judged economy, one small miserable light, suspended eight or ten feet above the floor, is all that is allowed for a large lofty barrack room, containing from twenty to thirty men. It is possible perhaps by getting upon a table, and standing directly under the light, to read a book or a letter; but, on the whole, at the very time when the men are most disposed to take up a book or illustrated periodical, to write to their friends, or to improve their minds and their position by the study of the native languages or useful and religious works, they are compelled, by want of light, to sit idle all the night, which means for most of them to drink, play cards, quarrel, and do worse. But it is not merely ill-judged and misplaced economy. The soldier, even the non-commissioned officer, is not allowed to light a lamp or a candle at his own expense. He and his family must sit in darkness. The pleasant evening reading is to him a forbidden luxury; and when the one miserable night light goes out, should himself or any of his family be suddenly attacked by cholera, or other disease, there is no help for it; he must wait till the morning, or grope his way to the hospital as best he may. We do not know to whom is due the honour of having devised this petty torture, but we never met officer or soldier who did not consider it as one of the worst grievances of barrack life—the cause of endless and unnecessary annoyance, immorality, and discontent. We are confident that this cannot be known to men like Sir James Outram and the Commander-in-Chief, who have done and are doing so much to improve the soldier's social position, and to increase his comforts; and that, as soon as known, it will be remedied. A few good lights make all the difference between a cheerful, pleasant, comfortable room, and a cheerless, gloomy prison. The boon we ask for is not much; but it would be gratefully received by every European soldier in India.—Friend of India.

ANNUITANTS.—The Englishman gives the following list of the annuitants of the Bengal civil and medical services for 1860-61:—I. Civil.—James Grant, G. W. Battye, R. B. Morgan, A. Seance, H. C. Tucker, R. Hampton, J. H. Young, R. Alexander, S. D. Wilkins, J. J. Ward, H. S. Ravenshaw, C. Chester, A. G. Macdonald, E. F. Radcliffe, G. L. Martin. II. Medical.—Inspector General G. G. Brown, Surgeon C. J. Davidson, retired, Surgeon Thomas Leckie, retired, Surgeon Major H. R. Bond, Surgeon William Brydon, retired, Surgeon John Wood, retired, Deputy Inspector General A. Gibbon.

THE REPORT OF THE CUSTOMS COMMITTEE, consisting of Mr. Spooner, of Bombay, Mr. Bullen, of Calcutta, and the Hon. Ashley Eden, of the Board of Revenue, appointed at the suggestion of the late Mr. Wilson to consider the obnoxious valuations of the Calcutta tariff, and to construct a uniform scale of valuations for all India, is published in the Gazette. They condemn the Calcutta rates as unfair alike to Government and to importers, and virtually adopt the Bombay tariff. They recommend the transfer to the free list of more than one hundred articles of petty trade which scarcely repay the cost of collection and obstruct business at the Custom-house. The leading firms of Calcutta agree with them in urging that grey cotton goods be valued by weight and that English be substituted for the ever varying native weights and measures.

THE CALCUTTA POLICE.—The subject of police reform is gradually making way. On the suggestion of Mr. Wauchope, the commissioner, the small detachments of sepoy and Bengal military police employed as guards in Calcutta, are to be withdrawn, and the whole force to that extent reduced, the civil constabulary taking their place. At present 275 regular soldiers and 184 military policemen are absent from their corps on these duties. As each sepoy costs the State Rs. 250 a year, and each Calcutta policeman only Rs. 130, the saving will be equivalent to at least the difference between these sums. On account of the bullion in the Bank of Bengal, the Mint and the Treasury, a night guard of soldiers will be still maintained. Thus the London system will be adopted, which has succeeded so well in Madras.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.—The pages of the Official Gazette will no longer be disgraced by the notification of two days' holiday in the public offices for the Churruck Poojah. The Government of India has directed that the last day of the Hindoo year be given instead. The next reform should be twelve days at Christmas instead of the Door-gah Poojah holidays.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 8).—Very little business has been done in produce since the opening of offices after the native holidays, and prices of almost all descriptions of staples have remained unchanged since the departure of the last mail.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 8).—A fair amount of business was done on the "lucky" day (the 24th ult.) in the general holidays, but not at any advance in price, an auction being held on the previous day by one of the houses having checked the improvement which was generally expected. After the resumption of business on the 31st ult. there was a little local demand for 6 to 8 lb. Grey Shirtings, at a slight improvement of about 1 anna per piece; but the demand has subsided this week, and this slight advance is scarcely obtainable at present. Heavier cloths are dull of sale in the absence of demand from the Upper Provinces. 54 and 60 inches cloths were expected to rise in price, but it has been checked by the failure of some Dacca dealers. Grey Madapolans have been in little local inquiry, but without any improvement in price. Grey Jacquets and Mulls have been without inquiry. Bleached Cottons of almost all descriptions have been without demand. Prints and Chints are still inactive. Mule Twist has been in rather fair request at a slight improvement in price. Copper and Iron have a little improved in demand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE INCOME TAX.—A series of questions by the Madras Government on the subject of the Income tax, with the answers of the Governor-general in Council, presenting a perfect catechism of direct taxation, and of financial casuistry, appears in the Calcutta Gazette. The following decisions are the most important. Military officers and men in purely civil employments other than employment in the police, are liable to the tax on the whole of their consolidated allowance. The allowance of European officers, &c., on service in China being debited to the British Government, are not liable to the tax. Contributions to the Madras Orphan Fund, as well as to the Military Orphan Society's Fund, Calcutta, are exempt. The question regarding the Madras and Bengal Military Funds is not yet decided. Though military and naval pensioners are exempt, their widows and heirs are not. The private, or other than official income of Government servants, which is unknown to the civil auditor's office, is to be assessed in the same way as that of persons not in official employ. Where officials subscribe to insurance societies, the ex-officio assessors will deduct the amount in estimating their income. While all property clearly proved to be exclusively devoted to religious and charitable purposes is exempt from income-tax, the income of individuals therefrom derived is liable to taxation.

MAULMAIN, Oct. 26.—According to promise, I carry on the thread of my narrative as to events that have occurred since the departure of last mail. As I mentioned in my hurriedly written note before the departure of the steamer, the Commissioner made a proposition to the Burmese to pay a lump sum for the year of Rs. 35,000. They replied by asking time to the 20th, to consider and consult among themselves if they could collect this amount. On the 20th it was reported that the leading men had accepted the proposition. Subsequent to this, however, a misunderstanding has arisen, and they are following the example of the natives, and now sending in their returns separately. To show you clearly the sweeping way in which the Commissioner intends to act, I copy a letter received from him by a friend of mine. It will show you clearly that his actions are in direct opposition to his promises as explained in his proclamation, "The poor man shall not pay." In this note he points out the whole male population, not even to the exclusion of a single poor man. I wonder if he will make the Government of India believe that we have no poor in this province. He is a pupil of Sir A. Bogle, and this gentleman did many funny things till the Government found him out: "My dear —, You will be glad to learn that I have just had a deputation of Burmese, Mungoon at their head; and, to judge from their appearance, have sent them away, their hearts glad, by telling them I would entertain a lump assessment in their favour of rupees (35,000) thirty-five thousand. There are about 10,500 adult males in all Maulmein, Talings, Shans, Tongthoos, to contribute to this assessment, so that the tax will come upon them at the rate of about three rupees a head. The proportion each man is to pay is to be entirely settled among themselves. Will you communicate this to as many of your native friends as you can?—Yours sincerely, (Signed) H. HOPKINSON, October 12th, 1860." This is the proposition made to a deputation that expressly wishes an exemption from a tax, and what is more to the purpose is, that this very proposition came from the deputation of the 9th of Oct., but was received with such violence and insult by the commissioner that nothing could be arranged. The deputation of the 12th was, in reality, no deputation at all, but merely a few of the commissioner's favourites. He refuses to receive those influential men appointed by the people, because they speak to him as a deputation ought; in fact, our military commissioner wishes, in the heaven of the old East India Company, to ride roughshod over the natives—"Perish fifty Moul-first place, it is a general complaint that they do not understand the forms, and here we must confess ourselves that they are by far too complicated for native use. Another, and still more serious objection, is the language in which the returns have to be made. The day before yesterday a wealthy native merchant of the town brought us the set of papers he had received in Persian, or Ordo, we don't know which—at all events in the Persian character—to ask us to enlighten him as to what he was to do in the matter. With the aid of an English form supplied to ourselves, we endeavoured, as well as we could, to explain the modus operandi, but, as we could see, pretty much in vain. When we came to part II., "Return of profits on trade or profession for the year ending, &c.," he became positively indignant. "What!" says the old gentleman, does the Sirkar wish me to expose the whole secrets of my trade to all Kurrachee?" We explained that any return he might make should be sent in sealed, when it would be sacred from all eyes but those of the assessor or collector, by whom alone the seal could be broken. This explanation, however, did not mend the matter. "Who is to fill up the return?" asked the Mahajun. "I do not write Persian, nor do any of my Moonims; if I trust the matter to a hired Moonishee, and make a true return, I shall have the state of my affairs canvassed all over the bazaar before sunset, as it is notorious that the class the Sirkar protects by using a character in its transactions, that the missionary Sahib invented, and that no one understands, are the greatest scoundrels in Kurrachee, and would sell their fathers." We then suggested that he should apply to the assessor and get a court Moonishee to fill up the schedule. "Worse and worse," says the Mahajun; "do you not know that all these fellows live beyond their pay, and some of them have become rich men? Any enemy of mine who wanted to get me into a little trouble could, without any sort of difficulty, get an exact copy of the return I had lodged, for a consideration, and might falsely accuse me of writing lies." We then advised him to resort to the compromise clause of the Act; and to apply to the collector on the subject.—Sindian.

LIEUT. EDWARD EVERETT, 78TH HIGHLANDERS.—The case of this officer will still, we dare say, be in the recollection of our readers. When submitted to Government, it called forth, as we said it would, the most severe censures from every member of council against the conduct of the police authorities, the noble minded Commander-in-Chief declaring it as his opinion that Captain Pirie's siding with the police under the circumstances rendered him unworthy of the position he held. Major Marston also came in for his quota of the displeasure of Government. These are hard lines certainly, but the truth must be told, and when esprit de corps leads gentlemen to forget their nationality, as also what is due to the honour of the profession they belong to, it is time, we think, they should be taught a lesson. In the opinion of Government, the entire case is a crying scandal, and so vivid is its impression, that the whole Council Board found it impossible to express their disapproval in language sufficiently strong. We hope the Commissioner in communicating the decision of Government to the parties concerned will not fail to show, as was really the case, that he sided with General Cunyngame in considering the outrage of the police on Lieutenant Everett and the subsequent conduct of its officers a dark blot on the fame of the corps. A copy of the whole proceedings should in justice be furnished to the 27th Highlanders, as a small reparation for the indignities heaped upon it in the person of one of its officers.—Sindian.

AURUNGABAD.—The following movements of troops on Aurungabad have been ordered:—The 3rd Native Light Cavalry, now stationed at Sholapore, will proceed to Ahmednuggur via Kurmulla, and the 8th Regiment N.I., from Sattara, via Neera Bridge, to Ahmednuggur. These two corps, together with the artillery with No. 18 Light Field Battery attached to the Company of Golundauze, with a division of the mountain train, will move from Ahmednuggur on Aurungabad on the 19th instant, where they are to form a part of the brigade about to be formed there. The 3rd Light Cavalry and 8th N.I. will respectively leave their stations en route to Ahmednuggur on Monday next, the 5th instant. The 6th Regiment N.I. from Malligaum, and its detachment from Nassick, will march on Aurungabad direct. The detachment of the 6th N.I. at Dhoolia will remain there for the present and relieve the 26th N.I., which in turn will be relieved by the 20th N.I. The families of the corps will follow them. We have not yet heard who is to command the newly formed brigade at Aurungabad, but it will most likely fall to the lot of Colonel Heath when he has been relieved of the Poona command by Colonel Buchanan, of the Royal Artillery, next month.

FEMALE EDUCATION AMONG THE PARSEES.—On the 1st June, 1860, there were 625 girls on the rolls of the four schools under the charge of the Parsee Girls' Schools Association. These schools are situated at Chundunwaddy, Mirza-street, Mazagon, and in the Fort, which last is attended by 400 girls. The Chundunwaddy school is satisfactorily conducted solely by girl monitors. The Cama family gave the best support to these schools in last year. At the third day's ceremony, on the death of the widow of Nusserwanjee Muncherjee Cama, and that of Dhunjeebhoy Nusserwanjee Cama, 2,000 Rs. and 10,000 Rs. respectively were subscribed in behalf of the Parsee Girls' schools. A Parsee lady, calling herself "a well-wisher of my little sisters," subscribed 2,240 Rs. through Mr. Sorabjee Shapoorjee, assistant broker to Messrs. Graham and Co. From the proceeds of these sums, scholarships, prizes, and gold medals were distributed at the last annual exhibition of the schools. The poet Narmadashunker has been engaged by the Association to teach the girls Gujaratee music.

CASTE UNDONE.—There were three defendants of the sweeper caste in a case heard lately before Dr. Reid, at the Small Cause Court; but being considered to be the outcasts of native society, were made to stand in a sequestered corner, and not in the place where defendants generally appear in the court. The first impression on the mind of the learned judge was rather one of surprise to see them treated so extra-judicially, but very soon he apprehended the real state of matters, and ordered that, in a court of justice like this, there should be no distinction between persons of whatever caste, colour, or creed; and the three sweeper defendants were accordingly seen in the place where all defendants usually appear. There was a slight discontent apparent on the faces of the native suitors present in court; eyes were strained for a while; and low murmurs expressed the dissatisfaction felt at the new-fangled privilege granted the sweepers. But the majesty of law triumphed, even though for a few minutes, over the tyranny of caste.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—The railway from Surat to Broach (i.e. as far as the southern bank of the Nerbudda) was to be opened for public traffic on the 15th Nov. The works for the present abandoned or suspended on the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway are those on the line from Bombay to Bulsar, and from Baroda to Ahmedabad. The works on the intermediate line (Bulsar to Baroda) will be continued. Government allowed three lacs of rupees per month for railway expenditure; but they have now curtailed it to one lac and a half, according to the instructions received from the Supreme Government.

THE MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS of Bombay have for some time past, in consequence of their unseemly squabbles with each other, attracted a good deal of unpleasant attention. For the benefit of distant readers we may explain that the Commission consists of three persons—a President, who is appointed by Government, and two Members, who are elected by the Justices of the Peace. The two elected members belong respectively to the East Indian and Parsee community. They combined together against the President, and being thus in a majority, the latter was outvoted on all occasions. The first occasion on which they showed their hostility to the President was on the question as to whether all the proceedings of the Commission and their meetings should be open to the press. The majority decided that they should. The next occasion was as to the time of meeting for the transaction of business. The President contended that the meetings ought to be held in business hours, but as the Native Commissioner is also an Interpreter in the Supreme Court, he could not attend in business hours. Consequently the majority voted that the proper time for meeting was when it suited their own convenience, which happened to be five o'clock, and the result was that the President used to attend at three p.m., and the other Commissioners at five p.m., in this way of course never constituting a full board. All these squabbles were carried on in writing, that is to say by "minutes," and it seems that the East Indian Commissioner was also in the habit of "making comments in pencil on his colleagues' memoranda," which practice Government observes "is not only in extreme bad taste, but very offensive." At length matters became so bad that the President called on Government to interfere, and the words we have quoted above are from the resolution which has been passed on the subject. The municipal commissioners and their clerk have been warned that if any more "unseemly discussions" came before Government, or if the interests of the community in Bombay suffer from their prevalence the Supreme Government will be applied to for the purpose of abolishing a board, "the members of which are found to be occupied with their private feuds and recriminations, instead of with those public duties, a steady and assiduous attention to which on the part of its members was the object intended to be secured by its institution."—Athenæum.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—The 1st Bombay European regiment (fusiliers) left that station for Poona on the morning of Monday last, the 12th Nov. They will march through Kolapore and Sattara.—No. 10 light field battery of artillery, now stationed at Sattara, has been ordered to proceed to Belgaum. There will then be only a company of H.M.'s 56th regiment and the Sattara local corps left to guard the station.—The head quarters of H.M.'s 56th regiment, now stationed at Poona, have been ordered to proceed to Bombay on the arrival of the 1st fusiliers, and will leave Poona on or about the 5th Dec.—The detachment of H.M.'s 72nd highlanders at present stationed at Khandalla will, along with their families, proceed to Malligaum on the 15th Nov., en route to Mhow. We understand that this detachment will remain at Malligaum until the line of march from thence to Mhow is reported to be free from the jungle fever, which prevails at this season.—The detachment of H.M.'s 83rd regiment, consisting of one commissioned officer and 74 men, now attached to the general depot at Khandalla, has been ordered to proceed to Belgaum, on the 16th, from Poona, via Sattara and Kolapore.—The squadron of H.M.'s 3rd dragoon guards at Ahmednuggur left that station for Poona on the 14th, and will arrive here on the 10th. They will be quartered at Ghorpooree along with the other squadron now there.—The head quarters of the artillery brigade now stationed at Wanowree (Poona) will move from thence to Kirkee on the 27th, where they will in future be permanently quartered.—The movements of H.M.'s 6th (Inniskilling) dragoons and the 4th troop of horse artillery, the former from Kirkee and the latter from Poona, will take place in the following manner, in supercession of our previous announcement:—The 1st and 2nd squadrons of the dragoons will leave Kirkee for Ahmednuggur on the 20th, and the 3rd and 4th squadrons on the following day. The sick will follow immediately after the departure of the squadrons as above. The 4th troop of horse artillery, with the whole of the sick, will leave Poona for Ahmednuggur on Friday, the 23rd.—There is to be a distribution of a number of the men attached to the 1st and 2nd battalions of artillery at Ahmednuggur amongst the several batteries at out-stations, to complete their strength.—H.M.'s 8th regiment N.I., from Sattara, were at Neera Bridge on Monday last, and left that place for Ahmednuggur on the 13th.—We are informed that the squadron of the 3rd dragoon guards at Ahmednuggur will leave that place this morning for Poona, where another squadron of the regiment, under the command of Captain Macfarlane, has been stationed for some months past.—Poona Observer, Nov. 14.

AHMEDNUGGUR, Nov. 3.—The Commandant of Artillery arrived here on Thursday morning, and is playing the mischief with the brigade, sending off the 2nd company 3rd battalion Artillery to Aurangabad, accompanied by a division of the Mountain Train; another division is ordered to Jacobabad. The head quarters 1st and 2nd battalion go to Kirkee, their place being taken up by the 6th Inniskillen Dragoons, a squadron 3rd or Prince of Wales's Dragoon Guards, and 4th Ruxton Horse Artillery. The right wing of H. M.'s 56th Regiment march on Poona on Tuesday morning, whence with the head quarters they will start to Kurrachee to relieve the 64th, in orders to embark for New Zealand. The new barracks, just finished, are now "To be let," unfurnished, of course, and the plunge bath still under construction will be completed with pontoons for the instruction of cavalry. A company of the 56th remains here to protect the fort until arrangements are completed for its disposal, the idea of removing it to Kirkee having been abandoned for the present, owing to the low state of our exchequer. The Commander-in-Chief will be here on the 8th with the Adjutant and Quarter-master General, and will proceed, accompanied by the Artillery, the 3rd Light Cavalry and 8th N. I., to take formal possession of Aurangabad. No orders for the march of the 22nd Regiment N. I. have as yet been received; they also go to Aurangabad. The siege train under Captain Stone will move off about the 18th instant. Mr. Showell, our Income-tax commissioner, and Mr. Tytler, our respected collector, arrived in the early part of the week.

POPULAR DISCONTENT.—If the Government do not keep its eyes open, and be prepared to act with energy, it will soon find itself face to face with a more powerful foe than even insurgent rebels—the passive, sullen, opposition of a whole nation. The near approach of the time when the Income-tax must be paid has caused a renewal of the agitation against the tax. In the bazaar here the regular order of things is quite upset. Yesterday it was impossible for European merchants to sell a piece of cloth at any price, and the native dealers will soon follow suit. There is no acknowledged combination among the natives, but a mutual understanding exists that they will simply clear off their present stocks, and then shut up shop. We may add, that this abstinence from business merely corresponds with the state of things up country, no orders, or next to none, having been received from the Mofussil for some time.—Bombay Gazette.

MAJOR MARTIN, of the 4th (King's Own) Regiment, who arrived from Aden by the last mail, is under orders to proceed to Ahmedabad, where the head-quarters of his regiment are stationed, to appear before a court-martial upon certain charges springing out of a dispute between the colonel of the corps and the mess of the wing at Aden. The public exchequer ought to be flush of money to warrant the outlay entailed upon it by proceedings which, if rumour is well informed, might have been, and should have been, terminated by a reference to the Commander-in-Chief. It may transpire, however, that a principle is involved in the dispute of sufficient importance to necessitate the trial. The public will be spared the scandal of any very startling revelations, as the charges, we believe, do not affect in any way the honour or character of Major Martin, but simply have reference to a question of jurisdiction and the subordination of the mess of the wing to the discretion of the commanding officer. It is not improbable that the case may possess some interest for our military readers, but promises little, we believe, for the general public.—Bombay Times.

CHINA.

HONG-KONG, Oct. 29.—The London mail of Sept. 10 arrived here on the 20th October.

The intelligence from the seat of war is of the highest importance. Two of the gates of Pekin are in our hands. Mr. Harry Parkes and Mr. Loch have been safely returned to us by the Chinese. The army of Sang-ko-lin-sin is still in the field. The Emperor is rumoured to have fled to Tartary. Pekin has submitted to us. The wintering of the whole force either there or at Tien-tsin is now resolved on, and we have entered on a new stage of this quarrel.

In our last Overland we mentioned that the allied army was in a hostile attitude, seven or eight miles from Pekin, waiting for the siege guns, and demanding the release of the captives who had been taken. There does not seem to have been any change in the position of matters from the 22nd of September till the 3rd of October, when an advance was made in search of the Tartar army, which only resulted in a few pickets of the enemy being seen and driven back. On the 6th a further advance resulted in an earthwork near Pekin, where no defence was made, being taken by our troops; and the Yueng-min-yuen, or Summer Palace of the Emperor, was taken and completely looted, affording immense spoil. The chief share of the plunder appears to have fallen to the French, who had the first ransacking of the rich ornaments, jewels, and clocks and watches, the rich robes and embroidered silks, of the Son of Heaven; but a quantity of treasure which was taken is to be divided between both French and English. Some privates are said to have sold their shares for about 30,000 francs. The entire British share, including both treasure and private loot, is estimated at about 90,000 dollars. Next day, in reply to a demand for the release of the prisoners, Messrs. Parkes and Loch were given up, together with a French officer and seven or eight privates. Later letters than those we have received bring unfavourable accounts in regard to the other prisoners, but they do not appear to speak with authority, nor do we attach much importance to them.

On the 12th everything was prepared for the first great event of the war—the assault on the occupation of Pekin—the unviolated capital of China. The siege guns and other artillery were in a position to bombard the town, unless it should be surrendered by noon of the 13th; and the following general order was issued by Sir Hope Grant for the disposition and control of the force under his command:—

GENERAL ORDER.

Head Quarters before Pekin, Oct. 12.

One regiment, to be detailed by the first division, will proceed to the Temple of Earth this afternoon, and be there quartered.

The deputy quartermaster general will make the necessary arrangements.

All the live cattle belonging to the commissariat will be driven to the same place to-morrow morning early, and kept there until further orders.

The whole of the troops will be furnished to-morrow with two days' rations, cooked, and be held in readiness to turn out at a moment's notice.

The cavalry brigade will detail one squadron to patrol in the neighbourhood of the camp to-morrow; they will move off at 9 A.M., and act according to instructions, which they will receive later in the day.

The whole of the artillery will be placed at the disposal of Brigadier-general Crofton until further orders.

In the event of an attack upon Pekin being ordered, the following directions will be observed:—

As soon as the officer commanding the Royal Engineers reports that a practicable breach has been effected in the city wall, it will be stormed by the Second Division. Major-general Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., will be pleased to make the necessary dispositions. As soon as the wall has been gained the storming party will turn to the right, keeping along the ramparts, and seize the An-tung gate. This post being gained, the Engineers and Sappers, who should follow the supporting column, will proceed at once to open the gate below.

This post will then be placed in a state of defence with the least possible delay, and be held by a garrison of such strength as may be necessary.

H.E. most positively forbids any officer or soldier, under any pretext whatever, to quit the gate or ramparts, or enter any street or house, without his express permission, conveyed through the Deputy-Adjutant-General, or that of the Major-general commanding the division, and he cannot too strongly impress upon the troops the necessity of their restraining from straggling, and of keeping in as compact order as possible, not only for their own individual safety, but for the more complete efficiency of the whole force.

H.E. takes this opportunity of expressing to the soldiers the satisfaction he felt at their conduct on a late occasion, when a large amount of plunder was at the mercy of the troops. No crime has been brought to H.E.'s notice, and the discipline of the army remains intact.

H.E. has ordered all property collected by officers on this occasion to be sold for the just benefit of all ranks, and he wishes them to bear in mind that he has taken upon himself a serious responsibility in appropriating to their benefit the treasure which was found in the Emperor's palace, and which by right belongs to the Crown.

The troops are now about to occupy the Imperial city of Peking, where they will be exposed to many and more serious temptations, and H.E. trusts that the boon just conferred upon them will act as an additional inducement to them to preserve their uniform good conduct, and prove to them that they best consult their own interest in maintaining it.

By order,
F. STEPHENSON, Deputy-adjt.-genl.

Just immediately before the period given for surrender would expire, Hang-chu came out and said that our demands were acceded to, no resistance would be made, and the gate was at our disposal. Thereon the outer and inner gates were immediately taken possession of, and a portion of the allied force was quartered on the wall of Peking.

What arrangements will now be come to, and with whom the treaty will be made, are matters of conjecture. It was reported that the Emperor had fled to his Palace of Jehol, in Tartary, that Tartars were threatening our communication with Tien-tsin, and that Sir Hope Grant intended, in any circumstances, to return to Tien-tsin in a fortnight, in order to make preparations for wintering there. There is nothing unlikely about these reports, and, should they turn out to be correct, the expedition will not only have to winter in the north, but may have to take new fortifications, to enter on new campaigns, and to be involved in new diplomatic difficulties.

The Earl of Elgin and Baron Gros are at the military head-quarters; but, as Mr. Bruce has been sent for, it is possible that his Lordship does not propose to spend the winter in the north. Mr. Bruce, however, was sent for before, after the occupation of Tien-tsin. Count Ignatieff, the Russian Minister, followed the allies to Tien-tsin, where we believe he is still. Mr. Ward, the American Minister, came down here the other day on his way home.

There have been rumours published at Shanghai of the outbreak of a new rebellion (in no way connected with that of the Tai-pings) in the province of Shen-si, which lies to the west of that where Peking is. This, if true, would be of great importance, as placing the Emperor in a worse position than ever; but the reports have the appearance of merely an insignificant local outbreak. Of the Tai-ping rebels we hear little at present. They are reported to have appeared before Hang-chow lately, but to have moved off on finding it well garrisoned.

From Ningpo we learn that the insurgent movement in the neighbourhood of Shanghai has considerably increased the tea and silk trade at the former port. Should the approaches to Shanghai be blocked up by the same cause for any length of time, that may possibly be the means of diverting a considerable amount of the trade of that port to Ningpo, particularly as both the tea and silk districts are nearer to Ningpo than to Shanghai, and there is an easier internal communication with the former.

At Swatow a local difficulty is causing trouble. The gunboat Heasel proceeded to bombard a village, alleged to be connected with some acts of robbery committed on the property of foreigners resident at Swatow. After the firing had been kept up for about two hours, the master of the gunboat landed to see how matters were getting on, and fell into the hands of the enraged villagers. These latter treated the captives well, but declared that if any further proceeding were taken they would put them to death. Lao, the Governor-general of Kwang-tung, has been appealed to in their favour, and has sent up a proclamation requiring their release.

At Canton the Shamen site is being rapidly prepared for building; and there appears no indication of any attempt on the part of the Chinese to make a diversion in that quarter.

Dr. Winchester, the acting consul, goes home, and his place is now filled by Mr. Robertson, the Canton consul.

In Hong Kong the great event of the fortnight has been the visit of the Japanese ambassadors in the magnificent steam vessel Niagara. They and their suite have availed themselves of their stay at Hong Kong to make minute inquiries into various institutions of the place.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Nov. 16.—The fortnight which has elapsed since our last despatch has been generally dry with a keen wind—more favourable to coffee drying than to health. Two vessels have sailed for London with 8,823 cwt. plantation and 1,097 native—together 10,880. A vessel has also sailed for Melbourne, taking 3,236 cwt. plantation and 986 native—aggregate, 4,222. Our total exports for the fortnight are 12,059 plantation and 2,983 native—together 15,042. The exports of plantation are nearly 4,000 cwt. in excess; of native, about 1,000 less, than in the corresponding period last season.

Our advices from the interior are rather more encouraging than previously, and one gentleman, largely interested in plantations, has told us he is ready to stake his credit on a total out-turn of 555,000 cwt., or even 600,000. Time will show, but there can be no doubt that the late abundant rains have saved a good deal of crop which had been given up for lost.

The despatch of crops to Colombo has been a good deal hindered; first by the late floods, and then by a panic amongst the cartmen, in consequence of the existence of cholera in the interior.

We cannot say that the health of the country is good—cholera in some places, and fever in many, prevail. We are glad to say that our Governor, for whose health at one time serious anxiety was felt, is now so far recovered as to be able to attend to business. He has before him the opinion of the Chamber of Commerce on the railway question, but the planters have not yet spoken decidedly. There can be no doubt, however, that the general feeling would express itself in the following terms:—"Pay off the company, and if, without further taxation you can also go on with a railway, which will cost only £1,500,000—go on with it." We hope, ere next mail leaves the Island, to be able to report the adoption of some decisive course on the subject.

The new commander of the forces has arrived and taken his place in council, and we believe that at next sitting the merchants will be represented by Mr. J. Murray Robertson. Railway or no railway—and even with rather a distant prospect of more roads, it is evident that confidence in Ceylon coffee land as an investment remains unshaken. Our latest task has been to record a successful sale of Happottella lands, realising nearly £4,000. This sale brings up the revenue from this source to over £41,000, and renders it pretty certain that £45,000 will be attained before the close of 1860.

The great Rajawella case has been decided by the Supreme Court, as far we believe, as that tribunal can decide it. Instead of £45,000 mesne profits, claimed by the plaintiffs for the last seven years, only £20,000 were awarded. Mr. D. B. Lindsay is back in Ceylon. We need scarcely repeat that we have not and never had a hostile feeling towards the family he represents—quite the contrary. But we must adhere to our opinion that, in equity, the case of the ousted parties is a very hard one.

Christian society in Colombo has lost one of its chief ornaments by a most lamentable accident. We allude to the death of the Rev. H. Whitley, of the Church Mission, who was killed on Saturday last by the falling on him of a wall. The universal feeling is that few men ever received a call so sudden, who were so ready for it. Earnest and active in the duties of his own immediate charge, he fraternised in the most cordial spirit with Christians of all denominations, and is mourned by all. The large attendance at the funeral shewed the estimation in which the deceased was held. Amongst the mourners were the members of the Executive Council, and other leading members of society. By rich and poor alike was the deceased missionary esteemed.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Oct. 1.—News was this day received by the Ameer from Bookhara, to the effect that the king of that place having summoned the chiefs of Samurkund, Meeonai Kule, Kurshe, Kurrah Kule, and other places, had paid them their dues, and had directed them to keep themselves with their different troops ready to march at a moment's notice. The king was also busy in inspecting and paying off the arrears of his own troops in Bookhara, without letting any one know his intention of warlike preparations.—Oct. 2.—The Ameer having been informed that Shere Allee Khan's battalion, which was encamped at Dai-poorie on their way to Toorkistan, was called back to Cabool, sent for Shere Allee Khan and thus spoke to him in the durbar: "All you brothers are creating quarrels amongst yourselves while I am living, and seeing everything done myself, what will you do after I am dead and gone?" As the Ameer looked very angry, Shere Allee Khan did not even open his lips, and remained quiet, with down-cast eyes. The battalion is now encamped under the Balahissar.—Oct. 3.—Sirdar Mahomed Uzul Khan's letter was received from Toorkistan, in which he informed the Ameer that he had sent his man to Bookhara with three hundred teelas (a coin), for the purchase of copper and brass for the purpose of casting some new guns. The man was sent for by the King of Bookhara and questioned what he was buying such a quantity of the metals for. On the person's explaining the truth, that he was doing so for casting guns, the King remarked, "When Sirdar Uzul Khan was a friend of his (the King), what was the use of his sending a man privately to make such purchases; why did he not write direct to the King that he wanted such and such things from Bookhara?" Saying this, the King of Bookhara ordered that no such metals were to be sold to anyone belonging to a foreign place, and a proclamation was made in the city that if anyone bought and took any quantity of copper or brass beyond the Hamoon he would be severely punished. The man said Mahomed Uzul Khan had come back to Toorkistan without any copper and brass.—Oct. 4.—The ambassador of the King of Bookhara attended the durbar to-day and delivered the letter from his master to the Ameer. The following are the contents of the letter:—"Agreeably to the treaty made out between the two Powers, I, the King of Bokhara, have kept my word and have shown myself a firm and true ally, while, on the other hand, Mahomed Uzul Khan and Mahomed Auzim Khan have proved themselves quite the contrary, for in the last cold weather I, with only two thousand troops, went towards the boundary of my country, on which Uzul Khan sent his family to Cabool, and made all warlike preparations; not only this, but Mahomed Auzim Khan placed the guns on the bank of the river and commenced firing at my camp. My chief object (continued the King in his letter,) in sending the ambassador with this letter, is to inquire from the Ameer whether he wished to keep up friendship with the King, and if so, he wished him (the Ameer) to fall out and give up his alliance with the infidels (the English), and then like two brothers they would always consult with each other on all points of difference." The Ameer having perused the letter, remained quiet and kept the letter by him. No answer to the letter has as yet been written, and the ambassador is every day supplied with a ready-made breakfast and dinner from the Ameer's cook-room.—Oct. 5.—Eeshan Suddoor and Eeshan Oorak, the late Hakims of Bulk, who are now hostages with the Ameer, attended the durbar, and informed the Ameer that the ambassador of the King of Bookhara was related to them, and that they wished to invite him. On their begging the Ameer to allow them to do so, the Ameer told them that he had no objection. The mullicks of Kohistan, who had formerly promised to take the different places in Kohistan on contract, waited on the Ameer and offered the following sums as an addition to the last year's jumma:—For Goolbahar, 1,300 rupees; Jumal Augho, 200; Khawashee, 300 rupees. The Ameer agreed to the terms, and ordered a man to go and survey the places.—Oct. 6.—The following interesting news was this day received by the Ameer from Toorkistan:—"It has been given out that an army of about one hundred thousand Russian troops of all arms, with three years' supplies, is assembled at Agha Musjid, and that about twenty thousand of the troops have marched from Agha Musjid, and are encamped in the fort of Laheewan Autee. This fort is said to be two marches from Agha Musjid, and being now in possession of the Russians, is put in repair and strong defences are going to be built. The Russians intend to march on Kokan via Indee Khan. The King of Kokan having been informed of the Russians' intentions, wrote to the King of Bookhara that Indee Khan was not very far from Kokan, and no sooner would the Russians appear at Indee Khan, than they would take Kokan, and he requested the King to send some troops as soon as possible. The King of Bookhara said in reply that he would shortly leave for Summurkund, where if the King of Kokan would come, he would make every arrangement to check the movement of the Russian troops. To this the King of Kokan would not agree, fearing that if he went to Summurkund he would be made prisoner by the King of Bookhara. The King of Bookhara, it is given out, had written to the Hakim of Agha Musjid that as it had been agreed by the two States that no Russian troops should ever march through or towards Toorkistan without the consent of the King of Bookhara, and as he was told that the Russians were marching on Kokan, he (the King of Bookhara) would be obliged by his explaining the fact. The Hakim of Agha Musjid said in reply that Kokan did not belong to Bookhara, and as the King of Kokan had sent his vakeel to Hindoostan to the British to ask their aid against the Russians, it is very just and right that the Russians should take Kokan. If Kokan was under Bookhara why did the King of that place allow the vakeel to go to the British, who are enemies to the Russians? If the King of Bookhara still took the King of Kokan as one of his allies, he had better send his troops and take possession of the place, and then the Russians would think no more of it." The above news made the Ameer look very dull.—Oct. 7.—A native of Chundole who had stolen some property in Cabool about seven years ago, and who since then had disappeared, was caught and brought before the Ameer to day. On his being asked whether he had committed the theft, he denied having done any such thing. His mother being asked if she had any stolen property in her house, she pointed out the whole, in the hopes that her son would be released. Seven mule loads of property and thirty seers of copper were taken out of her house. The thief was ordered to be hanged.—Oct. 8.—A sepoy of Shere Allee Khan's battalion, who once deserted from the regiment, and had a few days since been again enlisted, made a row in a cabooler's house to day. He wounded one or two men, when he was caught and taken before the Ameer. The Ameer, after inquiring into the case, ordered him to be blown up from a gun. Sickness is prevalent in Cabool, which is very fatal to children.—Delhi Gazette.

DECORATION FOR RIFLE PRACTICE.

Hd. Qrs., Calcutta, Oct. 18.—The rifle practice of the season being about to commence, H.E. the C. in C. desires to impress upon the soldiers of H.M.'s British regiments in India the necessity of gaining a thorough knowledge of their weapon and accuracy in its use, and he trusts they will show by their practice that they are not to be outdone by their comrades at home.

Sir Hugh Rose calls upon officers commanding divisions, brigades, and regiments to give a cordial assistance to district and regimental instructors in the performance of their responsible duties, and which will be greatly aided by a constant personal attendance at the practice.

H.E. will give a decoration to the soldier who shall in the practice exhibit the greatest proficiency.

Court Martial.

BREV. CAPT. H. B. BLAKE, 3RD BENGAL EUROPEAN INFANTRY.

Adj. Gen's Office, Simla, Oct. 20.—At a General Court Martial, assembled at Agra on Aug. 15, Lieut. and Brev. Capt. Henry Benjamin Blake, H.M.'s 3rd regt. Bengal Eur. Inf., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With disgraceful conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Futtelghur, sometime between March 25 and May 5, 1860, fraudulently misapplied to his own use the sum of Rs. 606-4-3 (six hundred and six rupees four annas and three pie), or thereabouts, being public money entrusted to him for the payment of men of his company.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—To be dismissed from H.M.'s service.

Recommendation.—The Court begs to recommend the prisoner, Lieut. and Brev. Capt. H. B. Blake, of H.M.'s 3rd regt. Bengal Eur. Inf., to the merciful consideration of H.E. the C. in C., on the following grounds:—

1. That the prisoner has repaid the amount deficient, and had he only done so a very little sooner than he did, he would not have been brought to trial at all.

2. That the prisoner was but a short time since mentioned for conspicuous bravery in action against the enemy.

Approved and confirmed,
(Signed) HUGH ROSE, Gen.,
C. in C. in India.

Barrackpore, Sept. 24, 1860.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The C. in C. regrets that he is unable to attend to the recommendation of the Court in favour of the prisoner. But it is impossible that H.E. can allow an officer to return to the society of his brother officers, and to the command of a company, who has been found guilty of "disgraceful conduct in having fraudulently misapplied to his own use public money entrusted to him for the payment of the men of his company."

The name of Brev. Capt. Blake will be struck off the rolls of the 3rd Eur. Inf. from the date of promulgation of this order at Futtelghur, and a report of the same is to be made to the deputy adj. gen. of the army, at the presidency.

The 6th Bengal European Regiment.

The following letter from the Adj. gen. of the army is published for general information:—

No. 2,609.—Adj. Gen's Office, Oct. 19.—Sir,—I am desired by the C. in C. to convey to you, for communication to the officers and men of H.M.'s 6th regt., B.E.I., the expression of Sir Hugh Rose's satisfaction with the appearance and bearing under arms of this young corps on the occasion of the parade in Fort William on Saturday last.

2. With only a few exceptions, the men are well set up, and present a soldierly appearance, and the steady manner in which they performed the manoeuvres afford evidence of the care and attention with which they have been grounded in their drill.

3. H.E. was much pleased to witness the proficiency and intelligence of the young officers, especially in the case of Lieut. H. M. Evans.

4. The C. in C. has perused with great satisfaction the testimonial spontaneously given by the civil authority of Hazareebagh, according to the regiment an excellent character for its conduct whilst located in that district.

5. This document furnished proof that the 6th infantry, under their zealous and efficient commanding officer, Major W. Birch, possesses one of the best qualifications of soldiers, viz.:—

Discipline and orderly conduct in quarters, and to the end that the good name this corps has gained may be generally made known.

H.E. desires that the magistrate's testimonial may be published in division orders.

6. I am at the same time to beg you will cause to be expressed to Maj. F. T. Wroughton, the second in command, Sir Hugh Rose's satisfaction with the manner in which he discharged his duties in command of the regiment last year; and this officer is to be informed that H.E. will take an early opportunity to give further proof of his satisfaction with his conduct.

7. With advertence to the complaints of the men of the 6th regt., that their claims of long standing for refreshment money and ship clearance have not yet been settled, I am desired you will cause it to be explained that, under the orders of the C. in C., steps have been taken to effect a speedy adjustment of their claims.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) W. MAYHEW, Col.,
Adj. gen. of the army.

To the Officer Comdg. the Presidency Division.

Petitions on Unstamped Paper.

Judicial Dept., Camp Nynce Tal, Oct. 10.—It has been brought to the notice of Govt., that commanding officers of the military police are in the habit of forwarding to the district authorities petitions presented by their men on unstamped paper, and under their frank, as on the public service.

Persons, whether officers or men, belonging to the military police, are not exempt from the obligation to engross such petitions as they may have to present on stamped paper of the required value, and all magistrates and collectors and other officers of the Govt. are hereby directed, on receiving such petitions, to return them to the sender, with an intimation that no such petitions can be attended to unless engrossed on stamped paper of the required value.

If any such petitions should be received by any magistrate or collector or other officer of the Govt. under the frank of an officer of the military police, as "On H.M.'s Service," it will be the duty of such magistrate or collector to transmit the cover to the Postmaster-general, North-Western Provinces, in order that steps may be taken at once to recover from the sender the penalty which the Post-office Act No. XVII. of 1854 attaches to this abuse of a privilege conceded to the officers of the Govt. for the furtherance of the public service.

The late Mutiny.—Passage Money to Officers' Families.

Mil. Dept., Fort William, Oct. 29.—No. 1,068 of 1860.—The following paragraphs of a mil. letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 255 of July 16, 1860, are published for general information:—

	Allowance to be made	DEDUCTION FOR TABLE MONEY.

NOTE.—Children under one year of age are taken out without charge.

Para. 15. It has been decided that the families of officers who were prevented from accompanying them to India during the mutiny, either by special prohibition or by want of cabin accommodation on board ship, should receive assistance towards their passage to India on the scale specified.

16. It is desirable, however, that all claims of this nature should be referred for my disposal in communication with the qmr. gen.'s dept.

Contract Passages for Officers.

No. 1,050.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to make the following appointment:—

Maj. J. T. Walker, Bombay engs., first asst., to be astronomical asst., great trigonometrical survey of India.

No. 1,051.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 337, of the 14th ult., are published for general information:—

I have lately expressed to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty a wish that the Admiralty agents at the respective Presidencies should receive instructions to provide the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces returning to this country with contract passages when required to do so by competent authority. Their lordships have been pleased to comply with this request, and have instructed the senior officer of H.M.'s ships and vessels on the East India station accordingly.

2. The number of passages at the contract rate which can be ordered by any one packet is at present limited to eight, for officers of the army and navy combined.

3. You will direct application to be made to the Admiralty agents for contract passages to the authorised extent for officers of both Her Majesty's British and Indian forces, when returning home under circumstances entitling them to free passages, instead of issuing to them the established rate of passage allowance.

4. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have also promised that, in the event of a modification or renewal of the contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Navigation Company for the conveyance of the mails, an opportunity will be taken to provide for the accommodation of an additional number of officers and soldiers at the contract rates.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen.,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

WAR OFFICE.

CHANGES, PROMOTIONS, &c., IN H.M.'s REGIMENTS SERVING IN INDIA. Dec. 11.

Royal Artillery.—Sec. capt. C. P. Rotton to be capt., v. Bayly, rem. to the supern. list; Lieut. W. J. Hall to be sec. capt., v. Rotton; Sec. capt. B. F. Schreiber to be a'jt., v. Rotton, prom; Nov. 27.

Royal Engineers.—Lieut. G. Le B. Simmons, with temp. rank, to be lieut., with permanent rank; June 22.

MAJOR ALEXANDER CARNEGY.—The following eulogistic "Station Order" was issued by Major-general Cunynghame, on the 19th Oct.:—"The division has been deprived of the services of a much esteemed officer. The Major-general parts with Major Carnegy with great regret; he has found him very zealous and efficient in the position in which his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief had placed him, the duties of which required peculiar tact. The camp displays a proof of his energy. In the more responsible duties to which his services have so justly entitled him, the Major-general sees an assurance of his future successes."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, December 15, 1860.

EQUAL BEFORE THE LAW.

HER Majesty's Government decidedly object to "any legislative exemption of particular classes from the operation of laws applicable to the rest of the inhabitants of India." Her Majesty's Government entertain this objection because they know nothing whatever of India or its inhabitants. In that country the position of the Europeans is altogether exceptional. If they are not there by right of conquest, they are simply intruders, whom the natives tolerate and utilise. The latter alternative is absurd. It is as haughty conquerors that we are established in Hindostan, and it is only by maintaining that character that we can hold our position. It was well said by an ancient writer that a military supremacy can only be preserved by the exercise of the same principles, the same virtues and high qualities by which it was originally acquired. True everywhere, that dictum is emphatically true with regard to our position in India. By the sword we subdued that empire, and by the sword we hold it, and on the day we return the sword to the scabbard we shall lose it. It is very fine and plausible to talk of equal legislation—but why, then, not attempt it at home? Why are the Irish in Ireland not permitted to enrol themselves as volunteers? Why are they kept under control by an armed constabulary, that in fact constitute an army of occupation? The answer is obvious—because we still hold Ireland, in a great measure, by the sword. Every Englishman in India is a conqueror; he is, no matter how humble his calling, one of the rulers and masters of that country. As an Englishman he is superior to the greatest Rajah that acknowledges the suzerainty of England. Instead of levelling their countrymen even below the natives of India, our legislators should rather honour them by special marks of distinction. Instead of being compelled to take out a license to carry arms, under pain of being stopped and taken into custody by any local officer who may affect to entertain suspicions of their loyalty, they should be invited to carry at least a sword as a token that they are settlers militant, ready at a moment's notice to march to battle with the regular troops, and do their duty as sons of the conquering race. The time will possibly arrive when the natives, by long years of training and culture, shall have learned the art of self-government. When that hour strikes the conquerors will magnanimously retire from a land where they can no longer remain, save as tyrants. Then, indeed, there may be equal legislation for all classes and creeds, and colours—then, but not till then. If her Majesty's ministers, however, propose to transplant to the East their empirical and doctrinaire notions of Government, they may make up their mind to a forcible ejection from that country at no very distant date, and they will further have the miserable satisfaction of reflecting that that disaster was brought about by their own ignorance, hastiness, and obstinacy. But of all the cants ever canted in this canting world, the very worst so far as India is concerned is this cant of "Equality before the Law."

A COURT MARTIAL A LA DEBARDEUR.

IF M. Boniface be accurate in his definition of débardeur, that word exactly corresponds to our English "lighterman." The idea, however, is not poetical, nor would the costume be considered sufficiently picturesque for a bal masqué. Playful fancy, therefore, is enlisted in the service of pleasure, and a sprightly nondescript garb converts a frail beauty into the becoming representative of a sturdy and weather-beaten bargee. Very much after this fashion is the transformation of a sedate and formal Court Martial into a Court of Love in the old Provençal style. A metamorphosis of this nature, strange as it may seem, has lately been exhibited in that land of wonders, the North-Western Provinces of India. The wizard whose magic wand produced these startling effects appears to have been Major-general Sir Robert Garrett, K.C.B., of whose manner of legerdemain the British public beheld a remarkable example in the case of the 45th Regiment when stationed at Windsor. It is no part of our present intention, however, to rake up old stories, there being quite matter enough in the Umballa Court Martial to answer the purpose we have in view.

About the end of June, or in the early part of July, 1860, Captain John Urquhart, paymaster of H.M.'s 27th Regiment of Foot, being seized with a violent attack of Cacoethes scribendi, not only wrote, but even went to the expense of printing certain doggerel lines, by no means complimentary to the state of society at Simla. These verses, to which our gallant poetaster modestly alluded in his defence as "a little poem," are probably the worst effusion of the kind, from a poetic point of view, that ever appeared even in the columns of an Indian newspaper. That they do not rhyme—unless "club-steps" be consonant with "mis-haps," "libel" with "table," and "plate" with "seat,"—is their least fault. In fact, they are simply dull, pointless, jingling doggerel, neither facetious nor satirical, and quite unworthy of the slightest notice. To have written them would be in itself a sufficient punishment for any crime short of arson or murder. Captain Urquhart at the time thought otherwise, and in a moment of utter infatuation took the trouble to circulate copies of this trash not only among his own intimate friends, but also among the ladies and gentlemen who are described as constituting "society at Simla." Not content with his "poetical epistle," he was further impelled to cap that supreme effort of folly with a prefatory letter in prose addressed to the members of the Simla Club, and professing to explain how the accompanying lines, supposed to have been written at Julunder in the course of the last century, came into his possession. This explanation turns upon the not very original device of "a small fragment of antique doggerel" being found wrapt round a red herring, served up for his breakfast—the first time, by the way, we ever heard of that fish being served up in paper. The signature "Catius" is affixed to this choice performance, as Captain Urquhart in the first instance resolved upon preserving an incognito. The burden of the rhymes—so to speak—is the lax morality that prevails at Simla; the ladies being charged with drinking and flirting to excess, and the gentlemen with doing the same with "aggravating circumstances." There can be no doubt that this effusion, which its author misnames a jeu d'esprit, is not only destitute of a spark of wit or humour, but is also marked by the absence of good taste and proper feeling, and would have justified Captain Urquhart's acquaintances in giving that gentleman a very wide berth for the future. But it was certainly not a subject for the exercise of military law. There was no infringement of discipline, no departure from the laws of war, no violation of the military code. The question was one which society was quite competent to settle in its own way, without noise or scandal. Indeed, the good sense of the majority of the persons to whom the so-called jeu d'esprit had been sent, at once suggested to them that silent contempt was the only treatment it merited. Their own withers being unwarped, they rightly concluded that a silly and ill-bred individual had been anxious to display his folly, as is usual with such organizations, and that he had done so very successfully. Beyond this they did not think it necessary to give the matter a second thought. Not so Major-general Sir Robert Garrett, K.C.B. That very straitlaced moralist and exemplary disciplinarian saw in those doggerels the subversion of all order and etiquette, the demolition of the Horse Guards, and the erasure of the XXXIX. Articles of the Anglican Church. A bluebottle had tainted the meat of "society at Simla," and the whole civil and military machinery of Government was set to work to catch and annihilate the offender. The Post-office authorities were communicated with; telegrams were sent off to the Commander-in-Chief; and the officer commanding H.M.'s 27th was desired to discover the culprit if he happened to belong to that corps, as was supposed not unlikely, from the circumstance that one of the envelopes covering the offensive verses bore the regimental emblem—a castle. As soon as Captain Urquhart perceived the commotion he had caused, he at once came forward bravely and honourably and acknowledged himself to be the offender. His eagerness to exculpate his brother officers from blame, and to take upon himself all the consequences of his folly may almost be regarded as redeeming his previous conduct, and a moderate rebuke from his commanding officer would have fully met all the exigencies of the case. But such was not the opinion of Major-general Sir Robert Garrett, K.C.B. A Court Martial must be held, and the greatest possible publicity given to Captain Urquhart's ridiculous attempts at rhyme. A Court Martial accordingly was held, and Captain Urquhart arraigned on the following charge:—

"For behaving in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having at Umballa, about the end of June, or in the early part of July, 1860, written and sent to certain members of society at Simla, printed copies of a letter signed 'Caius,' and verses annexed thereto, of a scurrilous and immoral nature, and grossly villifying the said society."

There was no difficulty, of course, in proving the authorship of the lines in question, but the members of the court were far too sensible to attach any grave importance to them, and notwithstanding his own very absurd defence—in the course of which he made the following ludicrous remarks "The word 'gentleman' is derived from the adjective 'gentle,' but will any man of common sense say, that because a man is not or may not be gentle in all his ways or acts, that he cannot, forsooth, be a gentleman?"—Captain Urquhart was fully acquitted, and ordered to return to his duties. This lesson will cure that gentleman, we trust, of his unfortunate propensity for writing "poems;" and it is also to be hoped that the result of the trial will also cure Major-general Garrett of his equally unfortunate propensity for the exercise of power. Nothing so much tends to bring any tribunal into contempt as constant appeals to its jurisdiction on frivolous matters, and in India this is much too frequently the case with Courts Martial.

THE EUPHRATES VALLEY RAILWAY AND THE FUTURE OF TURKEY.

In the Railway Record of the 24th Nov. there is given an animated translation of a pamphlet, with the above title, from the French of M. Falkowski. The original is dedicated to Lord Palmerston, and, if perused, must have afforded some amusement to the noble Viscount. The writer begins by drawing a very dismal picture of the political condition of European Turkey, and then with considerable artistic power sketches the great natural advantages of Turkey in Asia. Having thus prepared his foundation, he paints the decline of those fine provinces through the malversations of ruling Pashas, and the feebleness of the Supreme Government. Under a firm and vigorous administration the regions known in ancient history as Mesopotamia and Babylonia might again become the garden of Asia and the granary of Europe. But how is this improved system of Government to be introduced? According to our own views, by leaving the Turks to themselves, by ceasing to torment them with a hybrid civilisation that is in no way adapted to their habits, customs, feelings, and mode of thought, and by allowing them to govern themselves after their own fashion, only taking care that no other European Power shall be permitted to interfere with the internal affairs of the Ottoman Empire. The first result would doubtless be the dethronement of their present besotted and imbecile sovereign, and the elevation in his place of a genuine Turk and strict Mahomedan. For the first year there might possibly occur local risings and occasional bloodshed, but in a very short time the new Sultan would despatch men of severe justice and prompt action, who by their personal influence would speedily restore order and material prosperity. They would rule, indeed, with despotic power, but then a strict impartial despotism is the form of Government best suited to Asiatics. Now, let us see what are M. Falkowski's views. Having started with the postulate that sooner or later the Christian population of European Turkey will throw off the yoke of their Mussulman conquerors, he assumes that the power of the Sultan will be limited to Asiatic Turkey. This empire, in truth no despicable one, he proposes to civilise and enrich by means of the Euphrates Railway. So far, so good. There is some preliminary work, however, to be done in the reduction or expatriation of the nomade tribes. "The first thing," says M. Falkowski, "is to organise a force of from 20,000 to 30,000 men, to open the campaign in Syria and Mesopotamia, to reduce to subjection the Druses and the nomade tribes. The cost of such an expedition upon the widest estimate could not exceed three or four millions sterling." A pretty commencement for the construction of a railway! We know not when this pamphlet originally appeared, and were it not stated in the editorial columns of the Railway Record that it was "recently published at Nantes," we should have inferred that it was antecedent to the present Franco-Turkish expedition against the unfortunate mountaineers of Lebanon. In any case we venture to affirm that the so-called Christian population of Syria is far more likely to prove fractious and troublesome than the persecuted Druses. But to return to our pamphleteer:—Having quieted or depopulated Syria, he next proceeds with his pioneer columns to extirpate the wandering tribes that now roam at large through Mesopotamia. These are to be crushed with artillery unless they consent to settle down in villages as "tillers of the earth, artisans, or traders, or be driven back into the desert without hope of return." If M. Falkowski is at all familiar with the writings of Tacitus, he will probably remember an oft-quoted line—solitudinem faciunt, pacem appellant. It is easy enough to make a solitude, but another thing to evoke peace and plenty. However, these nomade tribes being humanised by extermination, ten or twelve fortified posts, with a garrison of 2,000 men each, are to be established along the Euphrates from Kalaat Jaber to Hit. "The construction of these small forts would not cost more than two millions sterling." Having thus expended six millions in clearing the land of its inhabitants, M. Falkowski now complacently bids the Porte construct a railway at its own expense from the port of Souediah to Hit, a distance of 460 miles, which "would cost about ten millions sterling." "Here we have a capital of sixteen millions—assume it at eighteen millions sterling"—what then?

"The Porte has not got this money, and would never be able to raise it in any market in Europe, unless England will consent to become guarantee for this new Turkish Loan, as she did in the case of that contracted by Turkey during the Crimean war. This is the whole gist of the question."

M. Falkowski sees no great difficulty in the matter after this point is gained. Of course, England will find the money rather than witness the completion of the Suez Canal! Why, there are not three men in England, outside of Bedlam, who believe in the practicability of constructing such a canal, or who would give sixpence to prevent the French from throwing away their money on what is a mere quicksand from a commercial point of view, though it may appear as a rock in the eyes of politicians. However, England is to guarantee a loan of eighteen millions at 5 per cent., with an additional 1 per cent. as a sinking fund—a slight contrast to the terms exacted by Messrs.

Mirès et Cie! The employment of the funds and the control of the operations previously indicated are to be entrusted to an Anglo-Turkish Commission, nominated in equal proportions by the two Governments:—

"IV. After the completion of all these operations, the administration of the railway to be entrusted to the Turko-English Commission until the extinction of the loan.

"V. The Porte shall delegate to the Commission all the right and title which they may have over the forests of the Taurus and of Mesopotamia; and shall concede to the Commission a certain extent of land on either side of the line, by whatever title belonging to the Ottoman Treasury. Finally, the Porte shall grant to the Commission the monopoly of steam navigation upon the Euphrates, and of the electric telegraph upon the entire route between Souediah and Boudjah.

"The Commission shall take all moneys arising from these different sources, shall provide for the maintenance and working of the railway, the support and garrisoning of the forts, the working of the steamships on the Euphrates, and of the electric telegraph; and shall apply the net profit after payment of all expenses to the discharge of the interest on the debt and the sinking fund. The surplus of profit, if any, to form a reserve fund to be invested in English consols, from which fund nothing is to be drawn without previous consent of the British Government.

"VII. The Ottoman Porte shall place in the hands of Great Britain, as a pledge, the island of Cyprus.

"VIII. The British Government will reserve to itself the liberty of transporting, if necessary, by the railway, troops en route for India.

"With such precautionary stipulations England would have little cause for anxiety on the ground of the responsibility undertaken. Let the worst come to the worst, she would remain in possession of the island of Cyprus, a post of observation admirably placed for keeping watch at once upon Egypt, Syria, and Constantinople; besides, if in consequence of fresh disturbances, the dismemberment of the Ottoman monarchy should become a fatal necessity in the political system of Europe, England will have an incontestable right to hold her own upon that portion of the Turkish territory wherein she will have sunk her capital!"

There is a dainty dish to set before a king! What would French journalists have said if such a scheme had been propounded by any crotchety English pamphleteer? What a ruffling of the eagle's feathers should we have seen! What shrill screams of shame, horror, and defiance should we not have heard! But what is really the most surprising thing connected with this pamphlet is its republication, in an English version, in the columns of the Railway Record, a professed advocate of the Euphrates line, the impracticability of which M. Falkowski has taken such pains to demonstrate. Is our contemporary quite certain that the French gentleman was not quizzing the scheme when he suggested the subjugation of the Syrians, the extirpation of the Mesopotamians, the advance of eighteen millions to Turkey at par, and the pledging of Cyprus? M. Falkowski, we suspect, is a wag, and has enjoyed a hearty chuckle over the simplicity of his translator and admirer.

Have the supporters of the Euphrates line, we would ask in conclusion, ever taken into consideration what would be the probable effect on the monetary market of the construction of a railway in Central Asia? At least one-third of the capital would never return to Europe in any shape. It would be expended in food and dispersed infinitesimally among the nomades who preferred turning navvies to death or exile. A large amount it would necessarily be, and paid in silver coin of small value. This silver could only be obtained from France—for we can scarcely meet the present demands upon us from India and China—and would have to be purchased with gold. Can we spare that gold and what would be the effect of its displacement?

MISCELLANEOUS.

KNIGHTHOOD.—(Whitehall, Dec. 10.)—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Jean Edeuard Remono, Esq., First Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Island of Mauritius. The Queen has also been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Lieut.-colonel Andrew Scott Waugh, Bengal Engineers, Superintendent of Trigonometrical Survey, and Surveyor-General of India.

THE REMOVAL OF THE EAST INDIA MUSEUM.—The council of India have taken Fife House, Middle Scotland-yard, the residence of the Viscountess Milton, for the purpose of removing to it the whole of the valuable and extensive museum which has been formed at the old India House, Leadenhall-street. With the exception of the museum there is now nothing left at the India House belonging to the Government of India. The council, officers, and employees have removed to the great hotel in Victoria-street, Westminster; the library has been taken to the India House, in Cannon-row, formerly occupied by the Board of Control. Even the stores are destined to be removed from the old depot in Leadenhall-street to large water-side premises near Rotherhithe. The Government of India has therefore at present four establishments, exclusive of the old India House, which is to be immediately advertised for sale. The plans of the new India offices, proposed to be built in Downing-street, are undergoing various modifications by Mr. Scott and Mr. Digby Wyatt, previous to their being submitted for final adoption by the Indian Government.

HINDOO ARCHITECTURE.—Some months since Sir Bartle Frere sent to this country a magnificent collection of casts from Hindoo architecture and antiquities—these are in the custody of the committee of the Architectural Museum, and, pending the settlement of the points at issue between that body and the Government are invisible to the public.

BOMBAY AND BARODA RAILWAY.—The report announces the completion of the Taptee viaduct, about 2,000 feet in length, and states that the twenty-nine miles of the line open for traffic at the date of the last advices were expected to be increased to thirty-six miles in the course of November, and to ninety-one miles in January next. It is considered that the entire undertaking can be completed by December, 1862. Further capital is required to the amount of £700,000. An order from the authorities in Bombay to limit or suspend the works appears to have been countermanded by Sir C. Wood.

NEW EDITION OF MARSHMAN'S LIFE OF HAVELOCK.

Now ready, in One Vol. 8vo., with Portrait, price 12s. 6d.

MEMOIRS OF MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HENRY HAVELOCK, K.C.B. By JOHN CLARK MARSHMAN. Second Edition, thoroughly revised.

"The new Memoir of Sir Henry Havelock is written by one of his wife's family with an affectionate admiration which the reader will not fail to share. We obtain from it the most intimate acquaintance with its hero; and as the religious tone of the writer's mind is in perfect harmony with that which characterised Havelock himself, the memoir is in every respect the better for the point of view from which it has been written."—Examiner.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectories, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectories, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 10s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 6s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 5 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDH, BHAHUPUR, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPLEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 15mo. bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

MAP of the STEAM COMMUNICATION and OVERLAND ROUTES between ENGLAND, INDIA, CHINA, and AUSTRALIA. In a case, 14s.; on rollers, and varnished, 15s.

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

BY THOMAS CARTER,

Author of "Curiosities of War, and Military Studies.

"What is a ribbon worth to a soldier?"

SIR E. B. LYTTON, Bart.

No general history of these Distinctions having been yet attempted, it is considered that a work which shall afford a clear insight into the circumstances under which such Honours were gained is likely to be received with favour by the public, when accompanied by fac-simile prints in colours of the Medals and Ribbons, and interspersed with notices of Regimental and Individual Acts of Heroism, and Military Statistics of an interesting character.

In order to render this National Work generally accessible it will be published in three Sections, of about five Parts each, commencing with the Crimean Campaign; dedicated by permission to Major General the Hon. Sir James Yorke Scarlett, K.C.B., Adjutant General of Her Majesty's Forces; to be followed, should the effort meet with encouragement, by the remaining two portions, the one comprising the Services enumerated in the General Order of the 1st June, 1847, from the Campaign in Egypt in 1801, to the Battle of Waterloo; the concluding Section being devoted to the Campaigns in India, China, &c., from 1799 to the suppression of the Indian Mutiny. Dedicated by permission to General Lord Clyde, G.C.B., &c., &c.

When completed the series will form a handsome volume, elegantly illustrated, which will contain a record of unsurpassed Military Prowess; and it is anticipated that such an attempt to perpetuate the memory of the brave, by bringing together the gallant deeds of officers and men, will meet with patronage from a public so deeply indebted to, and interested in, the proud achievements of the British Army.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE FOR SILVER.—The real NICKEL SILVER, introduced more than twenty-five years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

A small useful Plate Chest, containing a set, guaranteed of first quality for finish and durability, as follows:—

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTI-

RHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLI-

CATION.—Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Dolorieux, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—SUFFOCATING

FOGS.—IMPURITY OF THE AIR.—As the blood in its healthy state sustains and renovates every part of the living system, so when it is impoverished or impure (as it must of necessity be whilst wintry fogs prevail and the density of the atmosphere prevents the deleterious gases rising above our heads) it has a precisely contrary effect. It is manifest that no medicine which does not reach the circulation can exterminate disease. These wonderful Pills operate directly, powerfully, and beneficially on the blood, venous and arterial; they remove all the mephitic vapours absorbed from the atmosphere. They relax all the air cells of the lungs, affording a larger supply of oxygen, and they expel disease and prolong existence.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

giving an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth. Hardly less attractive than the letter-press are the four hundred beautifully-executed woodcuts, which accompany it, and which explain clearly the meaning. In conclusion, we wish Mr. Mayhew the success his work deserves, and the public the good taste to appreciate it."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

"The diagnosis of every disease, no matter how simple or how complicated, is described in the most lucid manner, so that he who runs may read, and he who reads may understand. The cause and symptoms of suffering being ascertained, the next step naturally is to prescribe the most efficacious mode of treatment; and this difficult task Mr. Mayhew has achieved with admirable success—in no small degree attributable to the excellence of the numerous engravings with which he has illustrated his already perspicuous letter-press. That every member of the Veterinary College will be anxious to possess a copy of this new manual of his profession may be accepted as an undoubted fact; but we shall be strangely surprised if it do not find a conspicuous place on the shelves of every country gentleman, and of every intelligent farmer throughout merry England."—National Standard, June 23, 1860.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious. The illustrations are clever, and fully serve the purpose for which they are annexed—to give certain indications of the nature of disease, and the readiest means of treatment."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"The above is a volume of encyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners: making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Homes News.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and three for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 26th November unhappily confirms the Calcutta telegram, reporting the disbandment of the 5th European Fusiliers at Dinapore. Private William Johnson, of that regiment, having mutinously refused to obey the orders of his superior officer, has been tried by court-martial, condemned to death, and executed. The court-martial, in a moment of weakness, had recommended the poor wretch to mercy, on the ground of his youth and general good character. With this recommendation Sir Hugh Rose wisely declined to comply, as the man was twenty-three years of age, and the spirit of insubordination in the regiment had grown to such a height that it had become absolutely necessary to make a terrible example. In the course of a few weeks more than one-tenth of the entire force of the regiment having been found guilty of serious offences and punished, without restoring a proper subordination, the Commander-in-Chief has directed that it should be broken up, and the men distributed in equal proportions throughout the other infantry regiments; the non-commissioned officers being also, with a few exceptions, reduced to the ranks. A due compliment is paid by his Excellency to "the discretion, firmness, and ability" displayed by Brigadier Welchman, commanding at Dinapore, but not a single allusion is made to any one of the regimental officers—an omission that amounts to a reprimand. There is no doubt that the 5th Bengal Europeans have been pre-eminently insubordinate, but there are other regiments of which private letters give a very unsatisfactory account. It is not long since the 93rd Foot, for instance, pelted their officers off parade; but the matter was hushed up, as likewise happened in other cases. But what will be the probable effect of this incorporation of mutinous soldiers into regiments already tainted with discontent? A little leaven, we are told, leaveneth the whole lump, and it will not take much, we fear, to throw more than one regiment of H.M.'s Infantry in India into a state of wild fermentation. Though an expensive proceeding, it would have been good policy to have sent home as many as possible of the regiments that had been chiefly engaged in active service during the mutinies. The service was of such an exceptional and peculiar character, that it could scarcely fail to exercise a deleterious effect upon a large proportion of the individuals engaged in it. But if it be impossible to exchange the war-worn and over-excited soldiery for fresh regiments from Europe, it might not be disadvantageous to imitate the French "Zephyrs," and to form a distinct reformatory corps of the men who are intractable by ordinary discipline.

Lord Canning was to leave Calcutta on the 19th November by rail for Rajmahal, whence he would proceed by steamer to Benares, arriving there early in December. It is not improbable that his lordship will terminate his present "progress" at Bombay, and there embark for Europe. This step is the more feasible now that peace has been concluded with China and Lord Elgin's services placed at the disposal of the Government. The evacuation of Peking by the allied forces, and the early return of the Emperor to his capital, are announced by the same telegram from St. Petersburg that reported the ratifications of a treaty of peace.

The merchants of Bombay persist in their insane and sullen opposition to the Income-tax. Their present suspension of business, however, will not exempt them from paying the assessment on last year's income, and it is also certain that they will not very long adhere to a course that will mulct them in profits far more heavily than the obnoxious impost could ever do. Besides, is it not in the power of Government to proceed against them as conspirators against public peace and good order, and as guilty of treason to the State?

We omitted to mention in our last summary that Mr. Monier Williams had been elected to the Boden Professorship of Sanscrit at Oxford by an immense majority. He obtained 833 votes against only 610 recorded in favour of the rival candidate, Professor Max Müller. His success is, perhaps, chiefly attributable to the avowed and arrogant support given by the Times newspaper to his rival, and also in part to the circumstance of the Professor being a foreigner. The chair of Sanskrit is worth £1,000 a-year—the best paid Professorship in the University, with the smallest amount of work attached to it.

Honour to the Brave! At two o'clock this day an immense number of persons assembled in the Guildhall to witness the presentation of swords of honour by the first magistrate of the City of London to Lord Clyde and Sir James Outram. A magnificent banquet at the Mansion-house will worthily crown the proceedings of the day; but we regret to learn that the delicate state of his health will prevent Sir James Outram from being present on this festive occasion. Lord Clyde is not only a free burgess of the City, but likewise a Citizen Skinner and a Merchant Taylor. There is only one more object of ambition to be obtained by his lordship—to become also a Cordwainer.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The progress of the Volunteer Movement in India up to this time has not disappointed our expectations. The announcement that the Government was willing to encourage the formation of rifle corps, following as it did the most bitter manifestation of official hostility to the European adventurer since the country was opened to him in 1833, took the whole Christian community by surprise. They could not believe that Lord Canning had penned the volunteer manifesto of his own free will. They refused to credit the fact that he was in earnest. They thought it impossible that the Government could again stultify itself as it did when Mr. Harington introduced his Financial Bill. Then an Income-tax was at first denounced, though called for by the tax-payer, but finally adopted; the exemption of officials was insisted on, that the caste privilege of being taxed in a way different from the rest of their fellow subjects might be maintained, but was at last surrendered. The farce ended by the Government undoing their whole financial mosaic, and handing over the shapeless fragments to Mr. Wilson. So with the Arms Act. In a measure intended at first to continue the operations for disarming the people of the North-West, the Government incurred the most dangerous odium by including all loyal subjects, at a time when their active co-operation was more than ever necessary to smooth the working of the machinery of taxation. The moment the evil was done, the Act in every particular was nullified. Instructions to the local Governments were issued of such a character that every native in Oude, the Punjab and the North-West may re-arm himself in an hour if he chooses to apply for a license. The executive were ordered to exempt the very classes whom the legislature had irritated, and they were invited by the Governor-general himself to form trained military bodies. So little is the art of ruling men known in India!

In these circumstances it is not to be wondered at if the number of men is small, who look not to the acts of the Calcutta officials but to their duty as Christians and their manly instincts as Englishmen, who find in the very weakness of their rulers a new reason for self-reliance. Beginning as it does under a cloud of distrust, the volunteer movement in India has assumed an earnestness and a resolution which point to its permanence and steady growth, which give hope of the efficiency and the perseverance of those who have initiated it. If for the moment volunteering is not popular, those who become volunteers must be considered in earnest. Besides the recent conduct of Government there are obstacles to the success of such a movement which do not exist in England or the colonies. The sympathy of numbers is wanting. Except in the Presidency towns Englishmen are scattered in small numbers over the vast extent of India. Only a few of the larger stations can raise so many as fifty able-bodied Europeans and East Indians not already in the army. There still exists a disunion of classes, a separation into cliques, which it will require some years to efface. The official and the non-official have few pursuits and little intercourse in common. Official etiquette and the traditions of a century require the covenanted officer to meet his uncovenanted assistant only as a superior. The climate exhausts the body, and the toil, which is really hard in the case of every conscientious or money-making man, fatigues the mind. For six months of the year out-door exercise is a labour which only a regard for health forces the languid European to undergo. The worm which is at the root of almost every combined movement for good in India, the incessant changes of society, withers volunteering. The generation which went through the fire of the rebellion is fast passing away, and the mass will soon know it only as a tale that is told. The menace which is ever present to England and which roused the volunteers of 1857, may be more terrible now; but it is hidden, it does not appeal to the senses, it does not influence the imagination. There are few Europeans in India who do not calculate on the possibility of another revolt, but there are also few who do not think that they will be out of the country before it bursts. When we know how common these feelings are, we are satisfied with the progress the volunteer movement in India has already made. A casual glance at the various local journals reveals the following general facts as to its extent. The numbers given are merely an approximate minimum.

The volunteer manifesto was issued from Calcutta only six weeks ago, and these, assuming that the old Volunteers of Madras will be organised under it, are the first fruits. In Delhi, Bareilly, Cawnpore, and Lucknow, arrangements are being made to form corps, according to the local journals. These are the nuclei of the future Volunteer Army of India. The country never seemed so peaceful as now, and yet our Australian colonies appeared to be more so when the one province of which Melbourne is the centre raised a body of 2,000 men. Hardly had they learned their elementary drill when their brethren in New Zealand were forced to fight for very life, and in fighting put the regular troops, led by inefficient commanders, to shame. Victoria was stripped of its every soldier, and the volunteer rifles of Melbourne sprang to undertake the defence of the colony. The 2,000 men rose to 10,000, and the legislature voted thousands of pounds to increase their efficiency. The danger which the Indian volunteer has to face is all the more deadly because it is not so evident as the exasperated Maori of New Zealand, or the 600,000 soldiers of France.

Deprived of that national sympathy, an official assistance, which has helped to make the English volunteers what they are, the rifle corps of India must depend all the more on themselves. The interest in their progress shown by the local Governments, such as those of Madras and the Punjab, may not be to them all that the approbation of the Queen and the stately displays of Hyde-park and Holyrood have been to the youth of Britain. But the survivors of the rebellion of 1859 have a reason for energy in spite of all obstacles, such as even Britain does not possess. If the Enfield is now the national weapon of England, much more necessary is it that every Englishman in India should be a trained soldier.—Friend of India.

SIMLA MORALITY.

We have always heard the "Hills" spoken of as the very paradise of India, and like the paradise of Eden, they have their complement of sin and folly. Combining the grandest and most sublime scenes of nature with climate all but perfect, Simla and other hill stations offer to the weary, heat and toil-worn dwellers in the plains a grateful and refreshing retreat.

To those who have long resided in India, such a sanitarium, or an expensive journey to Europe is all but necessary, to restore the jaded system, and give it new blood and vigour. The hope of a trip to the Hills serves to cheer many on through another and another hot season, and they return revived and refreshed by the change for more work and more heart, until the time for furlough or retirement approaches. For all there is some enjoyment in the Hills. To the young, abundance of health, and might be, innocent recreation. Archery, cricket, balls, and picnic parties; morning rides and shooting expeditions, share the time and attention of the visitors. The advanced in life have their sources of amusement too; dinner parties, an excellent club, and friends from all parts of India, after longer or shorter separations meet once more, compare notes, and see how time has dealt with each.

There is no day without its mark; all is gay and busy, and, might be, happy. What a change to the listless, monotonous round of duty and evening drives of the plains. No doubt much of this charm is owing to the holiday spirit in which people go to the Hills—the absence of work or responsibility—the natural reaction of worn and hard worked spirit casting all care and caution to the winds, as much as to the new vigour and fresh life which the mountain breezes bestow. Something no doubt is also due to the friendly and unceremonious tone of society up there.

People go to enjoy themselves, and the numbers as well as the variety of visitors contribute to this enjoyment. Simla has only one fault, but it is a very serious one—it is a great deal too pleasant—far too pleasant—in the free and unrestrained enjoyment of this new life and vigour; the bow unstrung goes too far, and, as it would appear, some common-place duties and decencies are forgotten. The familiar intercourse with pleasant people which obtains at these hill stations must of course be very agreeable, and a great relaxation to the mind and body of many a sojourner in some retired out-station or stupid cantonment, who has betaken him or herself thither; but pleasure may even be bought too dearly, and if it steps selfishly on the enjoyments or rights of others it becomes decidedly pernicious.

Captain Urquhart's verses seem to hint at something of this kind, which, if true, the sooner it is exposed the better. From time to time rumours have reached the plains of doings in the Hills, which to common-place unsentimental minds seem neither right nor wholesome; but we had no idea that improprieties were carried on to such an extent as those verses would imply. It would seem that ladies sent by their husbands at considerable expense and inconvenience, for the benefit of their own health, and, perchance, of that of their children, forget themselves, and the duty which they owe alike to their husbands, their children, and society—permitting a degree of freedom and license which has never obtained in England, unless in the reigns of the Stuarts, and if report be true, at the Court of the Tuileries.

Year after year Simla has taken off the palm, as being most notorious for these escapades, and now these verses describe a state of things which, making all allowance for poetic license, to our mind render Simla a most objectionable place of residence for any ladies who value their reputation, or would avoid insidious temptation. For our part, we would prefer sending at any expense our wives or daughters to the Neilgherries, some other hill station, or even to England, rather than expose them to the dangers and temptations which, if we are rightly informed, Simla society presents. Into such pitfalls (married ladies of position and supposed respectability leading the way) young and ingenuous girlhood easily falls, reaching the ridge of danger unsuspecting of the abyss that lies beyond. Against this state of things we protest most loudly, and call upon all ladies who respect the character of an English matron in the eyes of their own nation, or of the natives, to make stand now and ever against the conduct which has called forth such imputations. We know that there are many, very many, ladies in Simla who set their faces against such proceedings, for whom an exception must be made; for the conduct of the rest, words are not sufficiently strong to express disgust and disapproval.

Without prejudging the case, or pretending to know what may be the law or etiquette in such matters, or deciding whether or not Captain Urquhart has overstepped the conduct becoming an officer and a gentleman, in sending these lines anonymously to the Simla Club, we think it is to the pen of the satirist rather than of the moralist that society has often been indebted for the exposure of great public evils, and the pages of many well-known English as well as Latin authors would furnish passages far stronger than those now made the subject of a court-martial. We think that he has done good service to society and the public in bringing forward so great a public scandal. In the discharge of this duty the satirist cannot always prophesy smooth things, and must sometimes dip his pen in gall, and in the cure of an ulcer the patient may have to submit to an unpleasant, perhaps painful operation. Better that, far better, than that the ulcer should be allowed to destroy a fair form or a useful life. So in the case before us; though the poetry may not be very good, and some of the expressions be strong and objectionable (we believe no stronger than circumstances warranted), painful as it may be for Simla to read such verses, yet if they serve, as we trust they will, to cure a public evil, and restore health and innocence to society, a great good will be gained. We have no pity for the ladies, and believe they deserve all that is said of them; but for the heartless villains, whether generals or ensigns, aristocratic sprigs, or vulgar snobs who year after year frequent the Hills with the acknowledged purpose of effecting some abominable intrigue or wickedness, we have no terms sufficiently strong to describe our abhorrence, and would that society were sufficiently strong and sufficiently conscious of its own innocence to shut the door to all men whose known character is so impure as that of some of the libertines of Simla. —Oudh Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE BREVET.—We observe that the home authorities have announced their intention of giving a brevet majority to certain officers on promotion. It is a pity, the system being what it is, the number is not larger, for certainly more have been deserving. It appears, however, to be doubted in some quarters whether this system of promoting officers to brevet rank is altogether sound. It must be desirable, certainly, to select from the body of the army, and to promote men who have given evidence of military ability, in order to bring that ability into a position in which it could work to some good. But this is not the inevitable result of promotion by brevet. Officers, deserving, doubtless, and as soldiers gallant enough in all conscience, obtain this rank constantly, merely because, from their position on the staff of general officers, they have been mentioned in a despatch. The same promotion is often withheld from others who may have given proof of great ability on different occasions, but for whose names the general cannot find room in his report. The system, therefore, works unequally, and does not always tend to the end which promotion to brevet rank is designed to bring about. That end is professedly a pushing forward of capable officers to the higher ranks of the army. No one can assert that the present system works out this plan. Take, for instance, the case of a general brevet. One of the English journals remarked about a month ago, that in November, 1862, on the attainment by the Prince of Wales of his majority, there would be a general brevet, taking in promotions of 1856. In this way every officer who, in 1856, was above the rank of lieutenant, would receive a step. It would be an indiscriminate promotion of the fortunate part of the army. The unfortunate lieutenants, of whatever standing, or however deserving, would be utterly neglected in this arrangement. In individual promotion the same thing constantly happens, and the legitimate object of brevet promotion is disregarded. As the system now exists, it is satisfactory to see promotion bestowed on officers who have earned it, but we think the system itself might be amended. It would be better, we think, if promotion by brevet were confined to officers who had shown capacity for command. We have already the Victoria Cross for the daring soldier who is distinguished for courage. Those who do not find that opportunity, but who are yet otherwise deserving, might be admitted into the Companionship of the Bath. Brevet rank we would reserve for the man who shows the higher qualities of a commander, and to him we would give it with no sparing hand. We would abolish the absurd regulation which denies it to a subaltern, and we would thus make the way to high command open to all who, under any circumstances, show themselves fit for it. Were this the rule, England would not feel, as she does now, the terrible want of a man to whom she could, with confidence, entrust an army against a Marshal of France.

MR. R. TEMPLE AND COLONEL BRUCE, says the Hurkaru, proceed to Rangoon immediately, on a mission connected with finance, police, and the various commissions of which Mr. Temple is a member.

NANA SAHIB.—In consequence of the rumours of the infamous Nana, of Bithoor, being still in existence, which appeared in some of the newspapers, the Governor-general called for a statement of facts from the authorities on the frontier best able to report on the subject. The returns are to the effect that the scoundrel is dead, and that no doubt has existed on the subject for a long period of time.

THE EX-KING OF OUDE.—The Hurkaru has been informed that arrangements have been made by Government with the ex-king of Oude to deduct ten thousand rupees out of his pension, which amounts to a lakh of rupees a month, in liquidation of the sums advanced by the Home Government for the expenses of his son while the young prince was in England. No deductions are to be made out of the above-mentioned sum on account of the Income-tax. The sum of ninety thousand rupees, which is the balance, after deducting ten thousand rupees, however, is taxable, and the sum of three thousand six hundred rupees is therefore deducted from his stipend every month.

H. M.'S 24TH REGIMENT, says the Delhi Gazette, has been ordered home, and will probably leave in a month or so. This will leave the Brigade command at Delhi again vacant, as Brigadier Brown now commanding there will proceed with his regiment, the 24th, to England.

THE "DELHI GAZETTE" ON THE LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT.—A curious case of accidental homicide occurred here (Agra) the other day. A conductor struck in the lightest manner possible a grass-cutter on the head; it was a most unusual circumstance for him to do it at all, for he was not in the habit of striking his servants. However, the blow was a most unlucky one, for the man dropped—dead as a door nail. On examination it was found that the dead man's scalp had been broken in former years; it was torn open by a wolf, and had never properly healed; the slap of the hand with which he was struck displaced the scalp, and the result was immediate death. We (Delhi Gazette) should hope that the case will not be regarded in any other light by the authorities who are bound to take notice of it, than what it really was, the merest accident. A man has no right to deceive the public by going about with a hole in his head, the slightest touch upon which will cause instant death. It is worse than an Irishman dragging his coat about in a crowd.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL LAWRENCE will take over charge of the Rajpootana Agency about the 17th November, from Major Eden. If the latter officer goes to Europe, present arrangements among political agents will remain. After taking over charge the Governor-general's Agent will proceed on a tour, visiting the principal places in Rajpootana, Oodeypore, Neemuch, Nuseerabad, Ajmere, Kishenghur, Jeypore, Alwa, Kerowlie, and Bhurt-pore. We thought it would have been a pretty tribute of respect to Brigadier-general Lawrence if the Rajpootana politicals had sent the Awah Thakoor's head to him, packed up in a basket, to await his arrival in the country; but we hear that the Thakoor has been acquitted of the murder of Captain Monck Mason. As the Government let off the Nawab of Furruckabad and have clapped Unjore Towarry into jail, it would manifestly have been grossly inconsistent to do anything to the Awah Thakoor, who signalled himself by at least compassing the murder of a political agent, (for as he has been acquitted it is to be presumed the charge could not be brought home to him), and nearly overturned the throne of our faithful ally, the Maharaja of Joudhpoor, and kept all that part of the country in a ferment of rebellion for about a year. We like to see consistency, so we hope to hear that the Thakoor has been rewarded with a jagheer (Beaswar and its adjacent territory would be a very suitable district), in perpetuity, and the powers of a joint.—Delhi Gazette.

SIR JOHN HEARSEY has completely recovered from his late accident. He inspected H.M.'s (British) 5th Fusiliers on the Glacis of Fort William on the 16th November when they performed extended Light Infantry manoeuvres, and was galloping about the parade-ground. The injury he sustained has, however, resulted in the loss of the third finger of the right hand.

H.M.'S 3RD EUROPEAN REGIMENT, under command of Colonel E. Darvall, with one captain, one lieutenant, eight ensigns, one surgeon major, and one hundred and forty-nine rank and file, marched into Agra on the 20th November, and encamped on the grand parade, where the regiment will remain for the present. It is reported that the 5th European Regiment is to be reorganised from volunteers of H.M.'s British forces.

DHOOLOON, PUNNA, Nov. 3.—The country is in open arms against Europeans here, and one's life is not safe at any moment without a revolver or some such weapon ready for use at a moment's notice. A week ago, my uncle, aunt, baby, and myself, had a very narrow escape of being mauled by these savages. We arrived in the boat on last Sunday night, the 26th, at an out factory in the Serajunge division, and in the morning my uncle went out and found a small chur of the sudder factory that had not been sown down. We had six or seven bags of seed on the top of the boat, so we immediately sent the boatmen to sow this land. They had scarcely finished sowing it when a thannah peon, followed by some fifty or sixty laltials, came down upon them and drove them off. The men ran on board, and the peon said that his instructions were to arrest all persons that forcibly sowed indigo. The laltials were increasing all this time, parties of twenty or thirty coming up from villages on either side of the river, and yelling and howling to each other to screw their courage up. They urged the peon to arrest my uncle's head gomastah, to take him into his dinghy and convey him to the thannah. This, of course, he would not consent to, but said that he would not trust him out of our boat, but would go with him to either the deputy magistrate's (about three miles off), or to the thannah (about fifteen miles off), and there answer any complaint they had to make against the factory or its servants. They seemingly acquiesced to go with us to the deputy magistrate, and we were shoving the boat off to go across the river, when they repented, rushed down in a body, caught hold of the rudder, and tried to pull us back, but the stream was too strong for them, and by a little touching up with the long pole, they were induced to quit their hold and allow us to cross the river. Our troubles were not yet over, as our troubles lay up the stream, and we were obliged to get the track rope out and tow the boat up. We went on this way for a few hundred yards, when a number who had crossed the river rushed down, wrested the goon out of the boatman's hands, and endeavoured to pull the boat ashore. We cut the rope and shoved out into the stream. They swam and came in dinghies after us, and only the sight of a revolver kept them from boarding us. As it was, one fellow made a spring on to the top of our boat and dragged a bag of seed on top of him, which was more than he bargained for, as it nearly broke his neck for him. The peon interfered and persuaded the mob to let us go on peaceably. They allowed us to get the rope on shore again, but that was all; we were obliged to cut it and shove off, as they made more noise than ever, and came off after us in great numbers. They this time showed a little more judgment in their attack, for they divided into two parties. My uncle was guarding the cabin door, where my aunt and baby and the gomastah were, with one small revolver, and I was up on the roof, guarding and sitting on the remaining bags of seed without any weapon but a loaded whip. One party attacked the fore part of the boat and tried to force the door, and another the after part, and tried to carry away the seed, encouraging each other with such cries as these: "Let us kill the two sahibs and loot the boat; if we kill them nobody will know, as we can easily sink the boat;" all which, you may be sure, did not raise our spirits. I managed to hammer the foremost man on my quarter till he got tired of being jellified, and after he gave way, the others rather funk'd being operated on in the same manner, and began to waver. Just at this moment, my uncle, having succeeded in driving them off from his side, came to the rescue, and the sight of him and his pistol was too much for them, and, like a flock of sheep, when one ran, they all ran. My uncle had been equally hardly pressed with myself, but had presence of mind not to fire his pistol, as, of course, ere this, he would have been charged with murder. The peon now changed his mind, and said he would take us to his thannah at Shahzadpoor, which lay down stream. We now speedily got out of sight of the scoundrels, but not out of hearing, as we could hear them yelling at their disappointment for a long time. When we got to the thannah, as there was no complaint made, we were of course discharged, and we then went on to Serajunge and brought the magistrate down to the spot. My aunt was all the while standing at the door with a hogspear in her hand, declaring that she would stick the first man that came near her. As for the gomastah, I cannot say that he showed much pluck, for he retired to the bath-room with a dinner knife in his hand, saying that he would cut his throat if they came near him. This is the undisturbed state of Pubna as the magistrate reports it. A nice specimen of justice, too, in the magistrate, is this. We gave the magistrate a list of the people we recognised amongst the mob, out of which he arrested 25, and when my uncle remonstrated with him he said—"Here are twenty-five for you, surely that ought to be enough." These blackguards, as a counter complaint to ours, stated that we came down with three hundred armed retainers, routed the villagers and sowed down their paddy lands with indigo; and one of their witnesses put his foot into it nicely. He came before the Court and stated that his name was so-and-so, and that he lived at so-and-so, that he was not at the row, but that he heard, &c. A man got up and said that that was not his name, nor was anything that he had said true, but that he was personating his brother. The fellow immediately confessed that he was, because his brother was sick. The magistrate was going to pass it off and take his deposition in his right name, and it was most reluctantly that he committed him for perjury. As it turned out, the man was recognised to have been a leader of the mob the day before, and his brother was the chap that I had mauled. There are now about fifty in custody, but we cannot get hold of the head instigator, as he has bolted, no one knows where. They will, I expect, be committed for the sessions, but I don't think they will receive punishment adequate to their crime, as the Government seemingly have determined never to give impartial justice where any planters are concerned. Of course we shall not attempt to sow any more land this year. This land that they did not want us to sow was under neej-jote cultivation, and had been sown with indigo ever since the chur was founded. We have plenty of pigs, buffaloes, and ducks, and expect to have fine shooting soon.—Englishman.

GONDA, ORDE, Nov. 14.—On Monday last, the 12th, a very interesting masonic ceremony took place. The Brethren of Lodge Stability, which was founded in the early part of the current year, having resolved to erect a masonic hall, and the liberality of the brethren of the lodge having provided the necessary funds, a site was granted by the deputy commissioner, Brother Ross, and on Monday, surrounded by the evidences of active building operations being in progress, the foundation stone was laid with due masonic ceremony.

The Rev. Mr. Drawbridge, who had been invited to attend for that purpose, invoked a blessing on the undertaking in a most appropriate prayer. Besides the brethren of the lodge there was a large gathering of brethren from the neighbouring stations, as also of the general public of Gonda and the surrounding district, conspicuous among whom were several of the fair sex. Worshipful Brother Williamson having duly ascertained that the stone had been properly laid, turned to Brother Balgeur, a French mason of great eminence, who had kindly consented to be present at the ceremony, and placed the square in his hand, begging him in complimentary terms to verify the opinion he had himself formed. On this being done, the worshipful brother declared the stone duly laid, and then delivered a short and appropriate address, and called upon the treasurer of the lodge to exercise the great masonic virtue of charity, by placing on the stone a suitable sum as a gratuity for the workmen employed on the building. This having been accomplished, the brethren returned to Brother Ross's house, where the lodge had been opened for the occasion. In the evening there was a splendid banquet, served in the mess-house of the 18th Punjab Infantry, which had been most elegantly and tastefully decorated for the occasion. Worshipful Brother Williamson occupied the chair, supported on his right by brother Cormick, and on his left by the Rev. Mr. Drawbridge. In the west sat Brother Francis, supported on his right by Brother Balgeur, and on his left by Brother Cochrane, representative of lodge "Light in Adjoondhia," at Fyzabad. After the usual patriotic and masonic toast of the "Queen and the Craft," various other toasts of a masonic nature were proposed by the worshipful chairman and senior and junior wardens, during which occasion was taken to touch upon the great and gratifying spread of masonry in Oude in general, and especially in Gonda. By the kind permission of Colonel Cormick, commanding 20th Regiment and Trans Gogra, the fine band of the 20th Regiment was in attendance.—Delhi Gazette.

THE REBELS IN NEPAUL.—The description of the miseries and mortality which overtook the fugitive rebels in the malarious country into which they had escaped has been fully borne out by the statement of a soldier's widow, an East Indian woman, of the name of McGilvry. This poor creature had fallen into the hands of the rebels somewhere in the neighbourhood of Cawnpore, and was forced to become the wife of one of the leaders. Subsequently her Mussulman master took to himself another wife, when this wretched woman was reduced to the position of a domestic drudge, having to cook, &c., for the "family." She was unable to effect her escape, and followed the rebel party into the Terai, where she witnessed the hardships and mortality of which so much has been said. Reduced by sickness and suffering, the master at length gave her permission to go to her own people, which it may be supposed she readily availed herself of, and after a difficult journey, joined the British camp. According to this woman's account, the malarious influences of the country, and the scanty and hard fare, completely prostrated the miserable wretches, who are said to have died off, like sheep of the rot.

DELHI, Nov. 17.—The General is to be here from Meerut on the 23rd, for the purpose of inspecting H.M.'s 88th Connaught Rangers. On Monday or Tuesday there will be a general parade of all the troops, for the purpose of hearing read the orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief upon the recent military execution at Dinapore, and the breaking up of the 5th European Regiment.

CAWNPORE, Nov. 15.—The Dewallee festival is over; the illuminations were not so good as I have seen them in former years, but the display of toys in the chowk was great, to the evident amusement of the younger members of the community, both European and native. Strange to say, the holidays were fixed on by the Deputy Collector, Davie Churn, to hold the sale of the confiscated houses in the city. The sale took place at the Kotwallie, but as no notice had been given previously of the day of sale, and more particularly as it was a Hindoo holiday, the attendance of would-be purchasers was small. The two days' sale, I hear, did not realise more than Rs. 14,000. Had notice been given, or the sale held a few days earlier or later, a large sum might have been realised by the authorities. None of the bungalows which are in ruins have been sold, Mr. Lance being anxious to let the land out for cultivation or other purposes. The Nana's house, too, at Nawabgunge has not been as yet sold. Mr. Lance has engaged Mr. Judge, of the Calcutta bar, to assist him in the slander case now pending here. It is to be hoped he will gain the day; there is a large mass of evidence to be gone through, and there can be no doubt the defendants have good counsel in Messrs. Carruthers and Sandys. I wish to bring to your notice a case deserving of the sympathy of the public. Two years ago, it may be remembered, Nuwab Mohammed Ali Khan, better known as the Munney Nuwab, was tried here for having rendered assistance to the Nana during the outbreak. His two brothers, the Nuwabs Nizamut Adowlah and Bakur Ali, were also implicated, but the two former have been acquitted, and are in the enjoyment of their stipends. The latter, Nuwab Bakur Ali, although acquitted of all treasonable actions by the special commissioner in 1858, has been kept in confinement in the jail here ever since; he cannot find out the charges for which he is imprisoned, nor can he get any answers from the Governor-general to his several petitions. As the other brothers, who were equally guilty, are at liberty, surely justice demands that the other brother should either be tried, and if found guilty be punished, or at once released. The poor man with his family are but badly off, and he has lost two children already during his incarceration. No one can sympathise with those who were really implicated in the atrocities committed here, but this I think you will allow to be a case deserving of inquiry. It appears that it is from the evidence of the poor man's servants, who robbed and looted his house, that Bakur Ali was imprisoned by Major Bruce. The troops are out at brigade parade, preparing for the advent of Sir H. Rose. The 1st cavalry muster two squadrons, and have much improved in appearance; they begin to look more like dragoons, having firmer seats on their horses. The chief's camp is pitched on parade in readiness for him; he is expected to honour the races with his presence on Tuesday next.—Delhi Gazette.

BAREILLY, Nov. 13.—The Bishop left on Tuesday last, not before he had confirmed the native Christians. The service was conducted by his Lordship's Private Chaplain in Urdu, and an address in Urdu to the candidates by the Bishop himself. He read fluently, and his pronunciation, though not faultless, was certainly unobjectionable; his articulation clear and audible. The few native Christians with whom I have conversed seemed astonished with the greatest astonishment, and are anxiously inquiring whether his Lordship has acquired the language by inspiration. The cricket mania still continues, and we had a match yesterday between the Artillery Mess and the Station, in which the former were the winners. The Dewallee has commenced; but the natives are so vexed with Government and the Income-tax that they intend, on such grand occasions, manifesting their feelings of discontent and dissatisfaction by acting contrary to custom, to have no illumination, no rejoicings. The price of provisions is daily on the increase, and the visitation of a famine is inevitable. Let the officials take time by the forelock, put their heads together, and their shoulders to the wheel, and mitigate to the greatest practicable extent the evils which threaten to crush and overwhelm the poor. Doubtless the Department of Public Works will set to work with unwonted vigour. Yet I would particularly draw attention to the construction of aqueducts in all stations of the North-West, where during the cold and hot season the dust is suffocatingly dense.—Delhi Gazette.

A BAND OF REBELS, amounting to about fifty, led by a pandy, have been arrested in Meywar.

INCOME-TAX AGITATION.—The strike among the native dealers at Bombay, on account of the Income-tax, of which as yet nothing more than the scanty information communicable by the electric telegraph has reached Calcutta, appears to have made an unpleasant impression on the nerves of certain persons. It has led them to horrid reminiscences of the rebellion, and the old cry is renewed of a weak Government, and the empire in danger. The news has so agitated their minds that while deprecating the issue of proclamations, they, in the same breath, suggest immediate explanations to the chiefs of the conspirators on the folly of their conduct; as if a proclamation, under the circumstances, could otherwise than embody the very explanation proposed to be given. We shall be sorry to find that the apprehensions those persons entertain are well founded. But we are inclined to think that it is nothing more than the feeling of uneasiness and alarm which prevailed in Calcutta among the natives from the same cause. The European community may not be generally aware of it, but we can tell them, that various classes of natives during the first weeks of the operation of the Act manifested great agitation and excitement. This, however, did not arise from any disposition to oppose the exaction or evade the duty. On the contrary, all were ready, and expressed themselves most willing to pay. But the dissatisfaction and disquietude were caused by the difficulty they found in comprehending and filling up those cabalistical tablesyclept Income-tax forms; as well as by their strong disinclination to make a disclosure of the real state of their affairs and of their actual partners in business. An idea went abroad, too, that the direst inflictions would alight on them unless they filled up those packets of mysterious papers which the assessors were strewing over the town broad-cast. Deputations waited on the Lieutenant-governor and on Mr. Grote, and literally besieged the Income-tax office day after day, all asseverating earnestly that they were ready and willing to pay, and pay double, too, but they were quite unable to make their returns in the complicated and puzzling forms required. Every explanation was afforded, and all that could be done in the way of conciliation was done to restore confidence and re-assure, and when at length it came to be known that the forms had been revised and simplified, confidence was speedily restored and the native mind re-assured. At one time, the butchers of Dhurrumtollah threatened to shut up their shops, and the Marwaries of Burra Bazar held a midnight meeting; but all this was quietly enough got over, and there is not the slightest doubt that the metropolis will be the first to set the good example of graceful submission to the Income-tax. Now, we believe, the agitation cannot be anything worse in Bombay than what it was in Calcutta, and we feel almost convinced that with the same judicious management it will as easily be put down.—Public Opinion.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 7.—We are just now enjoying delightful weather—mornings and evenings deliciously cold. The Commander-in-Chief is expected here on the 20th. The last brigade day an accident occurred, which was very near being fatal. An artilleryman fell from his horse, and the gun-carriage passed over his neck. A fearful murder took place a few days since, about forty miles from this, a tax-collector being the victim—an Eurasian—the unfortunate man being literally cut to pieces by a body of fakcers whilst in the execution of his duties; but I am happy to say that they have all been secured and brought here for trial, and no doubt they will shortly swing for the deed. The pack of foxhounds that came out from England for this station a short time since are in excellent order, through the judicious management of Captain Chapman. The Assembly Rooms are nearly finished, and do great credit to the builder, a Mr. Carr; the contract for the same, I think, is Rs. 10,000. It is generally thought that the races in January will be unusually good, and therefore we may expect grand doings during this cold season. There is very little doubt but that the railroads in India will be the means of converting the rough mechanics of this country into first-rate artisans. The carriages they turn out at this place quite surprise one, and it is the same at Cawnpore.—Englishman.

FEROZ SHAH has proceeded to Mecca. He pretends that the cap and stick typifying the Empire of India, which were given to him by a holy faquir, suddenly disappeared, and he understands that a prophet exists at Mecca, who can tell him where and how to find them again. Under this cloak he has, no doubt, obtained money from the Indian Mohammedans, and has kept up the idea of his again recovering the throne of the Great Mogul.

THE MAHARANEE OF JALAWAR is expected shortly in Calcutta, on a pilgrimage to Kalighat and other shrines.

NAGPORE.—Letters from Nagpore report more favourably of the health of the detachment under Lieutenant Cockburn, and operations against the rebels at Raipore are to commence immediately.

A SUTTEE has been reported in Rajpootana, a Charan widow having been burned by her son. A report of the circumstance has been called for.

JEYPOOR.—The Governor-general has addressed a letter to the Durbar of Jeypoor, complimenting them on the abolition of transit duties.

MR. GEORGE CAMPBELL, formerly known as "Economist," and latterly by the sobriquet of "Modern India," will shortly return to Oude, and resume the office of Judicial Commissioner.

COLONEL ABBOTT has arrived and resumed charge of the Commissioner's office, Lucknow Division, from Colonel Barrow, C.B., who has taken charge of the office of the chief of police from Captain Reid, who resumes his appointment of deputy-commissioner of Sultanpore from Capt. Perkins, who, we believe, goes to Hurdul as an assistant-commissioner. We also hear that Mr. Berkeley, assistant-commissioner, has been ordered from this to Seetapore—Mr. G. Lang, who had lately been sent thither, returning to Nawabgunge.

MAHARAJA JUNG BAHADOOR, G.C.B., has graciously permitted Colonel Burton to take away all the cut timber he had in the Terai lands lately made over to the Nepal Durbar.

THE CAIRO OUTRAGE.—All the officers accused of desecrating the Mohumud Ali's mosque at Cairo are under arrest, and will be tried by court-martial on various charges arising out of that unhappy transaction. It is said that the most prominent offender was a Major-general, who attempted to drag a donkey up the steps of the mosque tail foremost.

NEPAUL.—By letters from Nepal we (Englishman) hear that the new treaties proposed are ready, and that Maharajah Jung Bahadoor has forwarded the conditions to the Government of India. The Begum of Lucknow is still resolved on giving trouble; she is exerting herself to obtain leave to join the King at Garden Reach.

UNCLAIMED PENSIONS.—Government has decided that pensions which have not been drawn for two years in the N.W. Provinces shall be cancelled.

NAVIGATION OF THE GOGRA.—We understand it is the intention of Government to send a steamer every month up the Gogra to Fyzabad.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.—Officers of three years' standing are now permitted to enter the general department of account on their passing the required examination. Hitherto five years' service has been the shortest preliminary period.

THE LATE MR. ADOLPHE SCHLAGENTWEIT.—Colonel Irby, H.M.'s 51st Regiment, has brought down the head of the late Mr. A. Schlagentweit, who was murdered en route from Leh to Kokan. He was robbed in the valley of Soojheit of everything he possessed, including all his merchandise; the greater portion of his servants and coolies had deserted him during the night previous to the robbery. Ascertaining the loss of his property, he decided on tracking the robbers, and found that the steps of the marauders led into the territory of Yarkund, to a province called Kagill. On arrival at the frontier of Yarkund he found that country in a state of anarchy, it having been invaded by the ruler of Kokan, whose forces were under the command of a chief named Woolly-Khan. It was represented to Mr. Schlagentweit, by one of his attendants, that the ruler of Kokan was subject to the British Government, and that, therefore, he should apply to the chief, Woolly-Khan, now in possession of the country, for the restitution of his property. He sent a letter to Woolly-Khan, relating the circumstances of the robbery and soliciting his assistance in recovering his things. Woolly-Khan complied with his request, and finding the goods exposed for sale, he recovered and returned them to Mr. Schlagentweit, at the same time forwarding him an invitation to visit him in his camp. This Mr. Schlagentweit was disinclined to do, but was persuaded by his attendant (the person who advised him to apply to Woolly-Khan) to go. On arrival with all his property and followers at Woolly-Khan's residence, that chief directed the keys of the Sahib's chests to be taken from the khansamah, and he ordered the boxes to be opened and the contents to be examined, and their nature being reported to him, he directed that the Sahib should be requested to pay certain dues, against which Mr. Schlagentweit remonstrated, stating that he was not a merchant, and that he was on his way to visit the ruler of Kokan, the Sovereign of Woolly-Khan, and that such an exaction was arbitrary. An altercation then took place between the attendants on Mr. Schlagentweit and Woolly-Khan. At this time Mr. Schlagentweit's horses that had been left together, commenced fighting, and he desired his servant "Morad" to go and pacify them. He did so, and on his return found his employer stretched on the ground murdered. During the altercation Woolly-Khan, who was indignant at the idea that Mr. Schlagentweit should remonstrate with him, ordered his attendants to cut him down. The man Morad, as well as the other attendants of Mr. Schlagentweit, were imprisoned by Woolly-Khan, and Morad was released on professing the Mahomedan religion. He says that the country was held for six months or more, after the murder of Mr. Schlagentweit, by Woolly-Khan's detachment, and that on the approach of a large force against him he disbanded his troops and fled. Morad, who had gone to Yarkund, returned to the scene of the murder to search for the remains of his murdered master, and found the skull, which he identified to be the skull of Mr. Schlagentweit by a peculiar mark in the centre of the front teeth; but the remainder of the skeleton of the deceased gentleman he could not identify. It appears that many hundreds of men were executed on the spot where Mr. S. was murdered. This man Morad, hearing that the British Government had set on foot inquiries regarding the fate of Mr. Schlagentweit, resolved to go to the British territory, and with that intention started with a kafile of Yarkund merchants and hadgies. As he left Yarkund he heard that a Sahib was approaching to make inquiries regarding Mr. Schlagentweit, and he therefore made his way to his encampment, and further he joined Lieut.-col. Irby's party, and is now at Lahore. The skull is now in the possession of Col. Irby, who intends to make it over to the authorities. The whole case is about to be investigated by Government, and no doubt every satisfaction will be given to the friends and relatives of the deceased, as far as it may be possible under the circumstances.—Lahore Chronicle.

MR. F. A. ELPHINSTONE DALRYMPLE has memorialised the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, through his attorneys, Messrs. Carey, Berners and Fergusson, praying for compensation, on the alleged ground of having suffered degradation in the service for a period of nine years.

MAULMEIN.—Captain Hopkinson's unfortunate rashness in the matter of the Income-tax at Maulmein has hastened the prospect of the amalgamation of British Burmah. He has been offered the option of remaining under Col. Playre as chief commissioner, or succeeding Col. Jenkins in Assam. In the latter case, Major Fytche will be commissioner of Maulmein on, of course, a reduced salary.

MUTLAH.—The time is fast approaching when something must be done by the purchasers of town lots at the Mutlah. In the spring of next year the outlay must be commenced, which must not be less than Rs. 2,500 on each lot, and we have heard of no arrangements yet being entered into for this new port and city. The Bengal Government will have a first-rate opportunity of carrying out its love for resurrections if the grantees are not on their guard.

LOSS OF THE "TURGOT."—We (Spectator) hear that the French ship Turgot, from Bourbon, went on shore on the Coleroon shoal off Porto Novo on the night of the 18th September, and has since been abandoned and sold for Rs. 3,800. The circumstances attending the loss of the vessel appear to be these. The Turgot was making the land, having had indifferent observations, weather cloudy with passing rain, very light wind and smooth sea, when at sunset a tower or chimney became visible for a moment. The captain was uncertain as to whether he was before Pondicherry or Porto Novo, and consulted his Directory, but all he got there was a caution not to confound the Porto Novo furnace lights with the light visible from the French port. He had seen land, and he expected to be able to sight some light or another after dusk, but nothing turning up, he concluded that he was off Cuddalore, and was about altering the ship's course when she touched the sand bank. It is not generally known that for some time past the furnaces at Porto Novo work with closed tops, and show no light, so that the mistake into which the unfortunate master of the Turgot fell is easily explained. From the accounts that have reached us, we are assured that the vessel might have been got off had prompt assistance been rendered from the shore. The Turgot was in ballast, and all that she stood in need of was a sufficient number of hands to throw it out, as for three days the sea was as smooth as glass. But in this particular she appears to have been inadequately supplied. No aid was given, so we are told, for eighteen hours after she grounded, and the men who did go on board refused to remain longer than four hours, that is from noon till 4 p.m., at which time they left, notwithstanding that their services were urgently required. The Superintendent of Sea Customs, it is said, has no instructions to guide him in cases of this kind, and the efficiency of the Marine establishment at Port Novo will become fully apparent when it is known that the officer in question has his flags and books, but is not provided with a spy glass.

CANNANORE, Oct. 26.—Weather cool; rain in abundance. On Monday last the quantity of fall during the night was four inches forty-five cents. The ship Windsor Castle, with troops on board, arrived at Cannanore on the morning of the 20th, and departed to Bombay the next day. The Bombay Navigation Company's steamer Bombay is to ply on the coast instead of the Pioneer, the latter being put into dock for repair. The former vessel, which is to leave Bombay to-morrow, is to be surveyed here on arrival by the Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals, the surgeon of H.M.'s 66th Foot, and the brigade major, for the conveyance of about thirty-three invalids and time-expired men of H.M.'s 66th Foot from Cannanore to Bombay, for embarkation for Europe. Brigadier J. FitzGerald, commanding Malabar and Canara, being promoted to Major-general, will shortly be relieved from the command of the provinces by Brigadier W. C. McLeod, now acting Brigadier in command of Jaulnah. Captain W. Serres, of the 51st Regiment N. I., is expected at Cannanore from Mangalore, by the steamer Bombay, for the purpose of appearing before a Board of medical officers, preparatory to proceeding to Europe on sick leave for two years. During the last week I have to record the spiritual manifestation of one of the fanatical tribe (Mopla). Exaggerated reports of the wonderful cures performed by him, caused crowds of ignorants of all creeds to call on him; the false prophet confined himself in a dark room, and refused appearing before the crowd, and placed a porter at the threshold of the house he occupied, to whom the applicants for aid were to make known their cases, accompanied by a douceur of a rupee or eight annas, and in return each received a bit of cotton thread about a foot in length, with instructions to have it tied round their arms, and the intimation that the cure of the malady would be effected in fifteen days. Time having elapsed, and the prophecy not being verified, several went back to meet the impostor, and to their disappointment found that he had sloped, and whither he is gone to dupe others is not known.—Englishman.

COTTON MILLS IN INDIA.

The question of cotton mills in India is growing daily in importance, as one exercising a material influence on the interest of the country. Whether they will succeed or fail ought to be determined at present. It will be a serious misfortune if a good deal of capital be transferred from one portion of industry and permanently invested in another when the returns are likely to fall short of the average rate of profits. Some of our English contemporaries of Bombay and Bengal contend that only under a protective duty on English piece goods, as at present levied, can native mills flourish. Under this impression they are advocating the repeal of duty, and warning native capitalists to pause before they commit themselves by a hasty step. We are reminded of the agitation that has begun in England on the subject. India is perhaps the best market for English cotton goods. The spinners and manufacturers of Lancashire will not tamely allow themselves to be gradually displaced in the Indian markets by unfair competition. They will hold indignation meetings, and bring a parliamentary pressure to compel the Indian minister to issue peremptory instructions for the extinction of the tariff. But will that check the manufacturing movement that has begun in Bombay?

We confess we are not of those who look upon protection as a means for the encouragement of native industry, and for developing the resources of the country. We would be rather proud to be one of the followers of Adam Smith and his successors. We prefer the "prudence" recommended by the great economist which regulates our conduct alike in a private family and in a great kingdom. We would go further than that. If a yard of cloth from Manchester cost a person in the Mofussil the same as the one turned out of a mill at Bombay, we would, for imperial purpose, for the interest of trade and humanity, prefer the cloth to be imported. Any surplus capital had better be invested in bringing more land under the plough, in fertilising waste land with water, or in increasing the yield of agricultural products. If India can best economise its power by producing raw materials for England to manufacture, the greatest good would happen to both countries. It would be sin to fight against its destiny. But the case is quite different. Only superficial observers make India wholly an agricultural country. That it possesses mineral wealth in abundance the geological survey has clearly shown. It is not destitute of water-power as its many rivers point out. It is rich in minerals in its mountain bosom, especially in iron. It has a docile, industrious population. In the item of coal only there is a drawback, but it is counterbalanced by other advantages. The past history of India points it out both as an agricultural and manufacturing country. One error we like to see corrected is that the new tariff gave rise to the formation of spinning and weaving companies in Bombay. Facts do not bear this out. Before bankruptcy stared at the State in broad daylight, before a reluctant Government levied additional duties on our imports, the practicability of establishing cotton mills was perceived and acted upon. The first mill was put up by a European at Broach, who took care that no native be admitted into the secrets of its working. Another mill was started in Bombay, and this happened three years before the mutiny broke out. Prior to Mr. Landon's conceiving the idea of importing improved machinery, Manchester had not the whole of the Indian market to itself. Before a tall chimney was erected in England village looms in India supplied its people with dhoties and chudder. They still supply more than half of the cloth annually consumed. In the current year, when the money market became easy, speculators were ready to take up any scheme that promised success. Half a dozen of new companies were formed. Capitalists had seen that a saving of freight in cotton and cheap labour were permanent items in their favour, sufficient to ensure success. The tariff, no doubt, stimulated to further exertion, but the working of two mills had proved that others would be remunerative.

It is incumbent on those who are responsible for the good government of the country, and whose voice is likely to be heard, to show moral courage by boldly confronting the movement of Lancashire men, which, if unchecked, will soon grow formidable. Indian exchequer cannot at present afford to relinquish any means of obtaining revenue. No sane man can be sanguine about the prospects of the Income-tax. In introducing this obnoxious tax we are courting a certain failure. Mr. McCulloch has observed that the tax ostensibly on profits is really paid out of wages. A duty on import is, therefore, to be preferred, which will fall ultimately on the consumer. In five years, when Government will have learned, after bitter experience, how to make both ends meet, the tariff may be lowered.—Rast Gofar.

BOMBAY PAPER MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A meeting of the shareholders of the Bombay Paper Manufacturing Company was held on the 7th Nov., when a resolution was passed to the effect that, in consequence of no measures having been taken to carry out the project since the first call was received from the shareholders about six years ago, the affairs of the Company be wound up, the machines disposed of by public auction, and the proceeds thereof divided among the shareholders. A special meeting will shortly be convened to confirm this resolution.

STEAM COMMUNICATION BETWEEN BOMBAY AND PERSIA.—The coasting steamer Taptee has been chartered by an Arab merchant to ply between this port and Bushire. She will convey not more than 70 passengers at a time, that being the number fixed by the master attendant. No doubt this facility of intercourse will be hailed with great delight by the Arab and Persian merchants, who have to perform a very tedious and unpleasant voyage by their primitive vessels, the buggalows.

ARCHITECTURAL ANTIQUITIES.—The chief engineer has submitted to Government his "Report upon Ancient Architectural Remains, for the year 1859-60." With the exception of that from Vizagapatam, the reports of the district engineers, he says, might all be styled "blank." The district engineer of Bellary reports again that the ruins of Beejanuggur, situated in his district, are too extensive for any one to report upon if he has other work to attend to, and Colonel Horsley agrees in this, if the report is to be in full detail, and he is of opinion that any other might not be worth the time and trouble spent upon it. Mr. Fraser has nothing to add to his report of last year, except translations of a few manuscripts. The district engineer of Vizagapatam reports that at Kumarapolliem, near Bimlipatam, are a few old Dutch tombs, which, from long neglect, are in disrepair. The other district engineers report either that they have nothing to add to their previous descriptions, or that no interesting memorials are to be found in their districts. Under the circumstances represented in the report, Government consider it unnecessary that the district engineer of Bellary should report on the ruins of Beejanuggur. Rs. 465 have been already sanctioned for enclosing the cemetery at Kumarapolliem—a further sum of Rs. 50 has been granted for repairing the tombs.

MISSIONARY MOVEMENTS.—We (Guardian) have much pleasure in announcing the return of the Rev. Mr. McKee, (with Mrs. McKee) of the Irish Mission in Guzerat, who returns to India in renovated health after an absence of a few years in his native land. The Rev. T. Weatherhead, of the Church Missionary Society, has arrived from England. We understand that he will be for the present associated with the Rev. Mr. Robertson in the secretaryship of the Western India Missions of that society. After having visited the various stations and made himself personally acquainted with the machinery of the different missions of the society, he will take sole charge of the duties connected with the secretaryship. It is hoped that the health of Mr. and Mrs. Robertson may allow them to remain some time longer in India. The Rev. Mr. Isenberg has left Bombay for Nassick (Shurunpoor), in anticipation of the approaching departure of the Rev. Mr. Price, who is obliged by ill health to leave for England. The Rev. Mr. Schwartz has removed from Jooneer to Bombay. The Rev. C. Harding, of the American Mission, is about proceeding to Sholapoor, for the purpose of commencing a new station there. The Rev. J. and Mrs. Robson and the Rev. W. and Mrs. Martin, missionaries of the United Presbyterian body, have arrived in Bombay from Scotland, on their way to Rajpootana, where they are to be associated with the Rev. Mr. Schoolbred.

EAST INDIA SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY.—On Saturday, the 10th Nov., Mr. Westropp applied to the Judges of the Supreme Court on behalf of two of the Directors of the East India Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited, for an order to direct the winding up of the affairs of the Company, under the provisions of Act IX. of 1857. The application was based on an affidavit of Mr. Dossabhoy Merwanjee Wadia and another director, stating that it had been found difficult to proceed with the business of the Company, in consequence of most of the shareholders not having paid up the calls. The Court considered the reason insufficient, but promised to grant the order, provided a special ground coming within any of the five provisions of the Act was shown by a fresh affidavit. The application was therefore refused.

THE ELPHINSTONE TESTIMONIAL.—A meeting of the General Committee of the Elphinstone Testimonial was held on the 25th Nov., in the rooms of the Bombay Geographical Society, Town Hall, for the purpose of considering the shape which the testimonial to the late Lord Elphinstone will take. There were present on the occasion, the Rev. Dr. Wilson; J. Gibbs, H. D. Cartwright, M. R. Westropp, Esq.; Dr. Birdwood; Captain Rivers; Jugonath Sunkersett, Cowasjee Jehangir, Framjee Nusserwanjee, Munguldas Nathooobhoy, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jajeebhoy, Vurjeevundas Madhavdas, Mirza Ali Jan, Ramlall Thackorsedas, Esqs.; Dr. Bhawoo Dajee; and Messrs. D. J. Kennelly and Venayekrow Jugonathjee, secretaries. On the motion of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangir, seconded by Mr. Westropp, Dr. Wilson was called to the chair. The reverend Chairman stated that the funds collected for a testimonial to the late Lord Elphinstone still remained to be disposed of, and that the meeting was to decide upon the shape which the testimonial will take. The whole amount subscribed was Rs. 15,000, of which Rs. 11,000 have been collected and Rs. 4,000 remained to be realised. He exhibited for approval a specimen of a silver case in which the address was to be enclosed. Mr. Jugonath proposed, seconded by Dr. Bhawoo Dajee, that the specimen be approved of, and the address, enclosed in a silver case of Kutch work, be sent to the present Lord Elphinstone. The proposal was unanimously adopted. Proposed by Mr. Cartwright, seconded by Mr. Jugonath, and carried unanimously, "That the most suitable means of preserving the memory of the late Lord Elphinstone in Bombay would appear to be by the erection of a statue, if likenesses sufficient to ensure its efficient execution be found to exist; and that the secretaries be requested to communicate with proper persons in England upon the subject, with a view to ascertaining the cost of such a work. That the secretaries be further requested to use their utmost efforts to increase the subscription list, and that they intimate to intending subscribers that the list must be closed within six months. The committee would also recommend the secretaries to communicate with the undermentioned gentlemen now in England: A. Malet, Esq., W. P. Adam, Esq., M.P., Colonel H. Bates, C. Morehead, Esq., M.D., and request their kind exertions in furthering the object in view. Dr.

Bhawoo Dajee, in reply to an inquiry from the chair, said he had photographs of Lord Elphinstone in two positions, from which a cast might also be taken for a statue. Proposed by Mr. Rustomjee, seconded by Mr. Cowasjee Jehangir, and carried unanimously, "That the address to Lord Elphinstone, with the signatures attached to it, be transmitted to the present representative of the family, enclosed in a suitable case of Indian workmanship, for preservation in his Lordship's baronial abode; and that the sub-committee formerly appointed be charged with the execution of this resolution." The meeting then dispersed.—Bombay Times.

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS TO THE 2ND EUROPEAN REGIMENT.—Yesterday evening, Nov. 23, the brigade was drawn up in line, guns in the right, the 2nd Europeans in the centre, receiving Sir William Mansfield with the general salute. Sir W. Mansfield, together with his staff and a large suite of officers, rode down in front of the line, apparently examining each regiment with an eagle eye. He turned round the rear in a sharp canter. The brigade then formed three sides of a hollow square. The colours about to be presented to the 2nd European Regiment were placed in the centre on a pile of drums. They were handed to the Rev. Mr. Fletcher by Lieut.-colonel Guerin and Major Griffiths, and a solemn benediction and prayer was pronounced over them by the rev. gentleman. His Excellency Sir William Mansfield then presented them to the two senior Ensigns of the regiment, who were called to the front by the officer commanding, for that purpose. These gallant young officers received the colours on bended knee, and then stood fronting the regiment. Sir W. Mansfield then proceeded to address a heart-stirring and impressive exhortation to the 2nd E. L. J. He said, it was with feelings of the greatest pride and pleasure that he presented the fine regiment that he then saw before him with new colours. He pointed out in forcible language, how the colours in all ages formed the rallying point, and reminded them that it was not only in the field, when carried by excitement of the deadly breach, or in the headlong charge, but in the quieter duties of the garrison, by a steady and unflinching performance of duty, that a regiment showed its devotion to its Sovereign and its colours. He then dilated on the part the Regiment had taken in the Southern Mahratta Country in 1844-45, with the Persian Expeditionary Field Force, and the conspicuous share it took in the suppression of the Indian Mutiny of 1857,—when by its arduous and unprecedented marches during the violence of the monsoon, it relieved four stations, and was the means of saving the whole of the Southern Mahratta country from breaking into an open revolt,—as also the Garrison of Kurrachee. While referring to the Persian Expedition, the Commander-in-Chief pronounced a high panegyric on that gallant officer Sir James Outram, and said it was a matter of congratulation to the Bombay army, that one so renowned in war and diplomacy, and of whom any nation in the world might justly be proud, had risen from its rank. His Excellency then proceeded to congratulate the 2nd European Regiment on its fine appearance on parade, and its general steadiness and good conduct while stationed in Bombay. From the flattering reports he had received from Lieut.-col. Guerin, he had much pleasure in ordering the release of the very few prisoners the regiment had then in confinement. Before closing his address, his Excellency said it was necessary for him to say a few words regarding the so-called amalgamation—the subject which had given rise to so much discussion. He said he was induced to do so in case it might be thought he shirked the subject. (But here Sir William became so inaudible that the rest of his address, forming no doubt the most important and interesting portion, was lost to the troops.) Lieut.-col. Guerin then returned thanks. The Brigade then re-formed line and the colours were trooped, after which the several corps returned to quarters.—Bombay Times.

SURAT, Nov. 24.—The railway line from Surat to Unklesur is now open to the public. The distance between the two stations is 31½ miles, according to the last published time table, the journey occupying one hour and forty-six minutes, including stoppages at Umroles and Keen. The short section from Unklesur, as far as the bank of the Nurbudda, will be opened next Monday, thus making in all 35½ miles from Surat to Broach; the river to be crossed by ferries until the completion of the bridge. A fire broke out on the night of Thursday last, which destroyed fifteen houses, causing ten thousand rupees damage.

MR. TUDHUNTER, deputy superintendent of the Indore and Central India Circle of Electric Telegraphs, is about shortly to proceed to Europe on sick certificate. He will be succeeded by Mr. M. K. Man.

CAPTAIN VINCENT, the pay-master of the Sind division, is going to leave Kurrachee for the appointment of presidency paymaster at Bombay.

ST. THOMAS'S CATHEDRAL.—To avoid the oppressiveness of the heat, and to render the building more comfortable, the trustees of the Cathedral, with the sanction of Government, have destroyed the gallery, and removed the organ to the east end, facing the back of the pulpit. Arrangements are being made for raising an efficient choir, which will be paid out of the pew rents, Government having declined to grant any allowance for a choir.

THE 57TH REGIMENT was paraded at Poona on the 19th Nov., before its departure for New Zealand. At the conclusion of the parade Sir W. Mansfield, addressing the commanding officer, said the 57th was second to no regiment in India, and that it had been selected for field service by the Supreme Government, on account of the uniformly good reports received of its excellent discipline and orderly conduct. The departure of H.M.'s 64th has been countermanded.

MUNICIPAL BOARD.—A vacancy having been caused in the municipal board by the resignation of Mr. Narayan Dinanathjee, several candidates are now in the field canvassing for votes from H.M.'s justices. We have heard of the names of Captain J. S. Trevor, Mr. W. S. S. Green, and Dr. Bhawoo Dajee, as applicants for the vacant commissionership.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £2. 12s. 6d. to £2. 15s. per ton
To Liverpool, £2. 5s. 6d. to £3. per ton.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Nov. 26).—Cotton.—The market continued brisk during the early part of the fortnight, but latterly the receipt of less favourable advices from home caused operations to be less freely made. A good amount of business, however, has been done for Europe, while for China, as may have been expected, only a few transactions have been effected. Linsed is actively inquired for at firm rates. Business has been checked lately by the rise in freights. Rapeseed has no demand, and prices are lower. Teelseed is lightly held, and contracts for future delivery are made at Rs. 26 to 27. Oiler seeds are not to be had. Coffee.—There is net her Mocha nor Berbera in the market, and the small parcels of Malabar now arriving find ready sale at about Rs. 9 per maund, at which price 1,000 cwt. have been sold. Pepper.—Scarce, and wanted. Prices nominally higher. Madder root.—There is a very good inquiry for Madder Root. Muscat is quoted at Rs. 3½ to 4½, and Scinde Rs. 4½ to 4½. Saltpetre.—In moderate inquiry, at an advance on our last quotation.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Nov. 26).—There was a complete stagnation in the import market up to the latest date received, and no quotations can, therefore, be given.

THE STRAITS.

The following are some particulars regarding recent operations in Banjermassing:—A very daring attack was made upon Martapura in the end of August by the rebels, but the garrison kept them at bay until reinforcements were received from Banjermassing, when they retired, having suffered severely. Dr. Stammler, who left Banjermassing for Martapura on the 26th August in a prahu, was surprised by the rebels and murdered. His body was afterwards recovered and buried on the banks of the river. The prahu carrying the mails between Martapura and Banjermassing was also captured, and the rowers put to death. After Martapura was relieved patrols were sent out daily in different directions to scour the country of the enemy, but with very little result, as the rebels when the troops made their appearance hid in the thick jungle, &c., where they could not be followed. Lieut. Reuter, however, had the good fortune to take a rebel fortification. Setting out from Mungu Taylor he fell upon three small bentings (redoubts) near the kampong Tambarangan. He, immediately, at the head of his men, carried them by storm, and destroyed them. As night was falling he attacked a fourth benting and received a wound on the head from a spear, while three Europeans at the same time were severely wounded, two of whom afterwards died. Lieut. Reuter sent his wounded to Mungu Taylor and ordered up a three-pounder, intending to renew his attack on the benting, but he became so weak from the loss of blood that eventually he was obliged to retire. As soon as he recovered his strength he again proceeded against this benting, which he finally took and destroyed. On the 2nd September Lieut. de Brauw, with 60 soldiers, left Amawang with ammunition for the post at Panti Hamba-wang. After having performed this service he marched in the direction of Gunong Mandang, and observed on the top of a hill a fortification, in which a number of the enemy were posted. They were immediately driven out and the work partly destroyed. On the following morning a patrol under Lieut. de Brauw went out in this direction to complete the ruin of this benting, when it was found to have been reoccupied by the enemy during the night in great numbers, and again repaired.

This benting consisted of a double row of iron-wood stakes about two yards above the surface, faced up on the inside with earth, and having only a single narrow opening admitting one person at a time. Lieutenant de Brauw tried to drive the enemy out, but they received him with a very heavy fire, and when he had advanced within forty paces, this brave officer was severely wounded; he persevered, notwithstanding, in the attack, but without success; the fire of the enemy was so heavy and well directed, that several of the troops fell, and Lieutenant de Brauw was at last obliged to draw off his men out of range, and content himself with firing at the leaders of the enemy, who now and then showed themselves above the works. The most severely wounded were sent back to Amawang, and Captain Koch, commanding there, was informed of the state of matters. Captain Koch, on receiving the news, immediately sent Lieutenant Smagge with a reinforcement to de Brauw, which reached Gunong Madang in the evening, when it was resolved to return to Amawang, as it was impossible to storm the benting in the darkness. On receiving news of this unlucky retreat, Major Verspyck immediately sent a reinforcement of fifty bayonets from Banjermassing, on which Captain Koch, with a column and a 3-pounder and howitzer, set out to give the enemy a lesson. On arriving at Gunong Madang a fire was opened upon the benting with grape, but it was ineffective, as the enemy had found means to protect themselves from the fire of the Dutch troops. After a protracted fire with musketry, cannon, and howitzer, which seemed to make no impression, the order was given to storm, but the enemy opened so heavy a fire of musketry that the party was obliged to retreat. Lieut. de Coenens then went to see if he could not find a more favourable position from which to direct the fire upon the fort, and soon after Capt. Koch going in the same direction was shot through the heart. Lieut. Verspyck was at the same time severely wounded, while several others also received wounds more or less severe. Lieut. de Coenens, who now assumed the command, decided on retiring to Amawang. Major Verspyck once more sent reinforcements under Major Schuack with orders to take the benting, and if necessary to undermine the hill and blow up the fort with its defenders. On the 22nd September, Major Schuack arrived at Gunong Madang with two hundred men, besides a cannon, a howitzer, and a mortar. Fire was opened upon the benting, but it seemed as formerly to produce little impression, and Major Schuack then resolved to starve the garrison out. The place was surrounded, and it was resolved to storm it on the 24th, but it soon appeared that it had been abandoned during the night, and that, favored by the darkness, the enemy had managed to slip past the sentries undetected. A party set out from Amuntay under Lieut. van Emden, to search for a wounded haji whom it was considered desirable to get possession of. On arriving near the kampong he was met by some armed men, who conducted him and his party to a house where the wounded man lay, and which was filled with men and women mostly armed. Lieut. van Emden entered the house and told the wounded man he proposed taking him to Amuntay, where he could have medical help, and directed him to be placed on a litter. On this the wounded man gave some order in a language not understood by the Dutch officers, and the party was immediately attacked. Lieutenant Van Emden received a musket shot and three kris wounds, while Lieutenant Verspyck and others of the party were also wounded. A native soldier, who was left to guard four women in a house, was attacked by them and mortally wounded. The party eventually returned to Amuntay, leaving twenty-four of the enemy dead. Lieutenant Van Emden died on the 24th September, from the effect of his wounds. Under the orders of Major Verspyck, strong columns were sent out in different directions, everywhere routing the enemy with heavy loss.—Singapore Free Press, Nov. 5.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Oct. 10.—Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan's letter was this day received from Toorkistan. He informed the Ameer that when he had made every preparation to take Indee Khoe, the Hakim of that place had sent his vakeel to him to beg of him to give up that intention, and had promised to come and settle the matter himself. He had complied with his request, and waited for his arrival up to the last moment, but as he (the Hakim of Indee Khoe) had not fulfilled his promise, although repeatedly requested to do so, he (Ufzul Khan) had been obliged to send his own Paish khid-mut, Ghoolam Mohae-oodeen Khan, to get him to Bulkh. The Persian and Heerate troops had arrived as far as Mamana; if the Hakim of Indee Khoe agreed to his terms, well and good, otherwise he, Ufzul Khan, would go and take Indee Khoe at once. He also stated in his urzee that he had left his son Ubdool-rah-man with two thousand sowars in charge of the city of Tuckta Bool, and he himself with some troops was marching on Surbool.—Oct. 11.—A letter from the sister of Kahur Moosee Ghilzie, from Khutta Aw Az, was received by the Ameer. She told the Ameer that some Wuzerees had come into her country and given out that the British were so much against them that they were hunted out from one place to the other, making the people thus believe they were trying to collect as many men as possible to assist them. She had tried her best to persuade them not to listen to the Wuzerees, but in vain, as some four or five villages had already joined them; she begged of the Ameer to send some troops to punish these fanatics as soon as possible, or else the inhabitants of the whole of Khutta Awaz would be deserting. The Ameer having taken the matter into consideration, ordered Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan, the son of Shere Allee Khan, with four guns, one thousand sowars, and two battalions, to march to Khutta Awaz, and to punish the insurgent Wuzerees.—Oct. 12.—This day being Friday, the Ameer went to Alleeabad, and remained there till sunset. No durbar was held to-day.—Oct. 13.—The Ambassador of the King of Bokhara, accompanied by Mirza Ahmud Khan, and Akhoond Zada Siraj-oodeen, waited on the Ameer. They were very kindly received in the durbar, and a khillut containing a valuable cloak, shawl, &c., with four hundred rupees cash, was granted to the ambassador. The Ameer also ordered twenty rupees a day to be given to him for his daily expenses.—Oct. 14.—Mahomed Ishak, son of Sirdar Mohamed Auzim Khan, with about sixty sowars and sepoy, arrived this afternoon from Toorkistan with a letter from his father for the Ameer. Mohamed Auzim Khan requested the Ameer in his letter to appoint his son Mohamed Ishak as Hakim of Khoost and Koorum. The Ameer, after perusal of the letter, gladly complied with his son's request, and conferred the rulership of the above-named place on Mohamed Ishak, in the durbar, placing the artillery and troops now with Surwar Khan under his command.—Oct. 15.—The ambassador of the King of Bokhara attended the durbar and stated before the Ameer that he had a great desire to see the Aeena Khana (glass house) of Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, on which the Ameer desired Sirdar Shumsh-oodeen Khan and Sooltan Mohamed to take the ambassador and show him the grand house. After he had taken leave, the Ameer amused himself by playing chess with Ghulam Mohamed Khan.—Oct. 16.—News was this day received from Heerat to the effect that Sooltan Ahmed Jan was busy enlisting the troops, and that Sirdar Mohamed Oomer Khan had sent four thousand men from Subzwari, who were ordered to be encamped in the city in the Taereeh Mohulla; about two hundred bootkees were paid by Sooltan Jan as reward to the new men. It was given out in Heerat that about eight thousand Persian troops with six guns were on their way from Teheran to Heerat via Mushbid.—Oct. 17.—A private durbar was held to-day. Sirdars Shere Allee Khan, Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, Mohamed Oosman Khan, and the ambassador of Bokhara were the only people summoned there; a long conversation went on in the council, but no one could know the subject and the result. The cholera and small-pox are raging in Cabool, and a number of children and men are dying.—Oct. 19.—The following intelligence was this day received from Toorkistan. The Hakim of Kurkee had been directed by the King of Bokhara to rebuild the fort of Kurkee about three hundred paces longer on each side than it was before, and to clear all the jungles from Kurkee to Luck. The King had also desired the Hakim to build a fitting place in the fort on the river side for the residence of the King. The Hakim had commenced the building, and the work was going on as speedily as possible. The Ameer having been informed that the ruler of Kohistan had sent a Hakim to Punj Shere to collect the revenue, and that he had been turned out and disgraced by the Punj Sherees, who were rising against the ruler, ordered Sirdar Shere Allee Khan to send 400 men of his battalion with 600 Kohistanes, and to see the rebellion suppressed in Punj Shere. "This has all been caused by Mohamed Shah Khan," remarked the Ameer in the durbar.—Oct. 20.—Ubdool Islam Khan, son of Quazeer Khan Moolla Khan, who, on account of some disputes with his brother, Quazeer Ubdoolrahman Khan, of Cabool, had gone to Kandahar, arrived to day. Ubdoolrahman and many other men of note went to receive him. On his arrival all his father's books and property were divided amongst the two brothers, and all other matters were made up between them. Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan attended the durbar, and informed the Ameer that this was the time to collect the revenue of Tukka in Toorkistan, and asked the Ameer's permission to march to that place; on this the Ameer ordered him to take 300 sepoy of Shere Allee's battalion, 200 Baruckzies, 200 Kuzulbash, and 200 Ghilzaee sowars, and two guns, and leave for Toorkistan at once.—Oct. 21.—Sirdar Mohamed Uslum Khan has this day despatched 400 Jazaelchees, and his battalion to Goolam Hussun Khan Ufshar, the Hakim of Bameean, and Hazara, Dahzungee, to enable him to collect the revenue of that country. Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan's Urzee was this day received from Toorkistan. He informed the Ameer that he with his troops had left Surbool, and was marching on Shiberghan. He has sent his Vakeel to Shiberghan and Indee Khoee, with instructions to bring the Hakims of those places to his camp, and as soon as they had arrived, he (Ufzul Khan) would send them as prisoners to Cabool. In case they made any delay in complying with his request, he would go and take possession of the two places at once, as they had been always playing tricks with him.—Oct. 22.—Since Sirdar Peer Mohamed Khan had arrived here from Peshawur the Ameer had given him the charge of the Cabool Mint on a contract of ten thousand rupees a year. This day Sirdar Shere Allee Khan applied to the Ameer for the contract of the Mint for eleven thousand, and got the Ameer's consent. The Ameer has ordered Sirdar Peer Mohamed to draw his allowances from Ghuzneen and Kohistan. Peer Mohamed is very much displeased by this arrangement, but he cannot help it, as Shere Allee Khan has got more influence than he has. Some sowars of Shere Allee Khan and Mohamed Uslum Khan had a row outside the Shah Shaeed gate, in which five men of both sides were wounded; they were caught and brought before the Ameer, who, having made inquiries into the matter, ordered Shere Allee's sowars to be confined for ten days. Sirdar Shere Allee spoke in their favour, but in vain.—Oct. 23.—The durbar was held as usual. The Ameer turning towards Shere Allee stated, "that for the last five months he had been speaking to him about leaving for Toorkistan, but without any result, as he always made some excuse or other. "Would it look well," continued the Ameer, "that he in his old age should march from one country to the other, while his sons in the prime of youth kept at home?" On this the Moostoufee presented a list of the troops to accompany Shere Allee Khan for Toorkistan under Sirdars Mohamed Oosman Khan, Ubdool Salam Khan, Fokutzaee and Mohamed Oomer Khan, and intimated to them all to get themselves ready. This afternoon the Ameer ordered Mirza Ahd Khan to prepare a Khillut for the Ambassador of the King of Bokhara.—Delhi Gazette.

Court Martial.

PRIVATE WILLIAM JOHNSON, 5TH CO. H.M.'S 5TH BENGAL EUROPEAN INFANTRY.

Head Qrs., off Dinapore, Nov. 7.—At a General Court Martial assembled at Dinapore, on Monday, Oct. 29, No. 526, Private W. Johnson, 5th co. H.M.'s 5th Bengal Eur. inf., was arraigned and charged as follows:—

Charge.—For having at Dinapore, after gun fire, on the night of Oct. 25, when on duty as one of the barrack picket, disobeyed the lawful command of his superior officer, Lance sergt. J. Eades, H.M.'s 5th Bengal Eur. inf., by not taking Private H. Shields, of the same regt., to the guard, though repeatedly ordered to do so by the same Lance sergt. Eades.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—To be shot to death.

G. H. SMITH, Col. and President.

Dinapore, Oct. 29.

Approved and Confirmed.

HUGH ROSE, General, C. in C. in India.

Dinapore, Nov. 7.

RECOMMENDATION TO MERCY.—The Court unanimously recommends the prisoner to the merciful consideration of the C. in C. on account of his youth, and very good character.

The above sentence will be carried into execution by Brig. Welchman, C.B., comdg. the station, on the authority of a warrant, under the hand and seal of H.E. the C. in C.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. Col.,

Dinapore, Nov. 8. Adj. Gen. of the Army.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The Court has recommended the prisoner to mercy, on grounds which are not valid.

The prisoner's age, 23 years, renders him perfectly responsible for his actions.

Good characters in the 5th regt., such is the spirit of mutiny and insubordination which exists in it, are no guarantees against the commission of the worst military crimes.

All the men of the 5th regt. who have lately been convicted of heinous offences have, with one exception, received good characters from their officers. All are in the first class.

The prisoner's good character, the signal punishments awarded lately to comrades for gross insubordination and disobedience of orders, have had no effect in preventing him from committing the most serious, because the most deliberate, crime, which has occurred this year in the 5th regt.

The prisoner knew also that eight other men of his regt. were under trial by general courts martial for mutiny.

Obstinately and repeatedly Private Johnson, on the 25th ult., refused, by word and deed, to obey an order given to him by his superior officer to confine Private Shields, who had just committed a serious act of insubordination, by refusing to obey the order of his superior officer.

The example of gross insubordination given by the prisoner and Private Shields was instantly followed by one on the part of Private Marnham, whose very good character which he received from his officer on his trial did not prevent him either from refusing to obey the order of his superior officer to confine Private Shields.

In the space of a few minutes three distinct cases of determined disobedience of important orders occurred on the same spot.

Military authority, exercised for the suppression of insubordination, was rendered powerless by insubordination.

Of the three culprits, Private Johnson was by far the worst, because he was on duty. He was one of the barrack picket; and, as such, he refused to carry out the very duty for which he was told off.

Disobedience of orders by a soldier on duty is justly considered one of the worst and most dangerous crimes that a soldier can commit.

It may cause the defeat of an army in the field; the success of a mutiny; the downfall of a State.

Because it is so dangerous a crime, a separate Article of War visits it with death, even when not aggravated by the soldier being on duty.

If, under ordinary circumstances, disobedience of orders is dangerous, it becomes vastly more so when, as in the present instance, it is one of the series of the act of mutiny, of the determined misprison of discipline, and of the insolent opposition to all authority which has characterised the 5th regt. since

May, 1859. The very numerous bad men of this regt. were determined to obtain their discharges; a free passage to England; the pleasure of enjoying themselves at home; fresh bounty, and the option of re-enlisting in the regiment of their choice. They had no more right to these things than they had to property which was not their own. Their attempt to obtain their discharges, by force, after the most explicit order of H.E. the Viceroy, dated Fort William, Sept. 11, 1860, was an act of audacious fraud, as well as flagrant insubordination.

Under the circumstances set forth in these remarks, the C. in C. considers that the safety of the discipline of the army, for which he is responsible, requires that private Johnson should suffer the extreme penalty of the law, as awarded by the Court. H.E.'s regret that he is compelled to enforce it is most sincere. But that regret is diminished when he reflects that the present example is necessary for the good of the State; that it is an act of mercy to all misguided soldiers, who may be tempted to follow the fatal examples in the 5th regt., which have caused sorrow and indignation throughout the army.

The above order will be read at the head of every regt., or body of troops on a general parade, at all stations in this presidency; and subsequently, at the head of each troop, company, battery, and detachment of Europeans.

Head Quarters, off Buzar, Nov. 12, 1860.—The insubordinate and mutinous conduct of a large portion of the 5th Bengal Eur. regt. of infantry, during the last and present years, and the evidence furnished by the regimental records, and the Court of Inquiry lately held at Dinapore, prove that the same bad spirit is general, and deeply rooted in the regt., and is uncontrolled by authority or by soldiers of the corps who have not committed themselves.

More than a tenth of the regt. have, in the space of a few weeks, been tried and condemned by courts martial for most serious offences, and yet the spirit is still working.

The 5th regt. consequently, instead of being a support to the Govt. and the service, is a source of most serious embarrassment and difficulty to both.

The C. in C. therefore, with the sanction of the Supreme Govt., directs that the 5th Eur. regt. be broken up, and distributed in equal proportions throughout the other Eur. regts. of inf. of H.M.'s Indian forces.

The criminal excesses committed last year by discharged soldiers, acting under the same pernicious influences as those which have led to the breaking up of the 5th regt., rendered them the terror of the country through which they passed to places of embarkation. To prevent a recurrence of such scenes, and to provide for the public safety, the C. in C. directs that the detachments of the 5th regt., whilst marching to their new and distant destinations, shall not carry their arms.

The conduct of the non-commissioned officers of the 5th regt., with a few exceptions, has been such that their reduction to the ranks is necessary.

The privates will be drafted to their new corps with perfect impartiality as regards their characters. The future of these soldiers depends on themselves.

All minor details connected with these transfers will be carried out by the brigadier commanding at Dinapore, under instructions from the C. in C.

Officers commanding divisions and stations will make it their duty to inspect minutely the detachments of the 5th regt. as they pass through, and will make a special report direct to the adjt. gen. of the army of their state on arrival and departure from stations.

The C. in C. trusts that the fate of the 5th regt. will be a warning to all ill-disposed soldiers that mutiny, insubordination, and neglect of duties inevitably meet their doom.

Sir Hugh Rose has much pleasure in recording his entire approbation of the discretion, firmness, and ability with which Brig. Welchman, C.B., has exercised his com. at Dinapore, in the suppression of the attempt made by the 5th regt. to obtain by violence and insubordination their discharge, to which the G.O. of the Viceroy in Council proves that they had not a shadow of right.

H.E. has the more pleasure in paying this tribute to the merits of Brig. Welchman, because he selected him for his present command on account of his excellent services, of which those before Delhi, where he was severely wounded, are not the least. Sir Hugh Rose never forgets that the siege of Delhi is one of the most brilliant and important episodes of Indian military history.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.,

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. Col.,
Adj. Gen. of the Army.

Furloughs to Civil Servants.

Home Dept, Fort William, Oct. 24.—The following resolution, passed by the Gov. gen. in Council on this date, is published for general information:—

Read letter from the Government of Bengal, No. 984, dated the 6th of October, requesting that the lieut. gov. may be permitted to intimate to all applicants for furlough, that furloughs cannot be allowed this year to covenanted civil servants in Bengal.

RESOLUTION 1. The lieut. gov., in submitting this request, represents that there is now so great a dearth of civil officers in the Lower Provinces, that for some time past it has been found necessary, as a general rule, to refuse all privilege leave and all leave on private affairs, owing to the difficulty of finding qualified men for the acting appointments, and that if any furloughs are granted at present to civil officers in the Lower Provinces extreme public inconvenience will be experienced.

2. The Gov. gen. in Council has no doubt that the above statement correctly describes the present state of things in the Lower Provinces, and H.E. in Council has reason to know that the same difficulty is experienced in quite an equal degree in the N.W. Provinces and in the Punjab and Oude. The Lieut. gov. of the N.W. Provinces has earnestly deprecated the transfer from them of any more civil servants for service in Oude and the Punjab, both which provinces have however far less than their proper complement of civil servants, even with the aid which has just been afforded by the transfer of a few young civilians from Bombay.

3. Under these circumstances, the Gov. gen. in Council considers that the interests of the public service require that the recommendation of the Lieut. gov. of Bengal should be so far acted upon as to allow of no furloughs (other than on m.c.) except in exchange for furloughs lapsing by the return of civil servants to duty.

4. H.E. in Council is accordingly pleased to resolve that, until further orders, and except on medical certificate, furlough shall not be allotted to any member of the Bengal Civil Service, except on the return to India from furlough of a civil servant belonging to the same division of the Presidency to which the applicant for furlough belongs.

5. Under this rule, all applications for furlough will be registered, and on a furlough becoming available by the return to India for any civil servant now absent on furlough, it will be allotted to the senior applicant of the division to which the returning civil servant is attached, on the understanding that if the applicant to whom the furlough is assigned fails to take advantage of it within two months from the date of the assignment, it will be transferred to the next senior applicant. For the purpose of this rule an officer will be considered to have taken advantage of the furlough assigned to him, when he has applied for leave to make over charge of his office.

MADRAS.

From the above date the establishment of each regiment will be as follows:—

	Regt.	Cos.
Subadar major	1	1
Subadars	7	1
Jemadars	8	1
Colour havildars	8	1
Havildars	32	4
Naiques	40	5
Drummers, fifers, and buglers	16	2
Privates	656	82
Bheesties	8	1
Boys...	24	3
	800	100

The native commissioned and non-commissioned non-effective staff and the establishment of artificers will continue as heretofore.

The native commissioned and non-commissioned officers in excess of the establishment above detailed will be borne on the returns of regiments as supernumeraries, and are to be absorbed by allowing one promotion to every two vacancies in the commissioned as well as in the non-commissioned grades.

As each regiment becomes reduced to this establishment, recruiting may go on as heretofore.

Under instructions from Government, the C. in C. is pleased to direct that the head quarters of the Bombay artillery regiment shall be permanently removed to Kirkee from the date of arrival at that station.

Henceforth the commandant of artillery will be pleased to assume the immediate command of his regiment at its head quarters.

Kirkee will form a separate command, independent of the Poona brigade. The details of duties involving the presence at Poona of the officers belonging to Kirkee will be arranged by the asst. adjt. gen. of the Poona div., and in his absence by the brig. maj. of Poona. Orders will be given hereafter respecting the horse brigade and the riding establishment.

UMBALLA, Nov. 14.—Fortunately the Punjab is at hand; it was a succour to us during the mutiny and rebellion, and now it pours forth its abundant stores of grain to supply the deficiency here, and in districts lower down, which with three irrigation canals flowing through them, can hardly sustain life in man or beast. Long strings of camels and carts pass through this station daily, proceeding west and north-west for grain, and returning laden from Loodiana, Jullunder, Umritsir, and Ferozepore; but even with our advantage of proximity to the Punjab, only ten seers of attah can be had for a rupee, and of gram no more than twelve seers. At Kurnaul, fifty miles lower down on the Trunk-road, gram is sold at ten seers; in ordinary seasons the rate here is one maund per rupee. If rain does not fall soon in the Upper Provinces, there can neither be ploughing nor sowing for the spring crops, and horse carriage dawks and bullock trains must suspend work, for want of gram and fodder for the cattle. Already the mail contractors have found it necessary to appeal to the Post-Master-General, and have obtained some increase to the rate of hire for their horses.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 13.

Head Quarters, Bivouac, outside Pekin,
Oct. 9, 1860.

Sir,—In continuation of my letter of the 4th inst., I have the honour to report that, on the 5th October the allied force advanced from Tungchau, leaving the heavy guns, tents, and baggage stored about three miles from that place. We halted for the night about three miles east of the north-east angle of Pekin, and the following morning resumed our march in a north-westerly direction, so as to pass along the northern face of the city, out of gunshot of the walls, and attack San-ko-lin-sin's army, which was supposed to be encamped directly in our front.

The country about here is not good for cavalry, from the great number of trees, villages, and hollow roads. I accordingly despatched the cavalry brigade with two six-pounders, with mounted detachments, with orders to advance on the road leading to the Emperor's palace at Yuen-min-Yuen, with a view to cutting off the retreat of the enemy in that direction. The French were on our left, whilst the English force moved along the outside of an old rampart which runs parallel to the north face of the city. At this time we received information that the Chinese army was in full retreat, having commenced moving the night before. I therefore sent a message to General de Montauban, that I should advance at once to the Emperor's palace. On the road, however, we came across the rear-guard apparently of the enemy, with whom a few shots were exchanged before they fled towards the city. As they appeared to be in considerable force in the suburb, I determined on halting on the northern road, to prevent their moving out in that direction.

The French, meanwhile, anxious to join us in our advance, struck off to their right, and crossing the rear of our column, without either of us seeing the other, pushed on to the palace without meeting any opposition, and occupied it about nightfall.

The cavalry brigade had reached the palace about two hours before this, and were there waiting for us to join them; on their way they saw a body of the enemy's cavalry, but were unable to come up with them.

On the following day Mr. Wade went to meet a Chinese commissioner, and conveyed to him a memorandum from General de Montauban and myself, a copy of which I send herewith, as also Mr. Wade's report of his interview.

The result of this has been that yesterday Messrs. Parkes and Loch, with one Sikh sowar and five Frenchmen (one officer and four soldiers), were brought into the English camp.

The Chinese declare that these are all of the prisoners who were in Pekin, the rest having been conveyed some distance into the interior; they have, however, been sent for, and will be given up in the course of a few days.

Messrs. Parkes and Loch have given the following account of their capture:—When Captain Brabazon and Mr. Loch left the army on the 18th of September, to recall Mr. Parke's party, they proceeded at once to Lang-chau, where they experienced a short delay in collecting them all together, and then set out to return. On arriving within a few hundred yards of the centre of the Chinese position, where they had left Colonel Walker, they heard firing commence, and immediately their passage was barred by a large body of cavalry and infantry, the commander of whom informed them, that, as firing had begun, he could not permit them to pass without San-ko-lin-sin's orders. Considering that it would be almost impossible to cut their way through the large bodies which surrounded them, they decided on trusting to the flag of truce which they carried.

Accordingly, Messrs. Parkes and Loch, accompanied by one Sikh orderly with a white flag, quitted the rest of the party to go and speak with San-ko-lin-sin. Whilst there they were surrounded and made prisoners, by order of San-ko-lin-sin himself, and sent into Pekin, where for several days they were treated with great severity. On the 29th September they were removed from the gaol, and have been since treated in a proper manner.

The rest of the party they know nothing of, beyond having heard San-ko-lin-sin, at the time of their capture, order the remainder to be seized also, and sent back to Tung-chau.

The five Frenchmen given up were taken prisoners in Tung-chau, whilst walking about the street, and ignorant of what was going on.

The loss of the Emperor's palace appears to have had a great effect on the Chinese authorities, who appear to be now willing to accede to our demands, to which we have added only the giving up one of the gates of Pekin into our hands whilst we remain here, in return for which the city will be preserved for them.

The heavy guns will arrive from Tung-chau to-day, so that the Chinese will see that we are prepared to enforce our demands in the event of their deceiving us.—I have, &c.,

The Right Hon. the Sec. of State for War, &c.

Note addressed to Hang Ki, a deputy of the Imperial Commissioner the Prince of Kung, and handed to that officer on the evening of the 7th October, 1860.

The undersigned has the honour to state that he has been sent here (to the Hwa-ying-szo) by the Commanders-in-Chief of the allied forces.

Their Excellencies have been given to understand, by their excellencies the ambassadors of their respective nations, that his Imperial Highness the Prince of Kung, Imperial Commissioner, has officially informed their excellencies that there is nothing to which he does not assent, either in the treaties concluded the year before last, or in the conventions negotiated this year at Tien-tsin.

The Cs. in C. have consequently no remark to offer regarding the treaties, but unless the Chinese Government immediately send in to their respective camps the officers and subjects of the two Powers still in its hands, their excellencies will cause the capital city of Pekin to be stormed in order to show to those who break faith and do injury to others that sooner or later their offence will be punished.

If, on the other hand, the Chinese Government send back those now in its hands without delay, and at the same time depute a competent officer to prepare the conventions and other documents, their excellencies the allied ambassadors will name a day for the signature of the conventions, the exchange of ratifications and similar formalities.

Late events, however, considered, it will not be proper that faith should be placed at random in the Chinese Government or its people. It becomes expedient to take measures of precaution beforehand against evil that may be done. Before, therefore, their excellencies enter Pekin, a gate of the capital will have to be occupied by an escort detached from both armies. The Commanders-in-Chief will decide which of the gates, and the Chinese troops will be then required to fall back for the time being from the gate their excellencies choose to hold.

This effected, if the officers and people of the capital remain quiet without giving trouble, as in the case of Tien-tsin and Tung-chau, the allied forces will conduct themselves towards them as they have done towards the officers and people of those two cities.

(Signed) THOMAS WADE, Chinese Sec.

Head Quarters, Oct. 13, 1860.

Sir,—In continuation of my despatch of the 7th inst., I have the honour to inform you that, on the 10th, I made a reconnaissance of the walls of Pekin, with General de Montauban.

Having selected the sites for the breaching batteries, the works were immediately traced and constructed, and the batteries were armed, so as to be ready to open fire at noon to-day, in the event of the gate not being then surrendered to us.

This morning I sent some officers with Mr.

Parkes to arrange with the Chinese deputies for the surrender of the gate of the city, which we had demanded of them. They endeavoured to make excuses, and delay, if possible, the surrender on various false pretences; but were told, in reply, that twelve o'clock was the hour that had been fixed, and no extension could be granted.

Accordingly the easternmost gate on the north side of the city has been this day occupied by the allied forces without opposition, and a letter having been received from the Prince of Kung, announcing the readiness of the Chinese Government to agree to all our terms, I have every reason to hope to be able shortly to announce that the campaign is at an end, and peace concluded.

Last night a French soldier, and eight sowars of Fane's horse, were surrendered to us, having been brought in from places where they had been confined, about fifty miles off.

These men had all been treated with great severity at first, and they report the deaths of one French officer and one soldier, also of Lieutenant Anderson, of Fane's horse, and Mr. de Norman, first attaché to H.M.'s legation, and of two sowars of Fane's horse.

The remainder of the prisoners are to be brought back to-night or to-morrow morning, having been confined a great distance off.

This letter will be despatched by a special steamer to Hong Kong, to overtake the mail, and I trust to be able to add a postscript, giving the names of those who have survived.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) J. HOPE GRANT,
Lieut. Gen., Commander of the Forces.

14th Oct.—The remaining prisoners have not yet been sent in, but the mail can no longer be delayed. J. H. G.

EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF LORD HARDINGE.—

A short time since a movement was set on foot by the principal artists in this country for obtaining a duplicate in bronze of the fine equestrian statue of Lord Hardinge by Foley, cast at Messrs. Elkington and Co.'s foundry. Nearly 200 of the artists and sculptors of the country, with a most remarkable unanimity, signed a recommendation that steps should be taken to obtain the duplicate statue, and a considerable sum was subscribed among the artists themselves for carrying out the object. A standing committee, consisting of the following artists, has just been formed to take the necessary steps for appealing to the public to obtain a duplicate of the statue as a tribute of honour to the arts of this country, and a worthy monument of one of our great men:—Daniel Maclise, Esq., R.A., David Roberts, Esq., R.A., Clarkson Stanfield, Esq., R.A., W. AGRA CHURCH MISSION.—We have received the Eighteenth Annual Report of the Agra Church Mission, for 1860. This Mission must be one of the most important in India. They display the names of seven ordained missionaries (of whom, however, two are absent on leave) and a large staff of teachers, catechists, and readers. The Mission had received and expended this year some 13,000 rupees, not including the stipends of the missionaries. Their operations seem to be very various, and conducted with great energy, and must secure the great object of bringing Christianity prominently before the notice of the natives. We are glad to learn that more than double the number of converts have been baptised than in any previous year.

To Correspondents.

COTTON COMPANY, LIMITED.—Mr. G. R. Haywood has lost his temper. This is generally and justly regarded as an acknowledgment of a deficiency in facts and arguments. The letter he has addressed to us, dated Dec. 15, is simply impertinent. A fair and honest answer to our articles will be cheerfully admitted, but we can scarcely be expected to throw open our columns to personal abuse and virulent railing.

THE LAST MARE'S NEST.

ENGINEERING is imagined by most men to be one of the most practical of sciences. Levels and gradients, the strength of iron and timber, the strongest form for bridges, the most economical style of engine, are scarcely subjects calculated to develop a poetic imagination. Yet there cannot be a doubt that wild engineering projects exercise on some minds a morbid fascination. Only let the result be large enough, and facts and evidence, financial prudence and political expediency, are all treated as empty words. To this hour half France believes the Suez Canal—a project for cutting a ship canal through sixty miles of swamp and forty of solid rock, in order to join a tideless lake to an almost unnavigable creek of twelve hundred miles—a reasonable proposal, baffled only by the jealousy of Great Britain. The Mutlah Railway Company originally proposed to run a railway for more than two hundred miles through a salt swamp to Arracan, in order to compete in cheap carriage with the ocean. An officer in Burmah is spending life and no inferior abilities in the effort to make the Government cut the Isthmus of Kraa, a work which would cost a hundred thousand lives and ten millions sterling in order to accelerate the voyage to China by less than a week. A railway through Beloochistan is deliberately preferred to the costless route by the Persian Gulf, and now, with all China open to our steamers, we are asked to support a land route between Rangoon and the Western Provinces of the Empire. The project is cropping up in half-a-dozen different places, and Mr. Henry Duckworth recently received the applause of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Liverpool for an elaborate argument in favour of the scheme.

It is, of course, sufficiently brilliant. The seven Western Provinces of China contain 120 millions of people, more or less. As no European ever traversed them, ten or twenty millions, more or less, make no difference whatever. Only we would just remark that Mr. Duckworth says the cultivated area of the provinces is thirty millions of acres, and that, consequently, every rood of land is assumed to maintain a human being. In England, which is tolerably cultivated, and in which about half the population are crammed into cities, an acre will barely do it. This, however, is only en passant. Be the population what it may, no doubt if these same provinces would buy piece-goods fortunes would be made in Manchester and Liverpool, and the new trade would be well worth an exertion. But would it be worth the special exertion the supporters of the direct route propose? They want a line of railway—for tramways through a tropical delta involve an absurd waste of money—from Rangoon to Pegu, across, we are afraid to say what number of formidable creeks, but certainly some hundreds, and then through the Burmese Shan country for two hundred and fifty miles, to a point close to Esmok, the Chinese western emporium. Once built, that line would convey a boundless amount of manufactured goods and Chinese produce.

What Mr. Duckworth says on this subject is all, perhaps, very true, and a railway from Delhi to Tobolsk would produce even greater commercial advantages. The only difficulty is that the railway cannot be built out of any resources now at the disposal of civilised men. The very first section would take twenty years, and cost thirty thousand pounds a mile. Has Mr. Duckworth any notion of what a tropical Delta is like, the soil a mass of spongy rottenness cleft at every fifth mile by a stream, whose bottom is a quicksand, and whose true banks—that is the banks available in the rainy season—are usually a mile apart, and often seven? Then there is the conquest of the Burmese Shan country, for the hope of inducing the King voluntarily to resign his rights, or, keeping them, to maintain order, is a baseless chimera. This line must ascend the Karennee plateau, or about 2,500 feet, and then run through a district of which grand scenery—in other words, impracticable undulations—is the most prominent feature. For the whole line the labourers must be imported. There are none in Pegu available, and the cost of importing about 100,000 men a year across the Bay of Bengal, and feeding them like an army in the field, must be added to the ordinary expenditure. An army, at least 1,000 strong, must be kept up to defend the line from the gentle caprices to which savage chiefs and Burmese potentates occasionally give way, and then when at a boundless expenditure of life and treasure the great work has been achieved, what will have been accomplished? Simply a railway, competing with the Yang-tse Kiang, which, without labour or cost, offers a gratis water-railway into the heart of the very provinces so eloquently eulogised by Mr. Duckworth.

THE GOVERNING CLASSES OF INDIA.

No. V.—THE FOREIGN SECRETARY.

NEXT to the Governor-general the Foreign Secretary is perhaps the most important personage in the empire. He certainly has the largest share of direct, active, irresponsible power. The foreign business, it is true, is not really in his hands. All arrangements with foreign States, and the vast array of allied, dependent, and tributary princes, is managed directly by the Governor-general. Our relations with Afghanistan, Nepaul, the Nizam, and Arabia involve too many questions of international importance, are too closely discussed in Parliament, for any delegation of responsibility. Under a strong government the Secretary can scarcely even venture to suggest, and his utility is confined to hunting up treaties, drafting despatches, and arranging matters of ceremonial detail. But the Foreign Secretary is also secretary for all the Non-Regulation Provinces, or nearly a third of the entire empire. He is for the Punjab, for Oude, for Nagpore, for Pegu, for Mysore, for Berar, and for five or six smaller kingdoms, the Government of India. The Governor-general, occupied with imperial affairs, cannot attend to the details of a dozen different administrations. The pro-consuls set over these kingdoms are not allowed the independence claimed by Madras and Bombay, and practical power, the ability to give a tone to the administration, the general patronage, and, to a large extent, the financial, judicial, and police government of these territories, falls into the hands of the Foreign Secretary. The extent of the authority thus delegated is greater than Englishmen, accustomed always to limitations on power, will readily comprehend. There are, strictly speaking, no laws in the Non-Regulation Provinces. The imperial laws, called technically the regulations, are supposed to be in force, but even the judges are only directed to adhere to their spirit. Practically, they are set aside whenever the Executive may please. Sir John Lawrence swept away the whole of them to make way for his own code. During the mutinies the code was again suspended in favour of direct autocracy. In Oude the Income-tax was imposed and worked without any law at all. In Nagpore Englishmen have been banished without trial. In Berar the whole system of land tenure was changed by a single despatch. In Pegu the chief commissioner imposes taxes of his own mere motion. In all, the Executive claims the right on all political questions to act despotically, arrests are ordered without formalities, and districts disarmed or fined without a pretence of law. But while thus absolute within these provinces, the commissioners are severely checked by the Foreign Secretary. No order can be issued without his sanction. No expense can be incurred without his authority. No sentence of death can be carried out without his warrant. He, and he alone, substantially possesses the full legislative and executive authority over five great and recently independent kingdoms. This enormous power, moreover, is fenced by very few of the usual safeguards. The local officers, except in the Punjab, are not strong enough to resist. There is no European public to appeal to England. The Foreign Office secrets are well kept, and most of the provinces might be revolutionised without any civilised being ever hearing a word upon the subject. To this hour the knowledge of that long misgovernment of Nagpore which ended in Mr. Plowden's removal is confined to half-a-dozen individuals. No distinct account has ever been offered to the public, no reason assigned for changes vitally affecting six millions of her Majesty's subjects. It is not too much to say that the individual character of the Foreign Secretary is as important to the people of the Punjab, Oude, Nagpore, Pegu, and Berar—that is, to a population greater than that of the British Isles—as was ever the character of a Czar to the people of Russia.

Mr. Cecil Beadon, the present occupant of this office, has contrived, while still a young man, to reach an almost enviable height of unpopularity. Usually a great civilian, if detested by the public, is trusted by the service. The public, however, detest Mr. Beadon as the incarnation of the doctrine "India for the Civil Service," and the service detest him as the soul and life of the Calcutta Clique. The one party represent him as an overbearing obstinate politician, the other as a treacherous underhand seeker after power. Both, while perhaps correct in their view of his action, are utterly at fault in their estimate of his character.

There can be no doubt that Mr. Beadon entertains what was formerly considered the statesmanlike view of the true policy of the empire. He holds that India, and not simply British India, belongs to England. It may, or may not be, expedient to leave certain princes in possession of certain powers; but they are palatines of the empire, not allied sovereigns. No man supported Lord Dalhousie's policy more vigorously during his reign, or refused so emphatically to skulk from it when his departure and the mutinies had turned the tide. No man in India holds up more haughtily the right of the Government to rule, or would resist more stoutly any attempt at native dictation, any resistance to the law. But while holding that India must be governed, Mr. Beadon would govern it solely for the benefit of the natives. The presence of Englishmen, so far as they increase native trade, is willingly sanctioned; but in every other relation of life they are regarded simply as a nuisance. The Foreign Secretary consequently supports the Black Act, decries the Supreme Court, refuses all exemptions for a class, derides volunteer soldiers, and generally holds that colonisation is to be steadily discouraged. Naturally he is vehemently disliked, and naturally the dislike and the injustice it produces react on, and perhaps ulcerate his own mind. But in all this there is nothing worse than a political theory, which the majority of thinking men begin to deem inapplicable to circumstances. In any country but India Mr. Beadon would be respected as a strong-willed consistent politician, whose opinion may always be known beforehand, and whose administrative skill has very rarely been at fault.

The cause of Mr. Beadon's unpopularity with his own service is far more difficult to explain. It is useless to question that by the majority of his own caste he is considered a subtle treacherous hunter for power, whose opinions fluctuate with every new expediency, and who never recognises a scruple, if the scruple would be in his way. It is possible that this reputation is owing in part to a manner so fascinating that every applicant believes his case is gained. It is possible also that it arises from the singular personal influence Mr. Beadon has wielded over three successive Viceroy's. But it is more probable that the "clique" is the real object of attack, and that the sins of a system are visited on an individual. There is a Calcutta clique. In plainer words, it is certain that the twenty or thirty civilians in and about Calcutta do obtain a very unfair share of the power, patronage, provinces, and all Indian good things which happen to be going. If there is a new province annexed a Calcutta man is apt to get it. If there is a very pleasant bit of inspection to be done, involving residence in half the hill stations of India, a Calcutta man is sure to be inspector. Jobs, not by any means so frequent as Anglo-Indians believe, are only done for Calcutta men. The cause of all this is simply that the Calcutta civilians form the "society" of the members of Government, are better known, more thoroughly trusted by the real dispensers of patronage. They are also usually picked men. Add to these facts the utter impossibility of quarrelling perpetually with the men among whom you must live, and the favour shown to the Calcutta clique becomes intelligible. Naturally, however, that favour is the cause of intense indignation among all whom it does not benefit, and as men always make an individual answerable for a system, the vials of wrath are poured out without stint on Mr. Cecil Beadon.

For the rest the Foreign Secretary is among the best types of his class. The charge of treachery is simply false. No man sticks to his friends with more unswerving tenacity, or maintains his opinions more boldly when certain that they can bring him only popular dislike. Cool and unprejudiced, thoroughly educated—a rare circumstance among civilians—and firm to doggedness he will yet make one of the most successful, and probably one of the most unpopular of Indian Governors.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE OATLANDS PARK HOTEL is situated one mile and a quarter from the Walton-on-Thames Station of the South-Western Railway, seventeen miles from London, and within a short drive of Windsor, Clarendon, Aldershot, &c. It stands upon elevated terrace-land within its own grounds of forty-four acres, the rooms are spacious and replete with every comfort, and the mansion being placed on a dry gravelly subsoil, is particularly well adapted for a WINTER RESIDENCE.

Applications for Apartments, addressed to the Manager of the Oatlands Park Hotel, Walton-on-Thames, Surrey, will meet with immediate attention.

CLAPHAM COMMON—UNFURNISHED.

MR. JAMES STEVENS is instructed to LET No. 1, THE CRESCENT, Rent £90. This house is within a few yards of that delightful and healthy spot—Clapham Common, and overlooks a beautiful ornamental enclosure. It has just been thoroughly drained with glazed pipes, and put into substantial and ornamental repair, and is fit for immediate occupation. The house contains, on the ground floor, entrance-hall, dining-room and library. Above—double drawing-rooms, with five bed-rooms, very convenient store closets, and excellent domestic offices. Within one mile of the Balham Station for Brighton, Crystal Palace, West-end, &c. Omnibuses to West-end and City pass constantly.

JAMES STEVENS, Auctioneer, Clapham Common, S.

Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo, BY J. R. YOUNG,

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS, PURE AND MIXED.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in thus gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. YOUNG has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain in the most glowing points in a plain, unadorned manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. YOUNG's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stumps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order.

Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Tooth, from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNESIA has been, during twenty-five years, sanctioned by the medical profession and universally accepted by the public as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion. As a mild aperient it is admirably adapted for ladies and children, and it is invaluable in warm climates. Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable chemists throughout the Empire.

BLAIR'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS.

Price 1s. 1d. and 3s. 9d. per box.

This preparation is one of the benefits which the science of modern chemistry has conferred upon mankind; for during the first twenty years of the present century to speak of a cure for the gout was considered a romance; but now the efficacy and safety of this medicine is so fully demonstrated by unsolicited testimonials from persons in every rank of life, that public opinion proclaims this as one of the most important discoveries of the present age. These Pills require no restraint of diet or confinement during their use, and are certain to prevent the disease attacking any vital part.

Sold by all medicine vendors. Observe "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," on the Government stamp.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.

UNSETTLED WEATHER.—Complaints of the chest, such as asthma, brachitis, inflammation of the lungs, coughs and colds, are now afflicting multitudes. Fortunate is it for such sufferers that they may with confidence resort to Holloway's purifying Pills and soothing Ointment. These noble medicines exercise the most beneficial influence over all the many maladies which arise from exposure to wet or cold in our variable climate. The Ointment should be well rubbed as near the affected part as possible at least twice daily—often if possible. Friction with it upon the chest, between the shoulders, or upon the throat, will at once diminish all dangerous symptoms, ease the breathing, relieve the cough, and restore general tranquillity.

HORSE GUARDS, October 12, 1860.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have news from Calcutta down to the 23rd of November, and from Hong Kong to the 16th of the same month.

Ratifications of the Treaty of Peace with the Emperor of China were exchanged on the 26th October at the Yamun of the Board of Civil Office, his Imperial Majesty being represented by his brother, Prince Kung. The articles of the Treaty are given elsewhere, and upon the whole may be considered satisfactory, provided they be faithfully discharged by the Chinese; though it is much to be regretted that the island of Chusan is again to be given up. The indemnity also is far less than might reasonably have been exacted, and will go but a small way towards defraying the expenses of this costly expedition. A private indemnity of £100,000 has been paid for the benefit of the families of the murdered British prisoners, and a further sum of nearly £70,000 as "blood-money" for the relatives of the French prisoners who experienced the same melancholy fate. Captain Brabazon and the Abbé de Luc may be regarded as peculiarly fortunate in having been simply beheaded, without any previous torture. Not so Lieut. Anderson, Messrs. De Norman and Bowlby, and their companions in misfortune. All these miserably perished from the effects of ill treatment, and it is but a sorry satisfaction that the Emperor's Summer Palace has been committed to the flames by way of retribution. The body of Capt. Brabazon has not been found, but the bodies of Messrs. De Norman, Bowlby, Anderson, and Phipps (a trooper in the King's Dragoon Guards), were solemnly interred in the Russian Cemetery, about half a mile outside the walls of Peking. A threat of sacking that city, implied in a proclamation issued by Sir Hope Grant on the 15th October, was, no doubt, mainly instrumental in bringing the Chinese to their senses.

Two days after the Treaty was signed the Ambassadors of the Allied Powers took up their residence in the capital, in order to assert their right to do so; but on the 9th November the French and English forces fell back upon Tien-tsin, which will be held through the winter by 3,000 of the latter and a small body of the former. The Taku Forts will also be occupied in strength until the conditions of the Treaty are fully executed. Despatches from Lord Elgin have been brought to the Foreign-office by Mr. Loch, while those from the Commander-in-Chief were entrusted to the Hon. Major Anson, M.P. for Litchfield.

The news from India is comparatively unimportant, except with reference to the anticipated failure of the autumnal crops in the North-West Provinces. In the usually prolific Doab—the Indian Mesopotamia—the scarcity of grain amounts almost to famine; and the alleviation of the terrible consequences of such a calamity will form a serious burden, in addition to the heavy demands already made upon the insufficient revenue of the Empire.

The Viceroy set out on his second grand progress on the 20th November, leaving Sir Bartle Frere as his representative, assisted by Mr. Cecil Beadon.

The accounts from the Indigo districts are still very discouraging. The presence of a considerable military force prevents any positive outbreak on the part of the ryots, but is, of course, ineffectual to compel the fulfilment of their contracts with the planters. Some of the largest concerns have in consequence suspended all operations, and, according to the Hurkaru, "indigo planting may be said now to be but barely existing in Kisanaghur, Pubna, and Jessore, to be in a very sickly state in Moorshedabad and Malda, while to the eastward Furreedpore has caught the infection."

The Volunteer movement is daily gaining ground, and appears to be as popular in India as in this country, though within the Mahratta Ditch it has not made much progress.

The appeal of Unjore Tewarree has been decided against him by the Judicial Commissioner, Mr. George Campbell, not on legal grounds, but on the grand non-regulation principle, stet pro ratione voluntas. It is said that a full and free pardon was offered to Unjore Tewarree if he would acknowledge himself guilty; but he seems to have preferred his honour to his liberty. A further investigation must yet be made into this extraordinary case, which will doubtless be brought before the British Parliament at an early period of the ensuing session.

The Income-tax, says the Madras Athlete

"Still continues to be the most fertile subject of discussion in India. The mode in which it is being levied, the attitude of the people towards it, and the decisions of the Government of India on doubtful points, are all commented on in the various newspapers. Up to the present time, however, operations seem to have been confined to talking, writing, and opposing, and we hear very little, or rather nothing at all, about 'collecting.' This, as we have pointed out in more than one issue, is to be attributed to the unintelligibility of the returns originally issued. Sensible measures have at last been carried out to remedy this unsatisfactory state of things. One simple form, instead of the nine or ten at first distributed, has been sanctioned, and it may now be hoped that money will at last be collected. But the fact that the tax has encountered, and will continue to encounter, serious opposition on the part of the natives cannot be disguised."

In Madras the opposition to the tax is of a passive character, the natives having returned the amount of their incomes at "most absurdly low sums." In the Bombay Presidency, however, and especially at Poona, there exists a combined movement of resistance, which must be dealt with summarily before it assumes a more actively hostile attitude. In Bengal and the Upper Provinces the natives appear suddenly to submit to what is inevitable, but it is quite clear that the assessment will not be made according to the provisions of the Act. The powerful will not pay four per cent., nor will the minimum income legally liable be virtually exempted from contributing towards the aggregate sum imposed upon a town or district.

Death has again laid his icy hand on one of the greatest statesmen associated with the history of modern India. The Marquis of Dalhousie expired at 6.30 P.M. on the 19th inst., at Dalhousie Castle, in the 48th year of his age, leaving behind him a name that will never be uttered without a feeling of sorrowful admiration.

We learn from Mr. James Low's "Indian Circular" that on the 20th inst. the Public Debt of India on the London Books amounted to £8,003,230—namely, £6,564,190 registered as Notes, and £1,439,040 registered as Stock. The Four per Cent. Transfer Loan Stock at the same date amounted to Sicca Rupees 1,83,65,909 11 3.

CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.

The Ceylon, with the heavy portion of the above mails, left Malta at 4 P.M. on the 22nd, and may be expected at Southampton on the 31st inst. The Bengal arrived at Suez on the 15th inst.

The Colombo, with the London mail of the 20th (26th) October, arrived at Galle on the 20th November.

From ALEXANDRIA.—Capt. and Mrs. Kellock and three children. From MALTA.—Lieut. Burfield, Dr. Carruthers, R.N., Mrs. Herdman and child.

KHOJAH BIGOTRY.—The Bombay Times states that the project for establishing a high school for the education of young boys of the Khojah community of Bombay, towards which about fifty thousand rupees were subscribed, has been abandoned at the desire of the Aga, the high priest of the Khojahs, who maintains that the education of Mahomedan children in any other save the language of the Koran is a work of impiety! This is as really the practical belief of the Mahomedans throughout India as that the slaughter of Christians is the most meritorious of acts. Yet the Calcutta Madrassa is maintained at a great expense in spite of the protest of the late Lieutenant-governor of Bengal.

BENGAL.

THE ANNEXATION OF SIKKIM.

Some of the journals were lately scandalised at our assertion of the belief that, though annexation is at present in abeyance, annexation is nevertheless the necessary result of the existence of our empire in Asia. The attempts at present made by the Governor-general to induce the Nizam of Hyderabad to cede to us the whole of Berar unconditionally, and the steps urged by Sir Charles Wood, which have resulted in our obtaining possession of the left bank of the Godavery, are simply annexation in its mildest and modern form. We cannot stand still in India: to do that is to go back. We cannot come into contact with tyrannous oppression, marauding spoliation and dense superstition, without at least passively causing them to melt before our approach. We do not urge annexation. We see but little room for it now. We acknowledge that to a certain extent it is politically dangerous. But it will come of itself. It will force itself upon us, as it has done throughout our whole history until "all is red," even in spite of us. We state an historic law, we do not preach a new crusade.

We have a recent instance of this in our relations with the Rajah of Sikkim. In 1835 we wanted a sanitarium for Bengal, and offered to purchase Darjeeling from the Rajah, as we now offer to buy Parasnath from the Ranees of Palgunge. He at first declined to take payment, but subsequently received Rs. 3,000 a year, which was afterwards doubled. All went on well till he appointed a Dewan, who can best be described as a bad specimen of Yeh. At his instigation regular raids were made into our territory, our subjects were murdered or carried off, and no satisfaction could be obtained. At last even the Superintendent of Darjeeling and Dr. Hooker were kidnapped, and were rescued only when we despatched troops to their assistance. In consequence of this we ceased to pay the Rajah his allowance, and in 1850 annexed a portion of his territory. In 1853 he abdicated in favour of his son, and since then our relations with Sikkim have been at least peaceable, if not friendly. But for some time back the old Dewan, having asserted his influence over the new Rajah, has resorted to the old custom of massacre and plunder. In vain have we warned him of the consequences, in vain have we threatened punishment, in vain have we demanded satisfaction and reparation. The cup of wrong was filled when, last July, a native family was attacked, the children and, also, as we are informed, the mother carried off, and the father left for dead. Again time was given for repentance, but in vain. On the 1st November, Dr. Campbell, the Superintendent, marched into Sikkim at the head of one hundred sappers with one gun, and took possession of a large area of territory in the name of the British Government. A correspondent of the Englishman, writing from the spot, describes the beauty of the district, with a dozen peaks towering up to heaven, each higher than Mont Blanc, and the great Kinchinjunga in the distance, while the valleys are well wooded and watered. But he jumps too rapidly to a conclusion when he supposes that the country has been permanently annexed, and that roads and bridges are to be made at once. Since 1857 things are not done so directly or honestly. We have demanded that the captives be given up, that the spoil be returned, and that a security be given against future aggression. We ask only for a promise which will be as easily made and as faithfully broken as those of Pekin, at the politics of whose Court the Dewan is an adept. Had Sikkim been on the Punjab or Scinde frontier, men like Lumsden and Chamberlain, while exacting severe retribution, would have attached the people for ever to our rule, and drained off their youth to fill our armies.—Friend of India.

IS THE NANA DEAD?

That he is, is the general belief among the natives, and until recently was the settled conviction of the Government. That he is not, is at least possible. One circumstance involves the fact once more in a dangerous and unfortunate uncertainty.

The most notorious and distinguished characters among the rebels in 1857 were these—Tantia Topee, the quondam shroff in the Oude bazaar, and subsequently servant of the Nana at Bithoor; Jwala Pershaud, the rebel Kotwal of Cawnpore, then Commander-in-Chief of the Nana's army; Khan Bahadoor Khan of Bareilly, an old servant and pensioner of the British Government, and the long successful leader of revolt in his district; all three died by the hands of the common hangman. Mummoo Khan, the low menial whom the passions of the Begum of Lucknow raised from the kennel to power, having by a perversion of justice escaped the gallows, is a coward felon in the Andamans. His paramour, and her boy, Brijis Kudr, who claims the throne of Oude, are at Katmandoo, under the care of the Nepalese, where also the Ranees Chunda of Lahore—that Messalina of Indian history—has long found an asylum. Baal Rao, the brother of the Nana; Azeemoolah, whom, once a khitmutgar, he sent to London as his agent, and who was his confidant throughout the revolt, and the Nana himself, were long since said to have died in the Deokurh valley, of fever. Feroze Shah, the aspirant to the honours of Delhi and the companion of Tantia Topee, is still alive, but whether in Mecca, or, as is more probable, in the jungles of Central India, is not known. The three claimants for power in India are the Nana, Brijis Kudr and Feroze Shah. Were the former still alive, his name would act as a spell throughout the Mahratta country, and his person as a rallying point for the disaffected. The claim of the second to Oude and of the third to Delhi are too contemptible to excite even interest in their movements. But if the Nana is alive, or if there is a doubt on the subject such that others may personate him with any hope of success, we may be subject to incessant annoyance, and justice will be uneasy till she finds a victim, whose death has hitherto been regarded as a fortunate solution of a difficulty. It was easy to hang Tantia Topee, but for Nana Sahib what punishment will be adequate?

The belief in his death is most strongly asserted in the Oude report just issued. "No doubt can be entertained of the death, from fever, some time previously, of Nana and Bala Rao. The same malady proved fatal to Azeemoolah, the other instigator of the Cawnpore massacre." No reasons are assigned for this certainty, but we believe them to be these. Jung Bahadoor, who in person finally extinguished the rebel force twelve months ago, declared most solemnly that he believed him to be dead, and that no force of rebels, however small, passed through Nepal to the country beyond its northern frontier. Rebels who surrendered themselves to the authorities at various places, and independently of each other, all told the same story—that the Nana, Bala Rao and Azeemoolah died of fever and exposure, and that the bodies of the two former were burned and the usual rites performed. This is sufficient to convince us that the rebels in Nepal believed in their death. This is the authority for the statement in the Oude report and for the universal belief among the natives now. This belief, however, has been shaken by a circumstance of which a report has reached us, so circumstantial as to have attracted the serious attention of Government. In August last a native tenant of a European planter in the Goruckpore district made his appearance in his village after a long absence. He said he had just escaped from the Nana's camp, where he had been detained as a prisoner ever since the rebels left the plains. He described the persons of the Nana, Bala Rao, and Devi Buksh, and stated that all were alive and were at the head of a force of some thousands of sepoy and 30 guns with elephants. Before quitting the plains each had cut off his little finger, and had burned it, to represent a proper religious burial of his body in Hindostan, to which he never might return. This occurred just before a rumour of the Nana's death and funeral obsequies was current; although the man was necessarily ignorant of this rumour having existed, his statement tallied exactly with it. The man then described the march of the force. They left the plains and travelled for fifteen consecutive days in the hills, when they arrived at a line of boundary pillars, which he described minutely. They went beyond this until they came to a place called Thoowarria, near which they encamped, and where they still were at the time of his escape. He spoke of their leading a very quiet life, carefully avoiding any conduct likely to irritate their neighbours, and having so much money that they got on very well. The man arrived at Goruckpore exhausted with fatigue. He had suffered from dysentery on the road, and died soon after in his master's house. No further particulars of importance were communicated by him, though he was repeatedly questioned. In the camp he had been kept in bonds, and made to do menial work. He finally escaped by the assistance of a sepoy. Government has accordingly addressed Colonel Ramsay, our Resident in Nepal, on the subject. Jung Bahadoor has reiterated his belief that no force passed through his territories. Colonel Ramsay says, while no large army, and no elephants nor guns, could cross the passes without observation, it is quite possible a small body of a few hundred desperate men may have succeeded.

There the matter at present rests. If the Nana did not perish from fever, he had every motive for acting as he is said to have done. It was likely that he would delude even his own rebel followers, except the few more immediately about his person who accompanied him, in order that the search of the British might cease, that the Nepalese Court might be deceived, and that thus he might be ready at any future time to take advantage of uneasiness in the native mind once more to make a throw for power. All Nepal, except Jung Bahadoor, was not only in his favour, but was anxious to be let loose on the plains to help in asserting the supremacy of Brahminism. With the large wealth which he possessed he would find every facility in procuring an asylum; nor will Jung Bahadoor, having once, honestly enough, declared he was dead, take active steps to prove the opposite. Thus a question, not only of historical but of serious political interest, is again involved in uncertainty. We trust Colonel Ramsay will leave no stone unturned till he discovers the truth. The "place called Thoowarria," and the "boundary pillars" are means by which the story may be tested.—Friend of India.

THE INCOME-TAX IN OUDE.

On the subject of the Income-tax the Chief Commissioner of Oude says, in the Report of his administration for 1859-60, that the principle on which the scheme is based is to take 3 per cent. on incomes, and having roughly estimated the amount thus to be paid by the rateable inhabitants of each village or town, to leave the distribution to the people themselves:—

"In Talookas this work has been mainly entrusted to the talookdars who have zealously co-operated in it, and prevented an undue share of the burden being thrown on the poorer classes to ease the rich. The amount imposed is 1½ lakhs. With the exception of the city of Lucknow, no difficulty whatever has been experienced in the distribution of the assessment or in the collection of the tax. The whole has been paid up in Roy Bareilly, and in the districts of Pertabgurh, Sultanpore, Lucknow, Oonao, and Fyzabad the first instalments have been realised. All the Commissioners agree in stating that the appeals regarding the tax have been very few, and that those preferred related always to the amount distributed on the individual—not to the nature of the tax. In the city of Lucknow some discontent and recalcitrance have been manifested, though coercive processes have been but very rarely resorted to. The Chief Commissioner anticipated some difficulty in the city. The wealthy mercantile classes are always those who most object to being called on to contribute to the expense of the State, though they endeavour to conceal their selfishness under the mask of sympathy for the poor."

The Chief Commissioner confidently reiterates his assertion that when he submitted his report of the measure not a murmur had been heard, although the tax had been partially collected in some districts. The only expressions of discontent were subsequently made on observing that their neighbours in the regulation provinces were not assessed. This was stated very mildly, and yet they did not believe when told that their neighbours would have to pay all in good time, and thought by pressing this point to escape the tax also. The mysterious circulation of letters which occurred in April last professed to be issued from a holy place beyond Mirzapoor. It is doubted whether they had any political signification, but it is remarked that this system of communication might be made a dangerous engine of political agitation, and instructions have been given, interdicting the village police, under severe penalties, obeying the orders of any one but the Government or the landholders, and holding the latter responsible that no letters or missives should be allowed to circulate on their estates. Maharaja Maun Sing was the first to bring the mysterious occurrence of these circulars to the notice of Government. The report then notices formally the conduct of the chief landed proprietors as follows:—

"A report on an administration conducted on the great principle of recognising a powerful landed aristocracy as an important element of political prosperity, would be deficient if it did not formally notice the chief landed proprietors of the province. The conduct of these gentlemen has been, almost without exception, exemplary; and this is no doubt attributable in a great degree to their having been treated with friendliness and confidence instead of with jealousy and distrust. The Maharajah of Bulpore has won all hearts. By his known benevolence and reputation for fair dealing in his own hereditary estates, he is said to have completely conciliated the tenantry in his new property of Toolseepore, who were at first ill disposed to receive a strange master. Than Maharajah Maun Singh, the Chief Commissioner does not believe the British Government has a subject more thoroughly devoted to its interests. The moderation and paternal mode of treating his tenantry, evinced by Rajah Roostum Sah, are warmly commended by the district officer. Rajah Hurdeo Bux is not only a chief of tried loyalty, but a most benevolent landlord."

This is followed by the list of names of many who deserve honourable mention, but which we have already given in the letter of acknowledgment from the Supreme Government.

The strength of the military force now in Oude is as follows:—

4 battalions royal artillery	...	713
1 troop horse artillery	...	109
2 companies foot artillery	...	174
		996
1 regiment European cavalry	...	693
5 regiments irregular cavalry	...	2,582
		8,275
6 regiments European infantry	...	4,969
4 regiments native infantry	...	3,039
		8,008
		12,279

"The Chief Commissioner believes it might be reduced by one European and one native regiment of infantry at least."

The population of Oude is estimated at six millions. The cholera committed great havoc, 65,000 persons having died of it. None of the families of the convicts can be prevailed on to go to the Andamans to join their relations; the fear of the "black water," the awful sea, was greater than the love of father and son.

Experiments are being made with cotton, particularly in Seetapore, from whence some specimens have been sent, which were valued in England at 6½d. per lb. The soil of Oude is very favourable for cotton, and if irrigation can be managed cheaply, a large cultivation might be easily secured. The transfer of the forests to Nepal has obliged the Oude Government to be careful of what remains; a plan is now under consideration for placing them immediately under Government management. The report concludes with remarks on the surveys, on progress, the conservancy, dispensaries, and the deserved praise of the various officers of the commission.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NUWAB ALI NUKEE KHAN.—The surveillance which has been hitherto kept over Nuwab Ali Nukee Khan has been relaxed. He is relieved from reporting himself weekly, but is not to be permitted to leave Calcutta without special authority.

COOCH BEHAR.—Further cases of oppression and tyranny on the part of the young Rajah of Cooch Behar have been brought to the notice of Government; and, from all we can learn, he does little credit to his able and exemplary guardian and tutor, who was appointed by Government to watch over him in Calcutta.

THE "HINDU PATRIOT" UPON THE BIBLE.—Both Sir John Lawrence and Sir Herbert Edwardes attached much importance to the introduction of the Bible into the Government schools in this country. Except as a recognition of Christian doctrine, to the avowed exclusion of Hindu and Mahomedan doctrine, as a part of the teaching of our public schools, the question is of the slightest moment possible. We have repeatedly said that the Bible is read by every native scholar who has made a certain degree of progress in English literature. To all understandings which have reached a certain degree of cultivation the recommendation of the Bible, as a book of reading, looks very like impertinence. Its intrinsic merits as a literary work will ensure, as it has ensured, as extensive a reception of its contents as Sir Herbert Edwardes himself could wish. It is not for us to say how far a deep or even an enthusiastic appreciation of the beauties of the Scriptures is calculated to help on the cause of evangelisation. One fact is certain. It grates on the sympathies of many sincere Christians to contemplate such a use of the book they hold sacred as Sir Herbert Edwardes' party would put it to. To turn it into what in the language of the classes is called a class-book is, if we judge rightly, viewed by many of them as a desideratum. Were we a Christian we could not reconcile it to ourselves to see the written repository of our faith turned into an object of small criticism by a parcel of boys, or perchance a parcel of teachers more irreverent than boys. The Bible, we repeat, if not yet a class-book in the Government schools, if not yet converted into a badge of conquest, is already an honoured book with all educated natives. To enforce its introduction into the stated curriculum of Indian colleges would simply bring British faith into undeserved question without subserving a single evangelic purpose. They who would do it would literally make Christ's empire one of this world, and of this world the most worldly.

AMALGAMATION OF THE COURTS.—The Hurkaru publishes an extract from an important despatch from Sir Charles Wood, on the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts. The despatch declares that it is not intended that all the Courts throughout India "should be subjected to one rigorously uniform system of law and procedure," but only those in the regulation provinces and presidency towns. The Government of India is directed to prepare the way for amalgamation next year. The judges in the Legislative Council are to be consulted "in regard to the changes to be effected in the procedure of the Courts established by royal charter." The penal code has been already passed, and the code of civil procedure must be "accompanied by a similar measure for the Supreme Courts," into which one simple, cheap, and effective system of procedure, common to all sides of the Courts, is to be introduced without delay. This will strengthen Sir R. Montgomery's protest against Sir Barnes Peacock's attempt to subject the Non-regulation Provinces to the Legislative Council.

TALKEE TALKEE.—We are glad to see the progress made by the Debating Society attached to the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta. Sir Bartle Frere presided at the last meeting, when the career and character of Cromwell was the subject of discussion. It would be better for the society if, as in England, their proceedings were not reported in the public journals.

THE BONDED WAREHOUSE ASSOCIATION have declared a dividend of 30 rupees per share (Rs. 445), free of Income-tax, for the half-year ending 31st October. The divisible surplus amounted to Rs. 65,377-0-3.

FUEL FOR RAILWAYS, N. W. P.—The Calcutta Gazette contains a series of correspondence on the subject of the supply of fuel for the railways of the North-West. The conclusion come to by the Lieutenant-governor of the North-West is that the districts through which the line at present passes have an abundant supply for some years, and that no expense need be incurred in forming plantations on waste lands, as coal will be easily procured by the completion of the Jubbulpore line before the trees could grow up. The correspondence is remarkable only for the information which it gives as to the immense supply of jungly forest over the Himalayan slopes between the sources of the Jumna and Ganges, and for a proposition of Mr. Oldham's to continue the Ranee-gunge Railway right on to Jubbulpore, through the coal districts of Ramgurih, Palamow and Singrowlee, close to Hazareebaugh, by which the distance between Calcutta and Bombay would be shortened 300 miles. Mr. Oldham is surely aware that such a line is an engineering impossibility.

DISTRICT ROADS IN BENGAL.—The sum available from local and general funds for district roads in Bengal as feeders to the railways is Rs. 13,13,500 in the current year. The wise and liberal policy of Mr. Grant, if continued for ten years, will give Bengal, hitherto totally destitute of them, roads equal to any in the world. He condemns several district officers for not pushing on the works with vigour. They have in many cases kept the sums allowed for roads unexpended, when the whole country needs them almost as much as decent courts. It is a pity Mr. Grant does not govern men as well as he plans roads.

JUNIOR CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.—In a letter to the Government of India, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal effectually disposes of certain changes recommended by Mr. Latour in the second examination of junior civil servants, which were condemned by Sir F. Halliday as "frivolous, useless, mischievous." He also answers Sir F. Halliday's objections to that examination. He gives the truth in a nutshell when he says that its unpopularity arises from the fact "that some young gentlemen, very anxious for responsible functions and higher pay, fail to pass one or other of the examinations, and are much mortified thereat."

THE JAWUD NEEMUCH DISTRICT is henceforth to be designated the Neemuch district.

ASSISTANT SURGEON J. B. SCRIVEN, formerly in the Calcutta General Hospital, has been appointed Principal and Professor of Surgery in the Lahore Medical College.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT has begun well in Lucknow, being inaugurated by an admirable address from Mr. G. Campbell, the judicial commissioner. At a public meeting of all the Christian residents, it was resolved to raise a regiment to be called the "Oude Volunteer Brigade," and the 1st company to be the Bailie Guard company. Mr. Wingfield, the commissioner, is to be asked to act as colonel. As the two companies of the Calcutta corps are now almost full, a third has been formed, and it has been resolved to appoint an honorary colonel.

A SWINDLER.—The Mofussilite describes the adventures of a most accomplished swindler who has been visiting many of the chief towns in the North-West. He was fortified with a number of cards, on which were written the names of gentlemen in the army and the civil service. By a dexterous use of these, and by his prepossessing address, he victimised a large number of gentlemen in the Mofussil, from the hotel at Ranee-gunge to the Delhi Bank at Delhi, until at last he was handed over by Mr. Parry, the manager, to the deputy commissioner.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—Public Opinion states that a commission is now sitting to consider the subject of coolie emigration. The members are Dr. Mouat, Captain Rennie, and Dr. Chevers.

AN "UGLY BUSINESS."—The Oude Gazette mentions that the Supreme Government have "deputed a special commissioner to Oude, to investigate the circumstances under which the many lakhs of rupees' worth of Government promissory notes were purchased by certain Government officials and others, immediately after the recapture of Lucknow. This inquiry originates out of that extraordinary case of Kooban Alli, an ex-sheristadar, which was lately tried by the Deputy Commissioner, and Kooban Alli convicted and sentenced to eight years' penal servitude. We regret to say that a couple of officers of the Oude Commission are mentioned in connection with the ugly business." The above is only too correct, or falls below the truth. Others than the two officers alluded to, military men connected with the prize agency, are implicated.—Friend of India.

THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE.—The Home Government have sanctioned the grant of the corner of the Plain of Calcutta between Government House and Dhurmollah as a site for the Dalhousie Institute. Precious as the Plain is to the health of the city, the erection of a noble building and the conversion of this spot into a garden will add to the beauty of Chowringhee and the health of the locality, now the filthiest in the vicinity. On the corresponding corner, opposite the Supreme Court, the great pile of public offices which it is proposed to build should be erected. The plan of the Dalhousie Institute must be submitted for the approval of Government before the 1st of May. If it is decided to erect the public offices on the opposite side, both plans should correspond. A sum of two lakhs of rupees is required for the Institute, of which nearly one has yet to be raised. The committee appeal to the public, and ought to meet a warm response.

PUNJAB FINANCE.—The shoe is beginning to pinch in the Punjab, as well as elsewhere, in the most tender place of all, the Finance Department. Some two months ago, when money was plentiful, the authorities were urged to sell bills on Calcutta on a larger scale than they were inclined to do. But they did not require money, they replied. Well, the consequence is, that money is become so scarce that they are now obliged to enlarge the amount of supply bills from two lakhs to five and a-half; they are obliged to offer two per cent. premium for their bills, and they will yet suffer the humiliation, as they have been during the past six weeks, of submitting to the dictation of the mercantile community of the Punjab.

ALL ROUND THE CLOCK.—The Electric Telegraph department has issued the following notice:—"In future, when expressing times in this (Calcutta Telegraph) Gazette, the civil day will be considered as consisting of twenty-four hours, the hours after noon being continued as thirteen, fourteen, and so on up to midnight, or twenty-fourth, the new day commencing as 0. h. Thus fifteen minutes past four of the afternoon of the 12th November will be expressed as November 12d. 16h. 15m."

THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR.—The Calcutta Gazette contains a narrative of the steps taken by the Maharajah of Gwalior to capture a body of 300 rebels and dacoits under the notorious Dowlat Singh, who, from their hiding-place in his territory, plundered part of Etawah. Several were captured, and sentenced to fine and imprisonment, and Nodourie, their head-quarters, was destroyed. To prevent future raids twenty-two guard posts have been established along the Gwalior frontier. There is every hope that Dowlat Singh will be arrested. The Magistrate of Etawah reports that the Maharajah is determined "to root out every trace of the system of affording asylum to predatory bands."

THE VICEROY A MAN OF WAR.—A report having reached Indore of the approaching visit of the Governor-general, the rebels in the country have all fled to the south of Gooena.

LIEUT. FOSTER, I. N.—The steamer Assyria has been engaged to survey the Punjab rivers, and Lieutenant Foster has been employed on the duty.

DELHI, Nov. 12.—Morning and evening parades are now the order of the day, preparing for the arrival of the great chief, the particular time of whose advent is not precisely known as yet, but which is of sufficient importance as an event to render all sorts of preparations necessary. By all accounts the chief has a great eye for defects, and is not long in discovering a fault where one really exists. The Dewallee Mela is unusually gay this year, which, I suppose, we must take as a sign of the prosperity of the inhabitants, if prosperity consists in making holiday, wearing holiday clothes, and investing sums of money in the purchase of tawdry obscene images, and very fly-bitten and marked sweetmeats of anything but a tempting exterior. This, to say nothing of the gambling which goes on at the Dewallee, and in which every Hindoo, more or less, tries his luck, ought to dispel the generally-adopted opinion that the "poor natives" are irretrievably ruined. The fact is, it is more the other way; the natives are thriving, well-to do in the world, whilst Europeans are the real sufferers in every respect. Our deputy commissioner seems to look upon Delhi as another Umritsir, apparently forgetful of the scenes enacted here in 1857. At any rate, there is a strong inclination to gloss over the past, and make, by outward show, at least, "a bright future." Mr. Riddell and Dr. Paton, the two great lights of the postal department, are here just now; perhaps that is the reason why the dawn is delivered so much later than usual. I believe they leave in a day or two. The weather just now is charming. The cold weather vegetables are becoming apparent in dallies despatched by the head gardener to favoured individuals in power. I partook of the first salad of the season from Skinner's garden two days ago, and I think it rather early for it and cauliflowers; both were very fine. Travellers are passing through daily; some make a halt a day or so, others go on, most progressing down country. The Dawk Bungalow and Hotel are full every day; both should be driving a good trade just now. I say above 'the weather is charming,' but a little rain would make it more so, though, I fear, it would be too late for the prospects of the agriculturists. Horseflesh just now is rather expensive to keep up, with gram at thirteen seers per rupee.—Englishman.

MR. J. GIBB, brother-in-law of the late Mr. Wilson, has been appointed Secretary to the Civil Finance Commission, in the place of Mr. Halsey, who has received a district appointment in the North-West Provinces.

SAUGOR.—A grand durbar is to be held at Saugor, in Central India, where all the chiefs of the surrounding States and provinces are to attend.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT.—A notification in the Calcutta Gazette appoints Sir Bartle Frere, president of the council and deputy governor of the fort and garrison of Fort William during the absence of the governor-general. The secretaries who accompany Lord Canning are:—Mr. A. R. Young as secretary, and Mr. C. U. Aitchison as under-secretary in the Foreign, Home and Financial departments; Major-general Birch and Captain B. E. Bacon as military secretary and assistant secretary, and Captain Dickens as public works secretary.

THE HOWRAH MECHANICS' INSTITUTE appears to progress very favourably, and promises to be the means of doing much good for the community on the other side of the water. The first report shows that the institution is sound as to funds, its library is increasing, the lectures have been numerous and good, and the reading-room is well supplied. The committee calls for the zealous co-operation of all those interested in the well-being of the institution, as well as in the improvement which follows on an establishment like this, where pleasant recreation and the acquisition of knowledge are afforded, and they are anxiously turning their attention to further improvements for this cold season.

CAPTAIN JOHNSON has been ordered by Government to survey all the confiscated States in the Delhi districts, and Captain Robinson to survey the Gwalior, Central India, and Pajpootana States.

COLONEL WARRE, military secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, has resigned his appointment, on his regiment, the 57th, being ordered to New Zealand, to enable him to join it on service. Colonel Warre, we understand, only waits until his successor can relieve him, when he will proceed to join his regiment via Australia.

THE BRITISH SHIP "WARRIOR QUEEN" has been engaged for the conveyance of invalids to England, and will leave for Calcutta as soon as she can be got ready.

CASHMEER.—It has been finally arranged that Rajah Jawahir Sing, of Cashmeer, is to receive a lakh of rupees a year from the Cashmeer Treasury, in lieu of claims, out of all which arose his attempt on the throne and a civil war.

COPPER COIN.—The Warrior Queen has just brought out from England six hundred chests of copper coins, worth about 60,000 rupees. Only about four lakhs of the ten lakhs ordered by the late Mr. Wilson remain to be received. The contractors for these coins are Messrs. Heaton and Sons, of Birmingham.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 23).—Little business has been transacted; the holidays interfering with the usual routine. Native dealers continue to hold firm at the high prices already quoted.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 23).—Piece Goods, owing to the recent advices from England, have been firmly maintained by importers, and although we do not alter materially our last quotations we must add that, generally speaking, the prices of almost all kinds are a little higher. The state of the market is rather unsettled, and without some improvement in the principal up-country markets we cannot look for a better state of things in our market. The consumption continues limited to Bengal only, and there is nothing, or almost nothing, doing for the Upper Provinces. Fans are also very firm, and some descriptions commanded lately better prices. Metals quiet at former rates.

GANJAM COOLIES.—The emigration agent of the Ceylon Government has sent in a report to Colombo on the capabilities of the district of Ganjam for supplying labourers. An able-bodied labourer there is paid at the rate of only 1 anna 4 pie a day, and his rice costs 1 rupee 6 annas for 82 lbs. He can live on 1 anna a day. A sheep is sold for Rs. 1-2, and a dozen of fowls for 2-4. From 15,000 to 20,000 labourers could be easily procured, and a similar number from the adjoining southern districts of the northern Circar. Ganjam has partaken less of the general prosperity and rise of prices than any other part of India. The agent expects to secure emigrants with ease, as the coming crops will be below the average.

THE WALTAIR RIFLE CLUB is hard at rifle practice every morning. The residents of Vizagapatam are about to raise a volunteer corps. They are more than fifty in number.

COCHIN PEPPER.—Mr. Forbes recently introduced a Bill into the Legislative Council to raise the export duty on Cochin and Travancore pepper at the port of Cochin to 20 per cent. ad valorem, so as to prevent the extensive smuggling which has hitherto been carried on. The local journal says the Bill would effect this object if the produce of the two native States had no other outlet than Cochin. But as the greater portion of the native territory is "within easy reach of the backwater, and the expense of carriage by boats is very small, the growers of pepper would find but little difficulty in conveying their produce to Tanoor, Ponany, and other places for shipment, so as to avoid the heavier duty, to the serious detriment of our trade and loss of revenue to the native State." The Bill should assimilate the export duty between British Cochin and northern ports on the backwater.

RETRENCHMENTS IN BURMAH.—Colonel Balfour, c.b., of the Madras army, has paid a visit to Maulmain and Rangoon, for the purpose of carrying on his investigations as a member of the military finance commission, which is revising the whole of that branch of expenditure throughout India. The result is, that in British Burmah expenditure may be reduced by between forty and fifty thousand pounds. This is effected by abolishing the commissariat offices at Maulmain, Promé, Henzadah, Bassein, and Meaday, and by breaking up the elephant and cattle establishments located at Pegu and Rangoon. This last-named place is to be the head-quarters of the commissariat department, which will be placed under a deputy commissary-general, who will also be controller of commissariat accounts. At Tonghoo there will be a branch commissariat office, on account of that place being the head-quarters of a brigade. Such, in brief, is a sketch of this sweeping change as gathered from the columns of the Rangoon Times; and the fact that so large a reduction is possible, shows with what extravagance British Burmah has hitherto been governed.—Athenæum.

MAULMAIN.—A Volunteer Rifle Corps has been organised in Maulmain, numbering at the outset sixty members.

A MADRAS "CANARD."—The Madras Times gravely says:—"We have been informed that Sir Charles Trevelyan was offered the appointment of Financier to the Turkish Government, but declined it."

IMPORTANT TO "CABBIES."—A correspondent of the Hurkaru, giving an account of a pleasure trip to Rangoon in the steamer Burmah, says:—"The public conveyances, of which there is a good supply, throw the people of Calcutta quite into the shade. They are clean, well horsed with Burmah ponies, whose speed and endurance are proverbial. All fares are regulated at 6 annas an hour, a notice of which is painted inside the carriages under their respective numbers. Upon refusal to carry a passenger without lawful excuse, or any other improper conduct on the part of the driver, they are subject to a fine of 100 rupees."

SATURDAY HALF-HOLIDAY.—The mercantile and trading community of Madras are about to follow the example of the Trades' Association of Calcutta, in granting a half-holiday every Saturday to their assistants.

MAJOR J. K. SPENCE has been appointed Judicial Commissioner of Nagpore. Major Balmain is to assist him in clearing off Mr. Plowden's heavy arrears. Lieut. Glasford is deputy commissioner in charge of the Godavery Districts, the cession of which by the Nizam we recently announced.

CHOLERA.—The Madras Times says the number of lives cut off by the recent outbreak of cholera which raged in the city for two months was 3,000. During the whole of 1859 it was only 1,061, and during 1858 it was 2,047. The sanitary state of the town had a great deal to do with the mortality. The worst drained and filthiest part suffered the most, while among the higher classes of Europeans there were only three deaths. Not one case occurred in the Fort Barracks improved by Sir Charles Trevelyan.

AN ANGLO-INDIAN ADVENTURER.—The Indian Statesman sketches the career of its founder and late editor, Mr. F. E. Green, which is but a type of the history of many adventurers in India. He was the son of a clergyman of the Church of England, and received the highest university education. Unwilling to enter into business, he quarrelled with his family and left England. He visited the West Indies and South America, and on his return, after five years' absence from England, his circumstances and intense love of music led him to accept the office of band-master of a regiment in India. He devoted the much leisure at his disposal to study, and five years ago became known to the people of Madras as secretary to the club. On Mr. J. B. Norton's being engaged on behalf of the Tanjore Ranees he passed over the management of the Madras Athenæum to Mr. Green, who, three years after, left it and founded the Indian Statesman, a weekly journal. Mr. Green was subject to consumption, which, with a complication of other disorders, carried him off in the 42nd year of his age. All the local journals speak highly of him. His paper is conducted by the editor of the now extinct Madras Spectator.

A MANLY WOMAN.—An interesting ceremony took place at Palghat not long ago, on the occasion of the completion of the largest stone bridge on the line of railway connecting the Malabar and Coromandel coasts. The bridge spans the Kotagadu four miles from Palghat, and consists of 15 arches of 30 feet each. The chief engineer, Mr. Keppel, happened to be present on the occasion. The keystone of the last arch was prepared for its destined place by a lady, who officiated with a silver trowel and a handsome tray containing chunam. When the party resumed their seats in the train this lady got upon the engine, and with the assistance of the driver took the train over the bridge for two or three miles, and then back again to Palghat.

MR. T. H. BULLOCK, deputy commissioner of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, has resigned his appointment, previous to taking leave to England. Mr. Bullock is of the Uncovenanted Service, and has done most distinguished service in these districts.

LORD HARRIS.—In acknowledging the copy of his portrait subscribed for by some of the residents of Madras, Lord Harris, the late Governor, says:—"It is my intention to have it removed shortly to my family place, where, I trust, it will remain permanently, a source of pleasure and of pride to myself and my descendants. I beg to take this opportunity of repeating what I stated orally before leaving to my friends at Madras, that I shall ever consider this mark of their regard and esteem as one of the greatest honours of my life, and that I shall ever remember this, and the many acts of kindness and support which I received from them during my residence there, with feelings of sincere gratitude."

THE FREE CHURCH MISSION at Madras have been increasing the number of their Female Schools. They have now 800 girls in attendance, and in two schools have raised Rs. 50 in the shape of fees. Forty of these girls have been baptized and married to Christian converts during the past few years. Besides the Mission Schools, there are six others in Madras, conducted by natives themselves, with an attendance of about 360. Twenty years ago not one girl could be bribed by money to attend a public school.

THE COMMISSIONER OF NAGPOOR has applied for additional forces to enable him to effectually disperse the bands of rebels who have gathered in the Nagpoor territory.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

H.M.'s SCHOONER "EMILY," I.N.—The steamer sent to search for H.M.'s schooner Emily, I.N., has reported that no tidings of her could be obtained, and that she has in all probability foundered in the cyclone of April last.

THE BOMBAY ARMY is to be reduced in strength from and after the 1st of next January. Two companies are to be struck off each regiment, which will thus reduce the number from ten to eight. The only regiments excepted are the 3rd and 5th, which are on foreign service; and the order extends to the two Belooch regiments and the two regiments of Jacob's rifles.

THE BOMBAY RIFLE CORPS numbers seventy members, all Europeans. The colour of the uniform adopted is a faint brown. They have resolved not to admit Eurasians into the company, a great mistake at the outset. Let the Eurasians raise a corps of their own, for all will eventually form companies of one regiment. The question of class was easily settled by the old Calcutta Volunteers. The companies were composed of those who resided in separate districts of the city. Those of the same position naturally fell into the same company, and all met as gentlemen, not according to their colour. The staff of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company has raised a volunteer corps in Surat. At the outset forty members were enrolled. The railway assistants constituted the chief part of the volunteers who accompanied Colonel V. Eyre, C.B., from Shahabad. They are more exposed in detached parties to sudden attack than any other class.

CELEBS IN SEARCH OF A WIDOW.—A native widower, in a letter to a Bombay native paper, advertises for a widow of his caste:—"I need no money; I am willing and able to maintain one whom I shall marry. I have heard many people talk highly on this subject. Of those who say that they are in favour of re-marriage, I only want fifteen or twenty families, or their male members, to side with me. Let them find out a widow for me, and render me their help, and that will be sufficient. You need not give out my name at once; but kindly enlist the names of such as will help me, and when the proper number is registered, please see that they are men of principle, and if you will be satisfied with them, I shall have no objection to be introduced to them."

BRIDGE OVER THE TAPTEE.—The opening of the railway bridge over the Taptee was inaugurated on the 31st October. A letter from Surat in the Bombay Gazette describes the ceremony. All day the road leading to Phoolpara was crowded with people. At five o'clock the engine came up decorated with flags. After crossing the bridge and proceeding a little way up the line sixteen carriages were attached to the engine, and the train returned to the bridge. In the middle it stopped short, to allow the usual quantity of champagne to be expended in christening the newly-opened work. This bridge, though of very solid and durable construction, is said to be very light in appearance. From the bottom of the lowest pile to the top of the rails is about eighty feet, and from the river at low water to the same place is forty-five feet. The total weight of iron employed in the bridge is 3,000 tons. The whole work was completed within twelve months, of which four were not available for work on account of the monsoon.

PROGRESS.—A Deckanee Brahmin has started across the kalapanee to China. The Brahmins of the two regiments of Bengal Infantry, recently in China, not only ate animal food when they could get it, but exchanged part of their allowance of rice for mutton. What Roman Catholicism is to the Irish in Ireland caste is to the Hindoo in his own country. The moment they leave it, both are glad to throw off the yoke.

NEWS FROM PERSIA.—A correspondent of the Bombay Times writes from Bagdad:—"The Americans are likely to anticipate us in the navigation of the Persian Gulf. Two American vessels were unloading at Bussorah, and the owner of one of them was determined to keep a regular trade to that port. An outbreak of the fanatic Mussulmans at Bagdad, for the slaughter of Christians, was stopped only by the energetic action of the English and French consuls-general."

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Nov. 16.—The London mail of Sept. 26 only arrived here on the 14th instant.

The intelligence from the North is of the very highest importance, as the ratifications of the Treaty of Tien-tsin have been exchanged, and a Convention has been entered into, containing important new stipulations. These were rung from the Chinese under the threat of sacking Peking, and can hardly be said to have been assented to by them, but they offered a new starting point of affairs in China.

In our last Overland we mentioned that the Northern gate of Peking was in the hands of the Allies, having been ceded to them under the threat of bombarding the city; that Mr. Harry Parkes and Mr. Loch had been safely returned, and that the army of Sang-ko-lin-sin was still in the field.

Immediately after this the remains of the unfortunate prisoners who had been barbarously murdered by the cruelties inflicted on them by the rude Mongolian troops, were given up. Messrs. Parkes and Loch had met with some ill-treatment, and endured the dread anxiety of being several times ordered out for execution; but they were comparatively fortunate in the captors into whose hands they fell, and latterly they were well treated in Peking, under the orders of Prince Kung. Next in comparative good fortune to them were Captain Brabazon, R.A., and the Abbé de Luc, who were simply beheaded by the orders of a Tartar general who was mortally wounded at the time. We deeply regret to say that Mr. Bowly, the Times correspondent, met a more horrible fate. Being tied up in the brutal manner in which the Mongols are accustomed to treat their prisoners, and most scantily supplied with food, they gradually sunk beneath their sufferings and finally expired. There is no reason to suppose that the Tartars actually intended to torture them to death, as they are always in the habit of so treating even prisoners whose lives they wish to preserve, but such was the fact to all intents and purposes. The French officers who were murdered were the Abbé de Luc, Colonel Grandchamps, Intendant Debut, and M. Aden.

The retribution demanded for these cruel acts was certainly not a whit too severe, and it is to be regretted that some of the brutal perpetrators were not secured. As some of these dark deeds had been perpetrated at the Yuen-ming-yuen, that palace was utterly destroyed, and 300,000 taels, or about £100,000 was exacted by Sir Hope Grant for the families of his murdered countrymen, and as an indemnity to the survivors for the sufferings which they had undergone, while 200,000 were exacted by the French General for a similar purpose.

On the 17th, the remains of Messrs. Bowly, De Normann and Anderson were buried with great solemnity in the Russian cemetery outside the walls of Peking.

On the 18th the Emperor's Summer Palace was totally destroyed by fire, property to an immense value being thereby destroyed.

On the 15th October Sir Hope Grant had issued a proclamation calling for the payment of the money on account of the prisoners, and the signature of a Convention, under the threat of sacking Peking. This was responded to by the payment of the money on the 20th, and the signing of the Convention of the 24th, by Lord Elgin and Prince Kung. On the latter day the ratified treaty of Tien-tsin was exchanged. The following are the articles of the Convention, so far as they have transpired:—

In Art. 1 the Emperor expresses his regret at the misunderstanding occasioned by the affair of Taku.

Art. 2 revokes the consent given by the Queen to the conditional suspension of her Treaty right to place a Minister in permanent residence at Peking. Her Majesty resumes the exercise of her full right to keep a Minister there, or when it suits her.

Art. 3 provides the payment of an indemnity of 8,000,000 taels in all; that is, 4,000,000 more than the sum already granted by the Treaty of Tien-tsin. Tien-tsin is to pay half a million by the 30th November; Canton 333,333 taels, less the advances towards the Shamen site, by the same day. The rest is to be paid out of the Customs, one-fifth of the revenue of which will be taken quarterly till the whole is paid.

Art. 4 opens Tien-tsin to trade.

Art. 5 removes the interdiction on emigration to the British colonies or elsewhere, and provides that regulations shall be fixed for the protection of the emigrant.

Art. 6 cedes to the British Crown the portion of Cowloon now held under lease, and makes it part and parcel of the colony of Hong Kong.

Art. 7 provides for the immediate operation of the Treaty of Tien-tsin and this Convention of Peking.

Art. 8 provides for the promulgation of both the above instruments throughout the Empire.

Art. 9 provides for the immediate evacuation of Chusan by the British force now garrisoning it. The rest of our army in China will remain at Tien-tsin, or Ta-ku, or Tung-chow, or Canton, or at all these places, as the British Government shall decide.

Owing to rumours, conveyed by the Catholics in Peking, of intended treachery on the part of the Chinese, Lord Elgin was accompanied to the Hall of Ceremonies by a force of about 3,000 men. Prince Kung, the Emperor's brother, met him at the door of the Hall, and took the lower seat, leaving to His Excellency the seat of honour. The Princes of the Council were present, and it is said that Prince Kung produced the Emperor's vermilion signature, with an impression of the imperial seal, authorising him to sign the Convention. Both Lord Elgin and Prince Kung demeaned themselves towards each other in a cold, if not even sulky manner, and the refreshments usual on such occasions were dispensed with.

The arrangements following this Convention were that the Allies are to fall back from Peking; that Tien-tsin is to be garrisoned by 3,000 English and a small French force; that a sufficient force will be kept at the Taku forts; that a part of the French force will winter at Shanghai; and, of the English force, one part go home, and another winter at Hongkong. It is reported that the 1st Royals, the 8th, the Queen's, the Buffs, and the Marines, will proceed to England.

At the time the Convention was signed the Emperor was at his "Zheho" in Tartary, whither he had been advised to proceed by the warlike Sangko-lin-sin. H. B. Loch, Esq., goes to England by this mail, with the ratified Treaty and the Convention; and will doubtless receive a due reward for all that he has undergone. The Hon. Maj. Anson, member for Lichfield, also goes home with despatches from Sir Hope Grant. The Hon. Mr. Bruce and the French Minister, M. de Bourboulon, have left Shanghai for Tien-tsin. It is rumoured that Mr. Bruce will resume the conduct of affairs, and that Lord Elgin will almost immediately return home, which would be an untoward event.—Overland China Mail.

SWATOW.—We learn from Swatow that the prisoners were delivered up, and everything settled peaceably, on the morning of the 7th Nov. The prisoners were five men belonging to the gunboat Weasel, who were captured at the village of Bochoey. On the morning of the 5th the High-flyer arrived off the village, having on board two Chinese officers deputed by Governor-General Laou, and an interpreter. The holders of the five captives required, as terms of their release, perfect immunity for the raid on the foreigners at Double Island, indemnity for the effects of the gunboat's bombardment, and hostages in the shape of shroffs to guarantee the fulfilment of these conditions. The interpreter (Mr. Mayers, interpreter to the Allied Commissioners) in concert with the Chinese officers, engaged in fresh negotiations with a view to renew hostilities should such negotiations be as fruitless as before. Captain Heath, however, we understand, had ignored the cause of the bombardment of the village by the Weasel, as not furnishing sufficient ground for vigorous measures, so full of risk as those undertaken, and the present arrangement has terminated the matter, with the people at least, although probably not with the British officials.—China Mail.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ALLIED FORCES.

CAMP BEFORE PEKIN, Oct. 24, 1860.

In my last, despatched on the 13th or 14th instant, I told you of the occupation and sacking of the Emperor's Palace of Yuen-min-yuen, and the surrender by the authorities of the An-tin-gate (Gate of Peace) a quarter of an hour before the wall was to have been breached, if not opened peaceably. The force that then entered still occupy the position; the French on the east, the British on the western ramparts, with field-pieces commanding the city and walls. Several brass guns were taken, one of very large size, eleven feet long, ornamented with devices and Manchew characters, the others of various dimensions. There is also one made of wood and cleverly sheathed with copper, an excellent imitation of a brass gun. No one is allowed to pass through the gate without a pass, and then only permitted to advance about 100 yards, where a rope is stretched across also to keep the Chinese back, who congregate there in hundreds to look at the barbarians, and listen to the bands. There are six shops within this space, in which there is only grain, dried fruits, joss paper, &c., for sale. There is also a market for fruit, vegetables, &c. From the rampart there is an extensive view over the city and surrounding country, but there are so many trees in the city, that one can see but little of it, the houses being principally of only one story. The public buildings are higher, the roofs of which being of glazed tiles, green or yellow, have a good effect. The streets are wide and more regular than in the southern cities, but the houses and shops have an appearance of poverty and dilapidation that was unexpected in the capital of the Celestial Empire.

Of the unfortunate party that were captured by San-ko-lin-sin's army, on the 18th ultimo, at Chan-kia-wan, Captain Brabazon, Quartermaster-general, R.A., the Abbé Luc, and some French belonging to the Scientific Society, are still unaccounted for. The two former are believed to have been decapitated by order of a Tartar general who had them prisoners with him. He was wounded in the battle of the 21st, and in exasperation ordered their execution. The account is given by Chinese Catholics, and the Russians say two Europeans were decapitated at the Stone Bridge, Pah-li-Chao, near Tung-chow, where the Tartar camp was. The authorities pretend ignorance on the subject, but the circumstance of the bodies not being produced gives colour to the truth of the report. The number of French who were of the party is not correctly ascertained, but there appear to be four or five still unaccounted for. Those who providentially escaped, after much torture, are Messrs. H. S. Parkes, c.b., and H. Loch; Capt. Escayracke, a French officer; five French privates, and eleven Sowars; together, nineteen. Those who unhappily sunk under the inhuman treatment of the barbarous, cruel foe, and whose remains were sent into the camp are—W. de Normann, Attaché to the British Legation at Shanghai; M. T. W. Bowlby, special correspondent of the Times; Lieut. and Adjutant Anderson, Fane's horse; Private Phipps, King's Dragoon Guards, four Sowars, and three French, together eleven. The bodies could only be recognised by the dresses in which in some instances they appeared to have been wrapt after having been stripped. A description of the state of these poor victims is too horrifying to be related. The tightness of the cord with which they were bound ate into the flesh, and caused a lingering and painful death by mortification. The bodies of the Sowars were given to the Sikh cavalry, who, as is their custom, burnt them. The French were delivered to our allies, and the four British were buried in the Russian cemetery, outside the An-tin gate of Peking, on the 17th.

At noon the procession formed at the Llama Temple, and marched in the following order to the Russian cemetery, half a mile from the city, the band of the rifles playing a slow march:—

One Troop Dragoon Guards.
One Troop Fane's Horse.
An Officer and Twenty Men of each European corps (armed.)
The Commander-in-Chief, } Chief Mourners.
The Earl of Elgin, }

The corpses on gun-waggons, each drawn by six horses. Mourners: Nearly all the officers of the English, and a large number of the French army, including General Montauban, Commander-in-Chief.

The burial service was read by the Rev. Mr. McGhee, chaplain to the British forces. The priest of the Greek Church attended by request, in his pontifical robes, holding on high the emblem of our faith. Father Makee, the Roman Catholic priest attached to the British army, was present. Three volleys were fired by the infantry. It was a mournful and affecting ceremony to witness these poor Christian victims of heathen barbarism laid in their untimely graves. The cemetery is about a quarter of a mile outside the northern wall of the city. The grave is on high ground, just within the inner gate. The coffins were laid side by side from the north to south—Private Phipps, then Lieut. Anderson, then Mr. de Normann, and then Mr. Bowlby. The Royal Engineers are to place a tomb over the poor fellows, and if the British Government does not erect a monument to their memory, it is to be hoped that it will be done by private subscription.

The Chinese authorities have been made to pay the sum of 300,000 taels of silver (say £100,000) for the families and friends of the deceased. The exact amount for each will be decided by H.M.'s Government, the maximum it is said will be £10,000, and the survivors who escaped will participate, in consideration for their sufferings. One Sowar has died since he came into camp from the effect of his injuries.—China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Nov. 30.—The coffee shipping season has regularly commenced, and six ships have sailed during the fortnight with cargoes. Four ships to London have taken 14,088 cwt. Plantation; 2,923 Native; total 17,011. One for Liverpool has taken 1,180 Plantation and 295 Native, together 1,484; while the Marion for Melbourne has taken 1,192 Plantation, and 1,212 Native, in all 2,404. The addition thus made to our export is—Plantation, 16,469 cwt.; Native, 4,430 cwt.; total 20,899 cwt. Our exports to date of both kinds are considerably in excess of the figures shown for the corresponding periods in previous years, but we fancy the falling off in Native will be speedily manifest.

Some rain fell during the fortnight and there is the promise of more, but it has come all too late for much of the coffee crop.

The Immigration Commissioners wish to levy no tax in 1861, and we believe the Governor would gladly see the whole scheme at an end. But we believe it is determined to keep Government to their part of the bargain, and to insist on the steamers being got out and set a-going, without which the trial of the scheme cannot be said to be complete.

A good many changes in the service are reported, and there are others impending. Mr. Dyke, the oldest civil servant but one in the island, has applied for leave to visit England, after an uninterrupted residence of thirty-eight years. This would cause an upward move, which is greatly desiderated by those whose hearts are sick with hope deferred. On the approaching departure, too, of Mr. Justice Sterling, we might presume that Messrs. Morgan and Lawson would take higher rank. On quitting the positions they recently occupied the highest possible testimony was borne to their merits. This was especially the case in regard to Mr. Morgan, whom the bar thanked for his unvarying courtesy, complimenting him on the improvement in appeal decisions consequent on his intimate acquaintance with the Dutch and local laws, thanking him also for assistance rendered out of court when applied to. Such being the feelings of the bar, feelings in which the public share, it might be supposed that there could be no doubt at all of Mr. Morgan's reverting to his seat in the Supreme Court. But the question arises "What is to be done with the Queen's advocate?" He is such an abstruse lawyer that the Executive is unable to appreciate his merits. So the rumour goes, that Mr. Morgan is to become acting Queen's advocate, Mr. Thomson taking, not Mr. Morgan's place as district judge, but becoming the associate of Sir Edward Cressy. The brilliant knight may require a foil, but, in justice to Mr. Thomson, we protest against his being put to such a use. If Mr. Thomson is too profound for the Government, how will he suit appellants, of whom stupidity may be predicated from the bare fact of their being at law?

Unless that other brilliant judge, Mr. Justice Temple, promises to translate Mr. Thomson's judgments, we fear that the proposed arrangement will end in confusion worse confounded. The railway problem is not the only difficult one which Sir Charles MacCarthy has to solve, without trusting to much assistance from his constituted legal adviser.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—The fortnight's intelligence from Netherlands India brought by the mail steamer is unusually scanty. No additional news had been received from Banjermaessing or Ceram. The west monsoon had set in with the usual heavy rains and squalls of wind, causing considerable damage in different places. The ringleader in the proposed mutiny of the Swiss soldiers at Djocjocarta was executed at that place on the 7th November. Several other mutineers have had their sentences of death commuted into imprisonment with hard labour for terms of six and ten years. Four men and a woman were killed by lightning in the Residency of Buitenzorg during the month of October last.—Singapore Free Press, Nov. 22.

THE BUGIS.—What is called the Bugis season promises to be unusually favourable this year, judging from the number of boats which have already arrived and are still expected to arrive. We are glad to find, from the arrival of several boats from Boni, that the partial occupation of that country by the Dutch is not likely to interrupt the trade between that State and Singapore, as might have been perhaps expected. The Bugis, however, are an active and enterprising people, and they are not easily to be diverted from the prosecution of their trading voyages. Peace having been restored in Boni, although with the loss of its independence, the Nakindas have laid down their weapons and weighed up their boats from the bottoms of the rivers and creeks where they had sunk them during the period of hostilities, and they are again resorting to Singapore with their usual cargoes. The boats from other places in Celebes—such as Makassar, Pari Pari, Mandar, &c.—appear to be also as numerous at least as in former years; while from Sumbawa, Lombok, Bally, and the other islands where the Bugis are settled, they are still arriving in large numbers. We trust the present tightness amongst the Chinese traders will not operate unfavourably for the Bugis. It would be advantageous for the latter if they could get into the way of dealing directly with the European merchants, instead of having to pay a heavy tax both on their import and export cargoes to the Chinese, who now interpose between the two.—Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Oct. 21.—The Ameer sent word to Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan to tell his son, Sirdar Ibrahim Khan, to get himself ready for Toorkistan, as Sirdar Zakurya Khan, his elder son, had refused to go to that place. Ibrahim Khan said in reply that Zakurya Khan was getting twelve thousand rupees, while he only four thousand; if the Ameer would be so kind as to allow him what his brother got, he, with his family, would leave for Toorkistan without any delay. The Ameer asked Shere Allee Khan, who was to accompany the Ambassador of Bookhara from Cabool? He said, Akhoondzada Sirajooddeen was the proper person for such an embassy. The Akhoondzada, having been asked whether he again wished to go to Bookhara, willingly obeyed the order.—Oct. 25.—The servant of the Ambassador of Bookhara waited on the Ameer and informed him that two of his master's slaves had disappeared since yesterday, and begged the Ameer to have them searched for. The Ameer got very much displeased, and said, whence should he bring the ghoolam buchelas (slaves)? If his master wanted them he would give his own. The Ameer having been told that the Ambassador had privately made enquiries regarding the members of the family of Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, turned to the Ambassador and made the following remark in the durbar:—"Did your master, the King of Bokhara, send me a list of his and his chief's families, that you were making such useless investigations? It was really very improper in such a respectable man as you."—Oct. 26.—The Ameer, being this day invited by Sirdar Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, went to spend the day with his young children in the fort Aleebad, and remained there till evening.—Oct. 27.—Agreeably to order, Mirza Ahmad Khan called on the ambassador of the King of Bookhara and brought him to the Ameer. The Ameer conferred on the ambassador a khillut, consisting of two valuable shawls and cloaks, and 501 rupees cash for road expenses; permitted his return to Bookhara and wished him a safe journey. The servants of the ambassador were also presented with cash, viz., to twenty servants 15 rupees each, and to ten servants 10 rupees each. A camel hair cloak and a whole piece of white muslin also granted to each servant. The ambassador taking leave of the Ameer rode up to Fort of Quazee with all his men; thence he will go back to Bookhara. The terms of the Ameer's alliance with the King of Bookhara are not known, but from the honourable reception of the ambassador, it is believed by the Cabool people that the Ameer was inclined to be friendly with the King of Bookhara.—Oct. 28.—A letter from Sirdar Mohamed Ameer Khan at Kandahar, stating that he has remitted 9,000 rupees for the expense of his son Sirdar Ismail Khan, and requesting the Ameer to send his son to Kandahar, was received. The Ameer accordingly sent for Sirdar Mohamed Ismail Khan, and after communicating him the contents of his father's letter, directed him to prepare for his return to Kandahar. Akhoond Zada Surajooddeen being entrusted by the Ameer with a valuable khillut for the King of Bookhara, left Cabool for the purpose of bringing a reply to the Ameer's letter addressed to the King of Bookhara.—Delhi Gazette.

All sums of money heretofore transmitted to the brigade major, Fort William, for the payment of the passage of soldiers who have purchased their discharge, will henceforth be sent to Capt. Horan, comdt. and paymr. of invalids, Fort William. Money sent from England for the same purpose will likewise be received by him.

Savings bank remittances directed by the paymr. queen's troops to be sent to the brigade major, and the discharge documents of soldiers proceeding to England will also be forwarded to the comdt. and paymr. of invalids.

Promotion of Cadets.

No. 1,115 of 1860.—In continuation of G. G. O. No. 9,637 of Dec. 9 last, the following paragraphs of a military letter from the Rt. Hon. the Secy. of State for India, No. 287, dated July 30, 1860, are published for general information.

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 107, dated May 7, 1860, submitting certain questions in regard to the promotion of the young officers who have been placed on the general list under the instructions contained in my despatch, No. 343, of Sept. 30, 1859; and to inform you in reply that in order to meet the difficulty which has arisen from some of the young officers in question having arrived in the country before others, who stood above them on the general list, it has been determined that the officers shall be permitted to reckon the time qualifying for promotion from the date of sailing from England, which date also regulates their standing in the army.

2. In the case of infantry cadets, who have passed through the College at Addiscombe, the year's service qualifying for promotion will be held to commence from the date of their last public examination.

3. The promotion of the ensigns on the general list will date from the vacancy, provided that they have completed the requisite service, otherwise from the date of completion of such service.

4. The promotion of the posted ensigns will be regulated by the established usage of the service, as the second paragraph of your despatch.

Court Martial.

CAPTAIN HALSTED.

At an European General Court Martial, held at Thayetmyo, on Thursday, May 31, Captain Charles Frankland Fleetwood Halsted, of the 11th N.I., was arraigned on the following charges, viz.:—

First.—For highly insubordinate conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having addressed a letter, dated Cannanore, Jan. 9, to the mily. secy. to govt., Fort St. George, containing amongst other passages the following: "Superior authority has been pleased to order me not to absent myself from the officers' mess dinner."

"I now beg respectfully to submit the nature of my complaint.

First.—That the personal rights, privileges, and liberties of an English subject, which I have brought with me to this country, have been invaded by the above acts, inasmuch as superior authority has interfered with, and brought within the range of military discipline, my mode of life and domestic habits by subjecting me to the abovementioned very heavy penalty for taking my meal in conformity with such mode of life and habits as I find from experience to be most conducive to my benefit.

Secondly.—That in my humble judgment it very far exceeds the power of military authority to interfere with and coerce me in my mode of life, and domestic habits, for these are matters with which even the national law (from which all military authority is derived) abstains from interfering."

Fifthly.—"That I have in vain endeavoured to discover in what respect it forms a part of my military duty to attend the mess dinner table, or what military duty is done there; officers and gentlemen who desire to partake of and pay for it, sit down together to a dinner placed there under contract for them, and the matter, in my humble judgment, must, from its very nature, be left wholly and purely voluntary: that the ordering by superior authority of my attendance on any such occasion as that of taking a meal, at once places the subject's mode of life and habits under military command, which I most respectfully submit cannot be so controlled: for instance, the mess dinner of my regiment at present is never over by eight, post meridian, at which hour it is my habit to retire to rest, and I may choose to retire at an even earlier hour.

Sixthly.—"That my sitting at the mess dinner table merely to see other officers eat their dinner, never touching any part myself, nor having a plate, knife, or fork before me, is (as I feel) exposing an officer to the ridicule of numerous native menials on every occasion of my attendance, and with what benefit to the service, or dignity to superior authority which enforces such interference with the subject's mode of life and habits, I am at a loss to discover."

Second.—For having, at Cannanore, on or about the 3rd of February, 1860, wilfully neglected to obey a regimental order dated May 18, 1859, directing all officers, after drawing pay from the pay-office, to settle their mess bills.

Third.—For conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Cannanore, on or about the 10th of February, 1860, when in attendance at the regimental orderly room for the purpose of explaining why he had neglected to obey the order to pay his regimental mess bill, insubordinately and disrespectfully replied to his regimental commanding officer, Lieut.-col. Charles Ireland, "I will obey all legal orders; I do not owe any mess bill; I refuse to pay any money I do not owe," or words to that effect.

The Court found Capt. Halsted guilty, and sentenced him to be severely reprimanded, but the C. in C. did not confirm the sentence for the following reasons:—

Circumstances connected with this trial induced me to withhold my decision until I was in possession of more full information regarding the case.

Had the Court been aware of the facts which have now come to my knowledge, I believe that Captain Halsted would have been acquitted of criminality on the facts found, and I am satisfied that effect should not be given to these proceedings.

With the sanction of Government, the C. in C. directs the suspension of Capt. C. F. F. Halsted, 11th N.I., from the performance of all military duties until the pleasure of H.M.'s Government shall be known—Capt. Halsted is to be released from arrest and directed to proceed to Madras; and pending a decision on his case he is permitted to reside at the Presidency.

THE DENISON FAMILY.—The Indian Statesman gives some gossiping details regarding the family of Sir W. T. Denison, the Governor elect of Madras. His father, John Denison, was M.P. for Colchester, and died more than forty years ago, leaving nine sons and three daughters. The eldest of the nine is now Speaker of the House of Commons; the second died Bishop of Salisbury; he carried off the highest classical honours at Oxford, where he obtained a reputation as a preacher. The third is the coming Governor. The fourth was also a first-class man at Oxford, and is rather too well-known to the Church as Archdeacon of Taunton. The fifth was a double first man at Oxford. The sixth was distinguished at college, and is now Deputy-Judge Advocate-General. The seventh died early when in the navy. The eighth was his brother's private secretary in Sydney. The ninth, Colonel Denison, is Deputy-Adjutant-General of Madras. Seven of them were Eton boys, four first-class men at Oxford, and one a double first. Sir W. T. Denison is fifty-six years of age; his wife is a daughter of Admiral Sir Phipps Hornby, and he has a large family of sons and daughters.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE DOOM OF THE FIFTH EUROPEANS.

THE news of the second mutiny of the 5th Europeans has been received by all who know India with unfeigned dismay. Every detail of the affair, except the final decision, tends only to increase a justifiable alarm. Unlike the movement of 1859, the mutiny was without a pretext, reasonable or foolish. The men put forward no grievance, claimed no right, asked for no alteration in existing regulations. They simply refused in twos and threes to obey orders or assist their officers in maintaining discipline. One-tenth of the entire regiment in a few weeks brought themselves within the grasp of military law. The regiment was utterly disorganised, not by a fancied grievance, or even by the spread of a general disaffection, but by a spirit of utter lawlessness and mutiny. The young men refused to obey, the old men refused to coerce; the non-commissioned officers refused to betray the existence of combinations utterly fatal to authority and order. When brought to trial the men were punished by sentences utterly inadequate to the offence. Even when open, violent mutiny had displayed itself, the officers, with culpable leniency, recommended a ringleader to mercy. There was an utter laxity, an ignorance of the very first principles of discipline in the conduct of all concerned. The evil was frightfully aggravated by the difficulty of dealing effectually with Europeans. So bad was the spirit of the regiment that it was by no means certain they would stop short of overt resistance to the Executive. To punish all the guilty would have been impossible. English feeling will not bear decimation, and if it would it is not clear that the Queen's troops would have executed the award. To call in native aid would produce an explosion in which the Empire would certainly go down. To dismiss the regiment was to invite every other local corps to follow their example. The men enjoy dismissal, which gives them a free passage to England, a fortnight's "sky" with their sweethearts, and a bounty on re-enlistment. Dismissal without the free passage is an impossible alternative. Sir Hugh Rose alluded feelingly to the horrible scenes which accompanied the march of some of the dismissed soldiery to the seaports, and a regiment let loose in Bengal must, for self-preservation, desolate all around. There remained one solitary alternative, and it was adopted by Sir Hugh Rose. One ringleader was shot. A few others were condemned to sentences which may be remitted when the need of the hour is over, and then the doom of the regiment was pronounced. The corps was cashiered. The non-commissioned officers were reduced to the ranks, the ranks distributed in the regiments serving in the most distant Indian stations. A regiment, in which the Cameronian spirit is strong, and on which, therefore, implicit reliance could be placed, watched the execution of the sentence, and the soldiers, utterly dispirited and unmanned, heard the order in silence, in some instances with tears. The scene will be commented on in every barrack-room in India, and we venture to believe will extinguish at once that spirit of lawlessness rather than disaffection produced by the mutinies of 1857 and the movement of 1859. The one thing necessary to crush that spirit was the certainty that Government had abandoned all idea of compromise. The men who, except their idleness, have scarcely a grievance in the world, are not prepared to risk a collision with the Empire for a whim. They are willing enough to excite alarm, but the instant alarm produces resistance instead of compromise, they will return cheerfully to their accustomed order. The process will be all the quicker, because henceforward the army trusts its Commander-in-Chief. The man who can stamp out a mutiny as it bursts need never fear for the attachment of his soldiers.

Two doubts are very widely expressed as to the wisdom of Sir Hugh Rose's decree. It is asserted that the new recruits will carry to their regiments the seeds of disaffection. They will carry also a lively sense of their powerlessness against the law. Punishment, so it be but just, calms more than it irritates, else where the utility of any penalty save death? It is also remarked that the officers are, at least, as much to blame as the men. That is not quite certain. There never were, we believe, on earth such a set as the Company's recruits of 1857 and 1858. The proportion of actual criminals, men who had been in prison, startled and confounded their officers. Moreover, even if the officers did neglect their duty, open punishment would be most impolitic. It would lead directly in all similar cases to an effort to hush up the conduct of the men. That disposition is too strong already, and to have added a new and personal motive for concealment to the existing esprit de corps would have been to risk the future of the army. Sir Hugh Rose has, we believe, mingled a wise moderation with his severity, and the best hope for the Indian army is the fact that it has for once a statesman as well as a soldier at its head.

THE RESULTS OF THE CHINA WAR.

THE third China war is at an end, and it is time to examine our relations for the future with the empire we have chastised. All the details of the new treaty have not been forwarded to Europe, but enough is known to render the opinion of the public definite. There can be no doubt that the war has ratified effectually the provisions of the treaty of Tien-tsin. All China is open by law to British commerce. All Christians are free by law to exercise their faith, and make proselytes, if they can. All complaints are moreover certain for the future to reach the Imperial ear. Apparently the war has been most successful, and as it has cost little, and has developed the full capacity of the Armstrong gun, Englishmen are perhaps justified in throwing up their caps in honour of the statesmanlike firmness of Lord Elgin. A little consideration may, however, tend to diminish the public satisfaction with these results. We will not lay too much stress on the fact that the war is not over, or its expenditure at an end till the British army has quitted China. So long as it remains at Tien-tsin, the armament is as costly as if Sir Hope Grant were still occupying the metropolis. There is still the old danger from Chinese treachery, the old difficulty of dealing with an official class who consider that lying is the essence of diplomacy. We will accept for the moment all the results said to be achieved as really achieved, and we still doubt if the war has accomplished the object for which it was really undertaken.

Englishmen want only one thing of China, viz., the liberty accorded them in civilised States. They want freedom to buy and sell, to travel and reside, to import goods, subject only to legal tariffs, and to export produce untaxed except by duties levied for the benefit of the empire. Have they obtained by the new treaty this modicum of liberty? Nominally it is conceded, but we speak of facts, not parchments. Liberty to travel is granted, but can the traveller be seized by any Mandarin who happens to consider him profitable prey? Liberty to reside is granted, but has the resident the slightest security against the extortions practised on every other class? Above all, has the stranger in the interior the slightest guarantee for justice before the law. Without this last proviso, residence will be impossible to foreigners beyond the range of their cannon. The navigation of the Yang-tse Kiang, a privilege in itself worth millions to our trade, is valueless if any Mandarin can prohibit the sale of food, arrest passengers on groundless charges, or keep up the system of annoyance universal in the East. The one great security by which alone Englishmen contrive to live in Turkey—the appointment of Consuls in the interior, with power to decide all cases affecting British subjects—does not appear to have been obtained. Without it all hope of active commerce with the interior must once more be postponed. No European can contend with the infinite chicanery, perjury, and oppression of an Asiatic tribunal. Still less can trade prosper in the face of the interminable obstacles to rapid justice a clever Mandarin is certain to interpose. We need the "capitulations" in China as much as in Turkey, and it is not yet clear that the capitulations have been secured. That is the one essential to our commercial prosperity in China.

For political objects England needs, we fear, another and a different concession. Our action in China is always hampered by distance from the centres of our power. Compulsion is a process so expensive that it can be resorted to only once in a generation. Yet it is only by occasional compulsion that we can hope to maintain in the Tartar bureaucracy a sense of the expediency of keeping faith. To make that compulsion easy we need a point d'appui near enough to allow of instantaneous action, and secure enough to be maintained without too formidable a garrison. Hong Kong is utterly useless as a stronghold. The steamy marsh destroys our soldiers. The awful profligacy rampant in the native town cripples the efficiency of the fleet. The place is too small, too hot, and too thoroughly demoralised for an important garrison. Shanghai is better, but at Shanghai we have no territory, and are brought face to face with the swarming population. What is required is, an island far enough from the coast to isolate our administration, and near enough to serve as a basis for rapid and cheap operations. From the commencement of our difficulties with China the island of Chusan has been pointed out as the true locality for a British settlement. It is large enough to maintain cavalry, just populous enough to give us the indigenous aid we require, and near enough to be a perpetual bridle on the tendencies of the mandarins. Once in the possession of that island the British would stand in a position of recognised authority in Eastern Asia, China, and Japan, the Archipelago, and the Russian settlements on the coast of the Yellow Sea would be equally accessible from Chusan. The whale fishery, now almost abandoned to the Americans, might again be prosecuted from its harbours, and a strong European settlement living in full security on its highlands would develop British trade and British influence through the almost untouched regions of the farthest East. Chusan is again to be given up, yet until some such point d'appui has been obtained, it will be in the power of the Mandarins at any hour to drag ships we can ill spare, and soldiers we need at home, to the furthest corner of Asia. England, perhaps, needs no more territory, but it needs still less a repetition of Chinese campaigns.

"SI MONUMENTUM QUÆRIS, CIRCUMSPICE."

PEACE hath its victims as well as war. Another great statesman has been cut off in the prime of manhood, and in the full enjoyment of his mental faculties. Within the space of a few months it has been our painful duty to record the death of Sir Henry Ward and of Mr. James Wilson, and now we are called upon to pay the tribute of sorrow to the memory of one far greater than these. The Marquis of Dalhousie has already closed a career distinguished by great achievements and bright with still greater promise for the future. Dying before the completion of his forty-eighth year, he has left a name that will be remembered as long as the present century shall dwell in the memory of men. When not yet thirty-six years of age he was deemed worthy to guide the destinies of one hundred and fifty millions of human beings, and he proved himself worthy of the trust that was confided in him. For eight years he stood at his arduous post, never flinching from danger or responsibility, strong in his conscientiousness of rectitude, and unshaken even by disease. To Lord Dalhousie is due the completion of the mighty edifice founded by the genius of Warren Hastings, and built up by the daring sagacity of the Marquis of Wellesley. He has been fortunate, too, in his annalist, for his own pen has chronicled the chief incidents of his administration. The very simplicity of his style gives force and pointedness to his narrative. The events and public acts he had to record, were so astounding and magnificent, that no artificial combination of words could have embellished their importance. Who would paint the Taj, or gild a Pyramid?

Leaving England at a time when "there prevailed universal conviction among public men at home that permanent peace had at length been secured in the East," Lord Dalhousie had not long held the reins of government when the second Sikh war broke out in all its fury. Formidable in themselves, the Sikhs became yet more terrible through their alliance with their old enemies, the Mahomedan tribes of Afghanistan. A severe struggle ensued, but it terminated in the annexation of the Punjab and the retreat of the Affghans to their mountain fastnesses. For the next two years the Governor-general, undisturbed by the clash of arms, matured his great schemes for the development of the resources of the country and for the awakening of the native mind. But "the drum's discordant sound" again made itself heard, and war was waged a second time against the Empire of Ava. The result was the annexation of the kingdom of Pegu, and the utter overthrow of the most arrogant and overweening race in the far East. These great deeds of arms bore their natural fruit in the respectful and deferring attitude of the rulers of Nepal, Cashmere, and Cabul. Nor did other territorial aggrandisements fail to follow. "By simple lapse, in the absence of all legal heirs," the kingdom of Nagpore, the principality of Sattara, and the chiefship of Jhansi came into the possession of the British Government, while the province of Berar and other districts were ceded by his Highness the Nizam in settlement of all claims against his State. Lastly, the kingdom of Oude was "assumed in perpetual government for the Hon. E.I. Company." The "Company" did not, indeed, long survive to enjoy this assumption in perpetuity, though probably they might have done so had they fairly carried out the policy traced and inaugurated by the master-hand of the Marquis of Dalhousie. Had Oude been treated as the Punjab was originally treated, no rebellion would have been possible. In vain did the noble Marquis write home for European troops. His applications for means were unheeded, while he was not the less expected to execute his vast projects. Whether the appropriation of the kingdom of Oude was strictly justifiable or otherwise is not now the question, but it is certain that it might have been effected without any outbreak had the home Government properly supported their representative in Calcutta. It was by no means necessary to occupy Oude with an European force equal to that which held the Punjab. Three regiments of British soldiers would have sufficed to overawe the disaffected, and have given time for the consolidation of the government and the perfect incorporation of the province as an integral portion of our Indian empire. And is it just or wise to blame the absorbing policy of Lord Dalhousie when it is to the annexation of the Punjab that we are mainly indebted for the preservation of northern, and therefore of all India?

With regard to Lord Dalhousie's internal administration there can scarcely be two opinions. On one point only did he err; and there, it must be admitted, he erred greatly. We allude, of course, to his financial operations, which tended more than anything else to lessen public faith in the integrity and honour of the British Government. With this sole exception, it is difficult to mention the great works that illustrated the rule of the noble Marquis without breaking forth into a rhapsody. Let it suffice, then, to enumerate the vast and various improvements introduced into the interior economy of our Indian empire.

The public revenue increased from twenty-six millions sterling in 1847-48 to thirty millions in 1855-56, exclusive of Oude. The trade of India in the course of eight years was doubled. Measures of reform were instituted in the different departments of Government. Prison discipline and education received a large and enlightened consideration. Railway communication was furthered in every possible way. Within a very brief space of time electric telegraph lines were extended over upwards of four thousand miles. A cheap uniform rate of postage was established. The cultivation of tea, the growth of cotton, and the general improvement of agriculture were promoted and encouraged. The preservation and renewal of forests received much attention, and steps were taken to render available the mineral resources of the country. Canals, both of navigation and irrigation, were pushed forward with energy, and practical measures were adopted for the improvement of the chief seaports. Hundreds of miles of excellent road were made, numerous bridges constructed, and colleges for civil engineering founded in the different presidencies. These are some of the leading incidents that characterised the government of the late Marquis, and which entitle him to the gratitude of his fellow-countrymen, and to the admiration of posterity. He has been cut off in the very zenith of his powers, but it may truly be said of him as of another and less eminent man, that "his life was too short for friendship, but not for fame."

THE LATE LIEUTENANT ANDERSON.

The melancholy circumstances attending the death of this young and gallant officer in China having excited a more than usual regret and sympathy among all classes, we feel happy to be able to give the following sketch of his short but eventful career;—

Robert Burn Anderson, the second son of Mr. John Anderson, merchant in Glasgow, was born in Glasgow on the 14th of October, 1833, and had consequently not reached twenty-seven years of age when he died. He was educated in the Collegiate School and in the University of his native city, and on receiving a cadetship repaired to the Indian College of Addiscombe. In this military school he remained two years, and, after having passed excellent examinations and received the very highest testimonials for his exemplary conduct and soldierlike qualities, proceeded to India. On arriving in Bombay he was temporarily attached to the 29th Native Infantry, then at Surat, and was shortly afterwards posted to the 1st Bombay Fusiliers, one of the oldest and most distinguished regiments in the Presidency. A portion of the regiment being ordered to Aden he accompanied and remained with them at that station rather more than a year; and thereafter joined the rest of the Fusiliers at Kurrachee, where they were stationed until the outbreak of the Indian mutiny. He was not long in this garrison before, by his correct conduct and assiduous attention to his military duties, he attracted the attention of his superior officers, and was appointed by General Scott, then commanding the station, to be his aide-de-camp. On the outbreak of the mutiny the regiment was immediately ordered to Moultan, and after two days' residence at this place, Lieutenant Anderson was sent to Meeran Meer, as Quartermaster, and on arrival at this latter station was appointed Adjutant of the left wing of his regiment. He continued to serve in this capacity at Ferozepore and Umritsir, and while at the former place, on the occasion of the mutiny of a native regiment, greatly distinguished himself. On rejoining the head-quarters of the regiment at Moultan, he found his name in general orders, and the day following was appointed by the Indian Government Brigade-major of Hodson's Horse, so well known for their eminent services at Delhi, under their gallant chief, Major Hodson. This appointment, having been obtained without personal application or interest of any kind, reflects the highest credit on the manner in which he had discharged his duties while serving with the Fusiliers. Travelling by forced stages he joined Colonel Daly, commanding Hodson's Horse, in Oude, and by the ability which he displayed in arranging the accounts, rendered eminent service to the corps and redeemed large sums which would otherwise have been entirely lost to Government. With one of the regiments of Hodson's Horse he served for some time on the Nepal frontier, endeavouring to entrap the Nana Sahib, and was then ordered with the regiment to Fyzabad, where he anticipated being stationed for some considerable time. Shortly afterwards, however, he was obliged to repair to Lucknow, where he spent some time in disbanding the 3rd Regiment of the brigade; and as by the reorganisation of the corps the appointment which he held was done away with, he volunteered to go to China, and very soon received orders to join Fane's Horse as adjutant, then at Calcutta, on the eve of departing with the expeditionary forces under Sir Hope Grant. With this dashing regiment he continued to serve till the period of his death, with the particulars of which the public are already too familiar. Throughout his whole career Lieutenant Anderson has exhibited the high and honourable characteristics of a soldier and a gentleman. He was at once a brave and dashing officer, and an active and a prudent administrator—qualities which would assuredly have gained for him, before the lapse of many years, a prominent place in the British army.—Glasgow Herald.

Mr. BOURDILLON.—The local journals say the health of Mr. Bourdillon, Secretary to the Madras Government, is such that he is about to retire from the service. We regret this. Mr. Bourdillon has distinguished himself throughout his long revenue and secretariat career as a hard working, honest official, with more than average ability. Except during Sir C. Trevelyan's brief reign he has been for many years "the Government" of Madras. He would have worthily represented the presidency in the Legislative Council. Mr. Sim is spoken of as his successor in the Secretariat.

MILITARY and NAVAL EDUCATION.

A MARRIED CLERGYMAN, resident at Brighton, RECEIVES a limited number of PUPILS, between the ages of Twelve and Fifteen, who may be destined for the Military and Naval Professions. With a view to this ultimate object, the entire course of Study, from the outset, is regulated expressly in conformity with the requirements of the Examinations at Addiscombe, Sandhurst, Woolwich, and Portsmouth; and every care is taken to direct special attention to those subjects likely to prove professionally useful in the future career of the Naval or Military officer. The Pupils are examined periodically in Mathematics by Professor J. R. YOUNG, formerly of Belfast College, and Author of "A Course of Mathematics, Pure and Mixed, for the Use of Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations," &c.; and also in Classics and Modern Languages by Scholars of repute. Prospectuses may be had of Messrs. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street, London.

EDUCATION.—SEA-SIDE, DOVER.

The Rev. MARTIN REED, assisted by two resident Tutors (University Graduates), RECEIVES TWENTY-FIVE PUPILS. THE HOME SCHOOL is particularly suited for those who require individual and careful treatment.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 10s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAWULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo, bound, price 5s.

MAP of INDIA; from the most recent Authorities, showing the railways and telegraphs. On two sheets—Size, 2 ft. 10 in. wide; 3 ft. 3 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 1s.

Preparing for publication, in One Volume Octavo,

BY J. R. YOUNG,

(Late Professor of Mathematics, Belfast College),

A COURSE OF MATHEMATICS,
PURE AND MIXED,

More especially designed for the Use of Candidates for the MILITARY & CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

1. ALGEBRA, TRIGONOMETRY, AND MENSURATION.
2. ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY (CONIC SECTIONS), STATICS, DYNAMICS, AND HYDROSTATICS.
3. THE DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL CALCULUS with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c., &c.

The object of this work is to furnish Candidates for the Military and Civil Service Examinations with such a practical knowledge of Pure and Mixed Mathematics as may prove most serviceable to them in the course of the ordeal to which they are about to be subjected. On such occasions a mere theoretical acquaintance with principles is by no means sufficient. It is also necessary that the young aspirant should have been trained by actual experiments, as it were, to the application of the abstract rules, the enunciation of which he has otherwise mastered only by an effort of memory. To assist him in this gathering the fruits of his intellectual industry, Mr. J. R. Young has devised a multitude of problems, of greater or less difficulty, in Algebra, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Analytical Geometry (Conic Sections), Statics, Dynamics, Hydrostatics, the Differential and Integral Calculus, with their applications to the Higher Geometry, Mechanics, &c. The chief peculiarity of this work, however, is one that will recommend it to a very large class of students. The most difficult questions are rendered comparatively easy, by the practical simplifications that are introduced in their mode of solution. Instead of a pompous and puzzling display of technical phraseology, the utmost care has been taken to explain the most knotty points in a plain, unaffected manner, intelligible to every ordinary capacity. In this respect, Mr. Young's "Course of Mathematics" will be found to possess a decided superiority over all preceding works on the same subject.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "CURIOSITIES OF WAR."

Preparing for early Publication in Monthly Parts, price One Shilling, with fac-simile Illustrations printed in Colours.

AND

HOW THEY WERE WON

BY THOMAS CARTER,

Author of "Curiosities of War, and Military Studies."

"What is a ribbon worth to a soldier?"

SIR E. B. LYTTON, Bart.

No general history of these Distinctions having been yet attempted, it is considered that a Work which shall afford a clear insight into the circumstances under which such Honours were gained is likely to be received with favour by the public, when accompanied by fac-similes printed in colours of the Medals and Ribbons, and interspersed with notices of Regimental and Individual Acts of Heroism, and Military Statistics of an interesting character.

In order to render this National Work generally accessible it will be published in three Sections, of about five Parts each, commencing with the Crimean Campaign; dedicated by permission to Major General the Hon. Sir James Yorke Scarlett, K.C.B., Adjutant General of Her Majesty's Forces; to be followed, should the effort meet with encouragement, by the remaining two portions, the one comprising the Services enumerated in the General Order of the 1st June, 1847, from the Campaign in Egypt in 1801, to the Battle of Waterloo; the concluding Section being devoted to the Campaigns in India, China, &c., from 1799 to the suppression of the Indian Mutiny. Dedicated by permission to General Lord Clyde, G.C.B., &c., &c.

When completed the series will form a handsome volume, elegantly illustrated, which will contain a record of unsurpassed Military Prowess; and it is anticipated that such an attempt to perpetuate the memory of the brave, by bringing together the gallant deeds of officers and men, will meet with patronage from a public so deeply indebted to, and interested in, the proud achievements of the British Army.

MUMFORD'S CONCENTRATED
Cordial Essence of JAMAICA GINGER.

The Cordial Essence, which is now taken in preference to all other preparations of Ginger, not only from its agreeable flavour, but from the value and certainty of its effects, will be found most useful in all cases of indigestion, spasms, heartburn, diarrhoea, irritability of the bowels, and in most nervous affections. To invalids suffering with impaired digestion from long residence in warm climates, and to those who are proceeding to India, this preparation cannot be too strongly recommended.

Prepared only by GEORGE MUMFORD, Chemist, 5, Bathurst-street, Hyde-park-gardens, and sold by all Chemists, in bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each; also in large stoppered bottles, for foreign use, at 21s.

NO ICE REQUIRED to produce common Ice, Dessert Ices, to Ice Wines, &c., in SIMPSON'S NEW PATENT FREEZING VASE.—This Apparatus is, without exception, the most efficacious, simple, and portable ever produced. By using the Patentee's Freezing Powder, Dessert Ices and Common Ice can be frozen by the most inexperienced, in a few minutes, on the table, or in an invalid's apartment. Residents and travellers in hot climates will find it invaluable, as it produces that luxury—Ice!—at command, and only occupies the space of an ordinary hat-case.

Prices: one pint, Four Guineas; three pints, Five Guineas. Freezing Powder, 3s. per cwt. Freezing Pots, Ice Moulds &c., &c.

SODA-WATER, &c.—Use the "Seltzogene" (solely of one piece of glass), the only portable apparatus that has the patronage of the medical profession, who recommend it for making pure Soda-water and Aromatic Beverages. Metallic impregnation is avoided, there is no leakage, and it is not affected by hot climates.

Prices: two pints, 23s.; three pints, 30s.; five pints, 42s. Powders (forty charges in box), 8s., 10s., and 16s. each. References and descriptive catalogues sent free.

PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ANTIRHEUMATIC CHAIN-BANDS FOR SELF-APPLICATION.—Unequalled and certain as are the effects of the Chain-Bands in all kinds of Rheumatic Pains, still more remarkable and speedy is the relief they afford in Neuralgia, Tic Dolorieux, Head and Toothache, &c. Even the most inveterate cases of Paralysis, Epilepsy, Deafness, Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago, Indigestion, Nervous Debility, &c., disappear in a comparatively short time. Prospectuses, recording a vast number of private cures and extracts from numbers of scientific works, sent free. Chain-Bands, 5s., 10s., 15s., 22s., according to power.

J. L. PULVERMACHER and Co., 73, Oxford-street, adjoining the Princess's Theatre, London, and all Chemists.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—CONVULSIONS—FITS—EPILEPSY.—These attacks, common to all ages and all seasons, cannot be neglected without danger to intellect or life. Epilepsy, especially, requires prompt treatment, as it springs from a scrofulous state of the habit, which can only with certainty be removed in early life. For curing this terrible class of diseases, Holloway's remedies have held an enviable notoriety for more than a quarter of a century. The Ointment should be rubbed twice daily over the stomach and spine, as perseveringly as salt is rubbed in meat. At the same time Holloway's Pills should be freely taken in doses to act energetically on the bowels, so that the system generally may be thoroughly cleansed.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.
JUDGED BY THE IMMENSE DEMAND, this UNIVERSAL REMEDY now stands the first in public favour and confidence; this result has been acquired by the test of fifty years' experience. These Lozenges may be found on sale in every British Colony, and throughout India and China. They have been highly esteemed wherever introduced. For COUGHS, ASTHMA, and all affections of the Throat and Chest, they are the most agreeable and efficacious remedy.

Prepared and Sold in Boxes and Tins of various sizes, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London. Sold Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the world.

N.B. To prevent spurious imitations, please to observe that the words "KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES" are engraved on the Government Stamp of each Box, without which none are genuine.

DELICACY OF THE LUNGS.
MR. JEFFREY'S RESPIRATORS.

SUFFERERS from Disorders in the Organs of Respiration are warned of the fact, unquestionably true, that without the aid of RESPIRATORS, rightly employed, it is not possible that justice can be done to their cases; and that the only real Respirators being those for which this name was introduced by the original inventor, Mr. JEFFREYS, it is in the last degree imprudent to place any reliance on spurious articles assuming the name.

Wholesale Agency for "MR. JEFFREY'S RESPIRATOR," Mr. WILLIAM TWEDDIE, 337, Strand, London, W.C.

Agents in London and all Towns of the Kingdom.
 A List of Prices and Names of Agents, and all other information, sent post-free on receipt of a stamped envelope.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNESIA has been, during twenty-five years, sanctioned by the medical profession and universally accepted by the public as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion. As a mild aperient it is admirably adapted for ladies and children, and it is invaluable in warm climates. Manufactured with the utmost attention to strength and purity by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable chemists throughout the Empire.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many in testimony of its high value.

"Liverpool, August, 1859.
 "I have much pleasure in offering my testimony to the value of your Areca-nut Tooth Paste, and have no hesitation in saying that it is the most efficacious and agreeable Dentifrice ever produced. I have recommended its use to my patients for some years."
 "W. J. NEWMAN,
 "Surgeon-Dentist to the Liverpool Infirmary for Children."

Prepared only by COMMANS, Chemist, Bath, in pots, 2s. each; to be procured of all Chemists, through the Wholesale Agents, Barclay, Edwards, London; Oldham and Co., Dublin; Duncan and Flockhart, Edinburgh.
